Effect of Hot Weather Upon Attendance at City Churches.

THE SEASON FOR CAMPMEETINGS. Topics for Sermons in Pittsburg and

Allegheny Pulpita. GLEANINGS FROM CHURCH FIELDS

The hot weather has caused a marked diminution in the attendance at city churches, not altogether been made up by increased numbers at rural and seaside temples. Many pastors have followed their flocks in search of cooler temperature, purer air and rest. This has resulted in the pretty general adoption of holding but one service each Sunday-in the morning. On the other hand, open air services in groves and campmeetings in the country are proving attractive and are drawing large audi-

World's Fair Commissioner Mission From His Usual Haunts. COLUMBUS, O., July 22 .- [Special.]-

Colonel C. F. Knowlton, World's Fair Commissioner for Ohio, has departed, and various people and firms in Columbus now mourn his loss. He came here in January as the agent of the World's Fair Co-operative Bureau, and engaged for a typewriter, Miss Annie Miller, of Anderson, Ind., an accomplished brunette of 20. Knowlton tell in love with her, and recently she con-sented, if he could secure her parents' con-

Knowlton, by representing that he would deed Miss Miller 20 Chicago lots, induced the parents to consent. Knowlton sent $20 to the girl, with the request that she meet to the girl, with the request that she meet him at Elwood, Ind., and marry him there. The young lady having found out some of the Colonel's peculiar business transactions returned the money and refused to marry him. Knowlton has gone, nobody knows where, in debt to everybody.

WAS BADLY USED UP.

John Cunningham Could Not Tell a Straight Story.

A young man about 19 years old and suffering from severe injuries was brought to the Southside Hospital last evening. He could give little account of himself, but said his name was John Cunningham, and that he lived at Washington, Pa.

When questioned as to how he received his injuries, which included a broken nose, a fractured knee and many bruises and scratches, he said he had been at Six Mile Ferry and had slipped and fallen over a steep embankment. His story did not hang together very well, and the opinion seemed to prevail that he had been fighting. He talked very little, and the case is still a mystery.

OPPOSITION AT BHARPSBURG

To the Manchester Traction Company En tering the Town.

A special meeting of Sharpsburg Couneil will be held this evening to consider the application of the Millvale, Etna and Sharpsburg electric line for rights of way through the borough. It will probably be an interesting meeting, as there is considerable opposition to the tracks being laid on certain streets. A remonstrance, numer-ously signed, is to be presented on behalf of the property holders.

BOGUS PARTY CLUBS.

How Organized Strikers Work in the Devious Political Field.

CORPOR

THEIR METHODS QUITE SIMPLE. Suspicious Pehavior on the Eve of the Important Elections.

LEGITIMATE ORGANIZATIONS SUFFER

NEW YORK, July 22.- A Presidental year, so-called, is the season of richest arvest for the managers of campaign clubs, the genuine and the spurious. The former can be described as an assemblage of earnest and interested persons of either political party who design to promote the success of candidates by whatever method seems to them to be most desirable. Some believe in the efficacy of speeches and debates; others in fireworks, music and parades; others in mass meetings, and others in the maintenance of a clubroom for social intercourse, the interchange of views and the formation of friendships, which tend to bind the members together by a common political purpose. As a general thing the most active members of genuine campaign clubs are officeholders or aspirants for official station, and the genuine clubs are valuable auxiliaries to a party, especially in a long campaign. The method of establishing a fake campaign club is very simple. Three or four young men, usually between the ages of 19 and 25, and well known in the neighbor hood where they live, arrange with the proprietor of a barroom, who agrees to give them the free use of his first floor under the condition that they and their friends will patronize no other barroom.

How the Clubroom Is Furnished. Then a chowder party, a picnic or a sumner night's excursion is organized, with the object of procuring money enough to furnish the clubroom. Tickets are sold to the nish the clubroom. Thekets are sold to the politicians and tradesmen in the neighborhood, and, after the expenses of the chowder or excursion have been paid, a sufficient surplus remains to equip the room. Then a transparency is ordered, and on it are painted the names of the candidates to be supported by a majority of the members, not all of whom are voters. The club takes its name usually from its most active organizer, whose knowledges of politics is ganizer, whose knowledge of politics is derived from his labors on election day as the employe at the rate of $5 from sunrise to sundown of some candidate.

It is customary to give a house warming, and the politicians are sought sgain for contributions to a fund for the purchase of beer, liquor and cigars. If the campaign club be organized on a scale larger than the average, a banner raising, toward the ex-pense of which more subscriptions are needed, succeeds the house warming. As a rule, however, there is no banner raising, the leaders of the club applying their energies to getting more members. A nom-inal fee is charged, but by common consent payment is not obligatory.

Where the Clubs Are in Clover. The club, once under way, has 50 or 60 members. Many of them join from no desire to advance the interests of the party or the candidates, but to have some place where, at small expense, they may meet young men of the neighborhood who are employed like themselves during the day. The presence of 20 or 30 members of the club each evening means a trade of $3 to $5 in the barroom, the profit of which is con-siderably more than could be secured for the room if rented otherwise.

Toward the close of the summer, and when the season of parades and marching opens, the members of the spurious campaign club are in clover. Uniforms are supplied to them, and for so much a head they march in the ranks of the torchlight processions. There is always a generous supply of liquid refreshments at the end of and party feeling runs high, eigars are dis-tributed also. The members of the club, besides taking part in the parades, attend the big mass meetings.

