

who form the dramatic club which has given several very successful performances in Allegheny is that they contemplate an early presentation of "As You Like It" under the trees on the lawn of the Park Place Hotel in Sewickley. Society circles hail the event eagerly. There is some difficulty about having the role of Rosalind filled acceptably since the young ladies are much in the fair original's predicament when she exclaimed upon hearing of Orlando's presence Alas, the day, what shall I do with my doublet and hose? They enjoy all save the thought of the costume. The likelihood of a performance hinges altogether on this, and will come off as soon as someone is found who is both willing and able. Miss Lucy Haworth is one of the leading spirits in this club as well as being a prominent member of the Tuesday Night Club.

It is still strange though trite, how small are the events out of which grow great ones. The first year of Mr. Johnston's management of the Pittsburg Exposition he was hurriedly called from his office to the aid of an old man lying near the tiny merry-go-round, which stood beyond the hall; and apparently dying. Mr. Johnston knelt down beside him, tried his pulse and heart, and even endeavored to make him talk by gently shaking him, but the stranger proved o be in something akin to a comatsensible condition. Finally after brandy was reed through his tightly compressed lips, he managed to articulate to an eagerly put estion of the manager's that he had been dling on the merry-go-round and become izzy. It would not have been impossible or the old man to be a great grandfather, thoroughly patriarchal appearance adding to his venerable appearance though he cannot have been less than 75 or 80 years old. Mr. Johnston tells this story in justification of an exceedingly fine and commodious merry-go-round now being erected to replace the former unpretentious, not to say humble affair. eav humble affair.

I am told that the Rev. Charles Edward Locke is a favorite clergyman among young ple contemplating matrimony. Mr. Locke as a soft spot in a heart that has never been called hard, and instead of inflicting a ong-drawn out lecture on the duties of huslong-drawn out lecture on the duties of hus-bands and wives, presents the happy couple with a nicely bound edition de luxe, said to contain pearls of advice. It is said to be so prettily bound that even when there are brides and grooms so ungrateful as to not digest the contents they are always glad to put it in a prominent corner of the book-case to display the binding. It's a fact, though, that the book is pretty generally send.

Mr. Gates requests me to make an explanation concerning Mr. Harry Brockett's claim levied last Monday evening on the receipts of the midsummer night concert. Mr. Gates says that Mr. Brockett understood perfectly says that Mr. Brockett understood perfectly well tunt he (Mr. Gates) was presumably not to be held responsible for a contract for sing-ing in Larayette Hall. versions of Mrs. John Arthur's marriage with Mr. Sullivan, the pre-eminently truthful fact was the really remarkable attachment existing between Mr. and Mrs. Clarke and their danghter. Mrs. Arthur, always more devoted to charitable and philanthro-ple work than to society, never enter-tained in a great way more than once a year, and then always for her father and me the were made the central figures. Her chief aim in life was their happiness, and it is no cangeration to say that their smiles were truly the sunshine of her days. The deep effection for each other of her parents was nlways Mr. Arthur's pleasure and pride, and on several occasions, at her desire, I have tiptoed to watch them sitting quietly, side by side, holding tightly hands together. There they would sit together for hours, never speaking, but perfectly content just to know that they were together. It was a staid house for a woman as young as Mrs. Arthur to fit herself to, but probably her romance, that none guessed at, was the sliver lining, though hardly even acknowledged by herlways Mr. Arthur's pleasure and pride, and though hardly even acknowledged by her-self. When she mentioned Mr. Sullivan it was always in a matter of fact way that seemed to preclude any charge of sentiment.

EVENTS OF MID-SUMMER.

Social Gatherings of the Week That Interest the Two Cities.

