

LABOR DISTURBANCES
And Their Effect on the Business Interests of the Country.

MATTHEW MARSHALL'S OPINION
Of the Defeat of the Free Silver Cause Before It Reached

THE BARE POSSIBILITY OF A VETO
SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

NEW YORK, July 17.—The Labor Disturbances is the title of Matthew Marshall's article for to-morrow's issue. It reads as follows:
The most favorable financial incident of the week has unquestionably been the defeat in the House of Representatives of the Senate free coinage bill. It is true that even if the bill had passed the House it would probably have been vetoed by the President; but this was not so reasonably certain as to expect all anxiety on the subject. Political action is so often determined by purely political motives, regardless of statesmanship and patriotism, that the President might possibly have been induced to approve the bill, even though he was convinced of its mischievous character. That he has been snared the necessity of defining his position in regard to it is due to the 90 Strange laws of the House who voted against it, and not to the Democratic majority.

Everybody in this section of the country is too glad, however, that the danger of free silver is averted for the remaining life of this Congress, to inquire closely how the result was reached. As pointed out by Mr. Stierman's bill to repeal so much of the act of July 14, 1890, as to complete the issue of legal tender notes among themselves, of 5,000,000 of five-dollar bills, for the purpose of providing for the issue of the same, and that we shall be spared the humiliation of a national suspension of gold payments.

How close we are drifting to such a suspension under the operation of this act is apparent from the fact that some of the leading banks of this city are already refusing to part with their gold in large amounts. The refusal is defended on the ground of patriotism, but this is an unnecessary subtlety. The banks are not going to give the very plain reason that gold is worth certainly as much as legal tender paper, and they very soon will be worth more. It is all that the banks are bound by contract to pay their depositors, they very properly expect their paper to be worth as much as gold.

Upon the Government falls the burden of doing what the act of July 14, 1890, has proposed by Sherman, will prevent their being suspended in any opinion in a very few months. This is the point which we threaten us and the dread of it more than compensates for the momentary good effect of the defeat of the free silver bill.

Clouds on the Financial Sky.
The financial sky also continues to be clouded by the report of the Homestead, Pa., which I spoke of last Monday as having given occasion for the widespread utterance of sentiments hostile to the owners of capital investing in manufacturing enterprises and by others which have followed them, more violent and yet equally successful in their effect.

At Clair d'Alene, in Idaho, a disagreement between the miners and the mine owners has resulted in a strike. The miners are in preparation, happily not armed, for the wholesale destruction of dynamite in the mines and the striking workmen only the arrival of United States troops has averted further bloodshed. A number of the old building trades.

Sympathy From the Palmit.
In other parts of the country, too, strikes have broken out, which, while of no importance in themselves, are yet indicative of dissatisfaction and ominous of further trouble. To the politicians and professional agitators who have acted as the spokesmen of party sympathy with the striking workmen, the clergy have joined themselves, and the talk of some of them is so amusing, both in its perversion of facts which it embodies, and for its disregard of sound moral principles. These reverend gentlemen evidently have no respect for the old Mosaic precept, "Thou shalt not countenance—or, as the Revised version has it, "Thou shalt not be a partaker in"—and seeing merely poor men on one side of the barricade and rich men on the other, jump to the conclusion that the poor are to be upheld at any cost of truth and justice and the rich men are to be crushed.

The Union Against Non-Unionists.
In other words, there is to be a test of the comparative numbers of union and non-union men in that branch of industry. Both sides are confident of success, and the importance of the result as affecting future legislation is fully estimated by both.

The union and organization of workmen for mutual protection and mutual aid is to be too clearly in the line of progress of modern civilization even to be abolished. It is a part of the modern industrial system which has made society what it is, and which has recently shown itself inconspicuous in the consolidation of railroad corporations and in the combinations of capitalists usually known as trusts. To insist that workmen seeking employment should act only as individuals, while the employers are so completely organized in corporations and trusts, is unreasonable.