The clubrooms are visited from time to time by the lieutenants of the party leaders in the vicinity, and everything appears to be going swimmingly until about two weeks before election, when the vigor and activity of partisans should be almost at high-water mark. At about that time the rumble of discord may be heard with recriminations between the officers. Alleged Discords Turned to Account, The attitude of the club, not doubtful before, begins to be subjected to disagreeable hints and unconcealed reproaches. A screw seems to be loose somewhere, and soon afterward a meeting of the club is called to take action on the situation as it presents itself, respecting the indorsement and support of local candidates. The politicians who have contributed to the chowder party. who have contributed to the chowder party, the transparency, the banner raising, the parades and the current expenses of the club are asked for a contribution, larger than any preceding, for ball tickets or for an entertainment that has been advertised to take place in a public hall between the day of election and the night of Thanks-asy of election and the light of Thanksgiving.

If the spurious campaign club has preserved up to that point the semblance of harmony and discipline, the returns are satisfactory usually. If, on the other hand, the club appears to be rent by discordant and antagonistic elements, the harvest is light, and the proceeds of the ticket sales do not find their way into the treasury: they get no further than the pocktreasury; they get no further than the pockets of the venders.

On the night when the club is called to meet for the purpose of taking action about local candidates, its attitude toward national State nominees having been defined suffi-ciently, the chief organizer usually dep-recates any formal action. He counsels a postponement. He suggests the appoint-ment of a small committee, with himself as Strikers Working at Cross Purposes, He intimates that it might be well to see in turn the leaders of the parties and fac-tions before doing anything rash or commit-ting the club to any hasty act or utterance. That proposition is acceptable after some opposition, and the head of the club, transformed into a "striker," endeavors to barter the support of his associates for his own benefit. He does not succeed usually, but his failure is not attributable to any lack of trying, but is caused by the fact that several of his associates, each on his own hook, are engaged in the same task.

For several days before the date fixed for the adjourn meeting of the club for action on this report of the committee there action on this report of the committee there are rumblings of discontent and threats of reprisal. The meeting is disorderly. No agreement is reached. In the confusion the proprietor of the barroom appears usually and presents a bill for rent. The liability is, of course, disputed, but among those who have "held up the bar" frequently he gets support, and the outcome of the controversy is that the proprietor the presents of the controversy. is that the proprietor takes possession of the furniture, in lieu of rent, and the clubroom

Before the morning of election day the campaign club is a thing of the past. On election day the former President may be seen in the service of one of the parties as a worker at the polls. A few of the members get election day employment from the politicians; a majority do not.

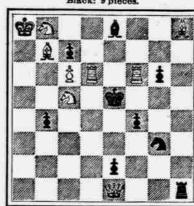

organization—the non-contributing and non-managing members—have had a place "to hang out in," as the saying is, and have had a good deal of fun besides at the lowest possible cost. The people of the neighbor-hood have listened to strains of music and admired fireworks No one, except the politicians who can well afford such a burden, has lost anything on account of the existence of the campaign club. At the same time the interests paign club. At the same time the interess of a party have been aided very slightly by the fake club, and the loyalty and service-ableness of the genuine club has been, to some extent, discredited and impugned.

The Work of the Club Summed Up.
Summed up, this is the result of the fake club's efforts: Amounts ranging from $500 to $600 have been distributed in installments among the half dozen members who originated it.

The President has a winter overcoat and the Secretary has a cane. The keeper of the barroom has had his room tenanted during two months of aummer and two months of autumn, and he has in his possession the furniture of the club, a transparency, and some uniforms. The quarterly meeting of the Baltimore Chess Association was July II, and, considering the season, was remarkably well attended. It was decided to hold the annual bay excursion shortly, and to begin a summer tour tournament on the 18th to last three months.

PITTSBURG INVITED

To Send a Delegate From the Chamber of Commerce to Europe to Discuss the Tariff, the Wage Question and the Employment of Women.

George A. Kelly, President of the Chan ber of Commerce, yesterday received a letter from L. Strauss, President of the International League of Commercial Liberty, asking for the appointment of a delegate to a convention to be held in Antwerp in Au-

Mr. Kelly replied that owing to the adournment of the Chamber for the summer, t would not be possible to select and send a delegate.

The objects of the league are set forth in the following circular: The actual economic situation inspires both business men and political economists with the greatest anxiety, not only in our own country, but in most commercial and industrial countries of Europe and America. Their anxiety is in reward to two things:

First—Tariff reforms, and Second—The regulation of manufacturing industries.

Second—The regulation of the industries.

For the past fifteen years many countries have abandoned the policy of free trade which was inaugurated on the Continent in 1860-1861, and have sought in a return to the principle of protection as the remedy for commercial and industrial crises from which they have suffered. Was this not an error? they have suffered. Was this not an error?
In increasing or strengthening the barriers for the tariff, namely, in increasing the tariff, have they not neutralized the effects of the great public works as the construction of railroads, establishment of telegraph communications and improved navigation? Should they not, instead of restricting this liberty, emphasize the custom reforms of 1869—which were followed by an enormous increase of commerce and industrial pursuits? Then, again, was it with good reason that certain governments have changed their political economy, and has that modification of their commercial system permitted them to realize much progress or to mitted them to realize much progress or to protect their interests any further than the protect their interests any lutinot preceding rule?

For the other part, the principles of the social protection of the workman which have already made their way into legislation, or which tend to introduce themselves, tion, or which tend to introduce themselves, raise grave difficuities.

The regulation of work for women and children, the limitation of hours of work, the minimum of wages, etc., are important and complex questions to which we cannot remain indifferent. For twenty-five years it was generally admitted that civil equality and business interests ought to assure harmony of interests, but in this domain again during 15 years we have seen notions substituted for the principles of freedom, and a question arises anew, What are the benefits question arises anew, What are the benefits of this substitution? It is to elucidate these questions that a national congress of politi-cal economists is to be held.