A quiet, unostentatious wedding occurred Thursday evening, July 21, in Allegheny, at which the contracting persons were Mr. David Hutchison, of Pittsburg, and Mrs. Olive J. Newkirk, of Coal Centre, Pa. Mr. Hutchison is one of Pittsburg's substantial citizens who retired from active business some years since. He was a pioneer here in some years since. He was a pioneer here in the manufacturing brick business. The bride, Mrs. Olive J. Newkirk, belongs to one of Washington county's first families, being a daughter of the late Richard Richardson, a prosperous sarmer living near Bentleysville, the eldest of a family of five and a sister of Mrs. J. H. Leyda, of Allegheny. The coremony took place at the home of the latter at 8 r. M., and was performed by the Rev. T. N. Eaton, D.D., of Oakland. There were present only a few near triends, among whom were Mrs. Jos. Moffett and Mrs. Geo. Snow, daughters of Mr. Hutchison; Mr. Geo. Snow, son-in-iaw; Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Mawhinney and mother, of Belle-field: Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Cooper: Miss Emma Mullen, of Favette City, Fa., and Dr. Isaac N. Leyda. After partaking of luncheon, the bride and groom returned to their home, and in a new days will start for Denver, Colorado Springs and Sait Lake City. At the latter place they will be the guests of Hon. Arthur Thomas, present Governor of Utah. They will remain at Colorado Springs until the 1st of October.

On last Monday evening a delightful birth-day surprise party was tendered Mr. Desond McTighe at his home on Larimer avenue, East End. After dancing and piano solos by Mrs, McTighe and Mr. De Roy, vocal solos by Miss May Gilbert and rec-itations by Miss Bella Gilbert the evening was voted as having been pleasantly spent by all present.

One of the pleasant events in Lawrenceville society circles last week was the lawn fete given by the Misses Crowley at their lovely home on Carnegie avenue. The large laws was beautifully decorated with lighted Chinese lanterns. Under the trees were arranged the supper tables, on which was served an elegant supper about midnight. Inside the house was also decorated. A well known orchestra was present and enlivened the occasion with excellent music, to the strains of which the guests danced the hours away. Among those present were the Misses McCabe, O'Donnell, Keally, McCasker, Crowley, McKeever, Dillon, McTighe, Lowry, Giltonan, Conway, Maloney, McSteen and Messrs. Rooms Soon Rented.

The Bijou Theater will be the first to open its doors for the season of 1892-3, if Harris' Theater, which has not yet closed at all, be excepted. The Bijou will suprise its patrons. It is practically a new theater in appearance. The painters and decorators have been busy for many weeks within it, and when the doors are thrown open on August 4 everything within it will be as bright and fresh as paint can make it. The point aimed at in the new scheme of decoration of the Bijon seems to be cheerfu lightness. The entire house, proscenium arch, walls and mouldings, have been decorated in white and gold. In place of the starming curiosities in the shape of horses and the flying newsboy above the proseenium arch there is now a garland of flowers in subdued tints against a background of white, and garlands and panels of gold fill up the flanks of the arch. A high dado in warm brown of linarch. A high dado in warm brown of lincrusta walton relieves the monotony of the white walls encircling the parquet. The backs of the seats in the parquet circle have been varnished afresh, so that all of them look as good as new. A new center chandelier depends from the celling over the parquet. It is designed to Mr. Gulick's order, and has an airy daintiness such things arely have; long branches, with single incandescent lights at the end springing in a graceful curve from the central bulb. This is intended for electric lights, of course; the whole house being now lit with electricity, with gas in reserve. The greatest improvement of all in Mr. Gulick's opinion is the lighting of the house in general, and the stage in particular. There will be something like 3,500 electric lights altogether before and behind the curtain. The footlights are now arranged on the most improved modern arranged on the most improved modern plan, with permanent electric lights of clear glass, and a sunken subsidiary bench of red glass, and a sunken subsidiary beach of red and green lights that can be raised as desired. The switchboard, from which all the lights will be governed, costing $2,500, will be set up between the procenium arch at the first entrance and the entrance to the star dressing room. The new border lights are also of the latest pattern. They contain the customary white lights and also red and green. Mr. Gulick thinks that the Rijou stage will be as well lit as any in the country. The stage itself is also new, not only as to flooring, but the joists, etc., supporting the stage have been rebuilt, so that the advent of the heaviest tragedy can be awaited calmly by the Bijou management.