On the other hand, employers and society in general have many ill-considered complaints to make against the capricious and tyrannical way in which workmen's unions are often managed, and have a perfectly reasonable reason for resisting their pretension to monopolize the industry of their country, and to exclude non-union laborers from participation in it. Not only do they apply to their non-union competitors the same epithets, such as "scabs," "rats," "black-sheeps," "lion" workers, and the like, but they do them bodily harm, as they have done at the Clair d'Alene mines, and as they threatened to do at Homestead, had they not been restrained by the military.

Seeking an Impossibility.
This is the weak point of the labor unions, and until it is remedied they cannot hope for complete success. So far, too, as they aim at adjusting the supply of labor to the demand for it that there shall never be any reduction of wages and never any labor without employment, they are seeking to accomplish an impossibility.

There has never yet been a time in the history of the world when trade was uniformly prosperous and when there was a supply for every man without exception. Our country has been wonderfully favored in this respect, but we have no right to be proud of its prosperity since it is interrupted. To the industrial increase of our population we have added yearly half a million of immigrants from foreign countries, and they have all, thus far, found enough to do to be content with at least from dying of starvation. In view of this great fact we can afford to be patient with occasional disturbances like those which now occupy public attention, and I will, without anxiety, their natural and peaceful settlement.

Great Increase of Immigration.
WASHINGTON, July 17.—The Chief of the Bureau of Statistics reports that the number of immigrants arrived at the ports of the United States from the principal foreign countries, except from the Dominion of Canada and Mexico, during the month ended June 30, 1922, was 63,317, six months ended June 30, 1921, 55,961; same period in 1921, 55,961; twelve months ended June 30, 1921, 619,820; same period for 1921, 555,496.

DEATH PREFERRED TO LIFE
In a Country Where General Weaver Couldn't Be Elected President.
SAN ANTONIO, TEX., July 17.—[Special.]—Sixty years of age, bent with toil, possessing a farm of 400 fertile acres and a bank account of $12,000, not in debt a cent on earth, and with everything to make his declining years pleasant, Joseph Leaver, of Kimball county, placed a pistol in his mouth this morning and pulled the trigger. His face was not at all disfigured, and the bullet broke his neck. He leaves a wife and five children to inherit his fortune, which is about $100,000.

Six months ago he became a member of the People's party and ordered all literature bearing on the sub-treasury question that he bought. He attended several Alliance picnics and wished to speak, but the hired orators for the occasion always had the first word. He became locally noted as an advocate of the third party doctrine, and a friend, who spoke feelingly of the dead man's virtues, and at the conclusion ascended the pyre with the torch and ignited the wood. The other torch-bearers stopped and set fire to the pile, and from the four corners flames shot upward. Wallace and Rice then came forward and recited a roudon beginning: "Death's a dear friend to him whose life is blighted."

CREMATED BY A CHICAGO CLUB.
The Remains of a Suicide Club Member Burned With Old Ceremonies.
CHICAGO, July 17.—[Special.]—Morris Allen Collins, President of the Suicide Club of Dallas, Tex., blew out his brains in Chicago about a week ago. He left a peculiar letter addressed to W. C. Thompson, of the Whitechapel Club, in which he bequeathed his body to the club, and ordered that after the body had been dissected it be cremated. The body was dissected, the brain was removed and the doctors satisfied that he had died sane. Then the body was turned over to the club for burning. The funeral pyre was built on the shore of Lake Michigan, just over the Indiana line. The procession filed slowly around the pyre three times, the mourners walking two by two and chanting the Whitechapel songs. Then the body of Collins was placed on the pyre. Chaplain Thompson delivered a brief address, consigning the body to the flames. Then the chaplain's place was taken by the chief mourner, Collins' Indian friend, who spoke feelingly of the dead man's virtues, and at the conclusion ascended the pyre with the torch and ignited the wood. The other torch-bearers stopped and set fire to the pile, and from the four corners flames shot upward. Wallace and Rice then came forward and recited a roudon beginning: "Death's a dear friend to him whose life is blighted."

TELEGRAPH MUST PAY LICENSE.
An Important Suit Won by the City of Philadelphia Against the Postal.
PHILADELPHIA, July 17.—In the suit of the city of Philadelphia against the Bankers and Merchants' Telegraph Company and the Postal Telegraph Company of New York to recover license fees for poles and wires erected in this city by the respective companies, Referee Robert Sturgis filed a report in New York yesterday in favor of the city.

The referee says that the fees were used to have the poles regularly constructed for the safety of pedestrians. He decided that the companies should pay Philadelphia fees amounting to $11,800 for the years from 1885 to 1892.

Cornelius Vanderbilt's Close Call.
MANCHESTER-BY-SEA, MASS., July 17.—[Special.]—Cornelius Vanderbilt and his guest, Rev. Mr. Green, had a narrow escape from death by the cars this morning. Green was to go to preach at Emanuel Church, and was driving there with Mr. Vanderbilt, in the latter's carriage. Just as the horse reached the railroad crossing near Sunset Rock a train dashed up. Mr. Vanderbilt called to his coachman to stop, but the coachman could not do so in safety, and lashed his horse with the whip. The animal sprang forward and cleared the track just in time to save the wheels from the coupler.

MAD AT MISSIONARIES.
Late Details of the Anti-Christian War in the Chinese Empire

WORSE THAN ANY YET REPORTED.
The Vildest Literature Imaginable Now in Circulation
AGAINST ALL RELIGIOUS WORKERS

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.
SAN FRANCISCO, July 17.—The steamer City of Peking arrived today, bringing some later news of the anti-missionary excitement in China. A letter from Chinan Fu of May 28 says:

The threatened disturbances in Kuahsein have been checked for a time. The Taoist went to the district in person, with soldiers, and the mob of ruffians hearing of his approach fled. A Taoist priest who had been a leader in all the attacks on the Roman Catholic missions was seized and will be beheaded. The little Chinese temple which was built upon the ground where once a Christian chapel stood has been torn down, and the property returned to the missionaries. Whether the native Christians dare to return is unknown.

On the eve of this victory for the Christians came an unhappy lawsuit by an Italian priest against the Protestant missionaries in a small place to the east. The case comes here for trial. A Protestant who went over to the Catholics is trying to get possession of a chapel in which he formerly held services, and the priest is aiding him. Finally, the priest besought the Governor's aid.

Damaging to All Missions.
An American missionary tried vainly to make a compromise, but, hearing the case had been reported to the Governor, he presented a protest. Such warfare between Christians hurts all missionary prestige in China.

From Nanking the news comes that reports of the capture of Chinese by foreign missionaries, the gouging out of eyes, etc., are prevalent and are really believed by all classes. There is no open opposition to foreign missionaries, but the officials place every obstacle in their way, and it is suspected, secretly and in the spreading of vile anti-Christian literature, which is mainly responsible for all the trouble. A specimen of this is found in the purchase by missionaries of a piece of land three years ago. Every step in the negotiation has been clogged, and finally a few days ago, when the deed was ready, it was found to lack stamps, and none were to be found nearer than the capital.

Some of the Threats Made.
Meanwhile, a well-known member of the literati pasted a beautifully-worded placard, declaring if this land were transferred to the foreign devils the people would rise, burn the missions and kill the Christians. This may be mere talk, but how much protection foreigners would receive from officials may be judged from the fact that they permitted a German poster to read: "The fifth of the anti-Christian treaties in Hunan, as well as their author, Chow Han, writes to the Shanghai, New that Chow Han is a traitor, and that he is a member of the Taoist priest. His insanity was mere pretense to save the authorities from arresting and punishing him. It is estimated that 200 of these illustrated pamphlets have been issued. Many of the cuts no pen would have the hardihood to describe. Every objectionable Chinese literature, rich as it is, has no parallel for them.

The authorities wink at the distribution of this vile literature. The editor of the Japan Gazette, who has examined some of the pamphlets, says: "If the Government continues to permit their circulation these Hunan tracts will be a blot upon the Celestial Empire which ages will not efface."

At Changking and Ichang some mysterious plague is carrying off thousands of the people. The doctors are in charge of the district, but only with their long strings of blank cartridges to drive off the demons of the air who are supposed to bring pestilence.