Among other minor improvements is the repapering of the walls within the boxes; the paper is of a ripe pinkish tint, and con trasts well enough with the white and gold embellishment of the balustrade and pillars. New carpets of old gold tone will be laid in the aisles. The crimson hangings of the boxes will be retained. In the balcony elec-tric lights have been set at short intervals to supplement the jeweled bosses. It looks as if the new Bijou will be far more brilliant tric lights have been set at short intervals to supplement the jeweled bosses. It looks as if the new Bijou will be far more brilliant than the old one.

The most important acquisition in the new attractions at the Bijou I have kept to the last. This is the new drop curtain painted by Sosman & Landis, of Chicago, the painters of the Aivin's pretty drop curtain and scenery. The Bijou's new act drop is a picture framed in a deep border of pale blue and partially draped with curtains of a delicate old rose tint. The picture is a scene from Spanish life in the seventeenth century. It may be, although I have no specific information on the subject, a flower fete in Seville. Spanish maidens, dark of eye and tresses, in bright dresses with the added charms of high combs and floating mantillas, are selling flowers at the gate, perhaps, of some monastry, to the gallants in gay attire who wander that way. Two of the fairest have halted an elderly beau in his sectan chair, and are thrusting boquets beneath his nose. The chair-men are standing in some perplexity while the fair highwaymen hold up their master. A rich sun-lit Spanish background, of which a bower of flowers with a pretty girl enshrined therein is a strong point, completes a charming picture. The drapery which encloses the pictue is deliciously subdued in tone, and harmonizes nicely with the white and gold decorations of the house. It is worth noting that the effect of greater height has been obtained by the use of the plain white paint upon the ceiling above the parquet circle under the balcony.

The lobby on Sixth street has shared in the renovation, and with the addition of many incandescent electric lights along the conice it ought to present a most attractive appearance. The Penn avenue entrance to the house has been similarly brightened up, Benind the curtain the dressing rooms have been cleaned and repainted, and practically the whole theater has been given a clean coat for the coming season.

It does not seem probable that much will be done at the other houses in the way of impro vements; in fact little is needed be yond the regular summer cleaning. The Alvin, the Duquesne and Grand Opera House are all shut up tight, and it is doubt

House are all shut up tight, and it is doubtful if any of them open before the first week in September. Harry Williams' Academy will not open till late next month, and the museums are going to follow the same course, which is wise.

First-class theaters are finding it no easy thing to get good attractions in the mouths of September and October. Managers of good combinations are fearful of the torchlight procession and other political competitors for the public's attention, and as far as they can are delaying the start for the season. The consequence is that the few companies that will go out before November's elections are in a position to command good terms. I think the effect of politics upon theater attendance is overestimated, and good plays and good actors will draw well here in October be the campaign never so hot, provided that the weather is cool and congenial.

The first attraction at the Bilon Theater opening the season on August 4, will be Dockstader's Minstrels. Half a week of minstrelsy is just about as much as Pittsburg wants nowadays and Manager Gulick wisely begins the engage-Manager Gulick wisely begins the engagement on Thursday. For Dockstaders' it is promised that they are the best organization of minstrels that have gone out under that name. Besides the inimitable Lew Dockstader there are such well-known minstrels as John C. Harrington, the singer and comedian, Frank Dumont, Falke and Semons, Blocksom and Burns, George Powers, William Rowe, and others. The programme is bright and full of noveittes, among others a sketch in which Lew Dockstader takes of Ward McAlliter, it is said, with tunny fidelity to the great original. On with tunny fidelity to the great original. On the Monday following, that is August 8, Lillian Kennedy will produce "She Couldn's Marry Three," at the Bijou.

Harris, Britton & Dean promise their patrons a strong attraction this week, and one that made the late Lester Wallack and Lawrence Barrett famous. It is "Rosedale or the Rifle Ball," a melo drama in five acts. It abounds with thrilling situations, and has a fine representation of a gypsy camp, and a grand ball room scene. Special scenery is promised. George A. D. Johnston, a polished and forceful actor, will assume the leading male part. The ca't is as follows: Elitott Gray, Ed Young; Miles M' Kenna, George A. D. Johnston: Mathew Leigh, Ed W. Morrison; Eumberry Kobb, Frank K. Wallace; Colone; Curendish May, Stunrt Anderson; Corporal Dun, L. R. Wolf; Dockses, C. E. One of the painful things about "A Jolly Surprise," in which Miss Fannie Rice starred ast season was that it was not jolly. day on board his triend E. C. Benedict's stay at Greenwich, he will go to Narragan stay at Greenwich, he will go to Marragan-sett Pler, and subsequently will proceed to Buzzard's Bay, where he will be the guest of Joseph Jefferson. There has been no re-vival of the talk of Mr. Booth going out next season, and I am sorry to have to stick to my belief that we have seen the last of the greatest actor of his time upon the boards. This is the time of the year when the star actor has nothing better to do than to save mebody from drowning or being run over somebody from drowning or being run over by infuriated horses, Miss Minnie Selig-man, true to the tradition of the craft, figured last week in a runaway accident at Long Branch as the savior of a Philadelphia lady who was trying to drive. Not content with her triumph by land, Miss Seligman has challenged any one of her sex to swim a hait mile with her from the beach. If we didn't know that Miss Seligman was a full-fledged star these symptoms would make the matter sure.

WILSON BARRETT is one of the few English stars who will venture upon an American tour next fall. MARIE TEMPEST, the poeket Venus of comis pera, has been creating a regular sensation n London society, where she is very popu ar. A correspondent writes me that he heard Marie sing one of her songs from the new opers, "The Fencing Master," which new opers, "The Fencing Master," which is to be produced at the Standard Theater next fail, and he says that it alone is charming enough to make a piece run for hundreds of nights. Miss Tempest's single song, "The Nightingale," made a success of a poor opera last season, and perhaps she may do the same thing again, although I hear a good deal of praise for De Koven and Smith's work in "The Fencing Master."

By the way, Kate Castleton's character is ing life. It seems that she supported her several sisters, her mother and a good many other relations, including a blind daughter of her sister, Ada Freemen. Before she died she was admitted into the Episcopal Church, and breathed her last expressing a strong belief in the efficacy of Christianity. Perhaps this will not be so much of a surprise to those who really knew her, as the fact that she left $30,000 to her mother, and at her death to her blind niece. INFANT phenomena are having a hard time kicker it isn't safe for her to figure on the programmes as being only 12 years old. At least, that is the case in New York, for there the agents of the Gerry society, as it is called, will pounce down upon her and examine her teeth, so to speak. She has either to admit the corn and her age or get off the stage. Miss Bessie Clayton, the high-kicker in "A Trip to Chinatown," who attracted attention as an infantile prodigy, only continues upon the stage upon the strength of her mother's affidavit that she is over 16.

THE box offices of the local theaters will see some changes this coming season. The Kirk, whose politeness and quickness have aiready made a good impression there. Mr. Gordon becomes press agent for the Alvin. At the Bijou Thomas Graham, who has just returned sunburnt and hearty from a long returned sunburnt and hearty from a long stay at the seashore, will look after the tickets' sale. In the Grand Opera House the same birds will be found in the box office nest, and the public will be pleased to know it. At the Duquesne Theater a change will be made in the box office force, but who the new deity will be nobody knows. Henry Clay Shwab is at present recuperating at Mount Clemens, but will occupy his old berth at the Duquesne next season. The pleasant face of Manager McCullough is not to be taken from us either.

THE habitues of Koster and Bial's in New York will be disconsolate next season with won't. Charles Frobman has secured her for a tour next fall, and Pittsburg will have the RICHARD MANSFIELD has fallen into one of his customary newspaper disputes. A Salt Lake City paper interviewed him several weeks ago, and reported him as expressing contempt and dislike for about two-thirds of creation. This was characteristic of Mr. Mansfield, and it was also like him to promptly deny that he had said any such things, when he realized that they might be resented. The dramatic papers this week are full of the dispute, and as far as the printed evidence goes it is hard to tell whether Mr. Mansfield or the reporter who interviewed him is telling the truth. It doesn't matter, anyhow, except to the two persons concerned, for while most people are willing to admit that Mr. Mansfield is an artist of uncommon talent upon the stage, the people who care what he says off it wouldn't fill a row in the parquet.
