

SQUIRREL HILL BUGS

That Devastate Vegetation at the Rate of an Acre a Day. THEY FEED UPON POTATO VINES. Called the Flea-Beetle because They Are Good Jumpers. A SPIDER THAT BITES PEOPLE'S LIPS

John M. Bruce, of Squirrel Hill, has discovered a little insect which annihilates the potato bug by eating it up. Mr. Bruce has recently promised a good crop of potatoes and says: "This field of potato vines was as green as could be three days ago. It was then that I first noticed the falling of my neighbor's crop and made the remark that I thought the potatoes were rotting very rapidly. I went over and examined the vines and found them covered with myriads of these little bugs. Never in all my experience have I seen insects work with such disastrous effect. It took them just two days to rid this two-acre field of every green leaf it possessed; so you see it is now devoid of verdure except for the scattered weeds. They seem to have a regular way of attacking a field, commencing at one side and never stopping until they have completed their work of devastation. Then they proceed to new territory. The only vegetables they appear to have a liking for is the tomato and potato, at least we only find them doing work on those vines.

"Potato Bugs Driven Away. Usually there are numerous common potato bugs about, but this year this species is not in it, and it is difficult to find a single one about the place. You notice that these bugs can jump like a flea and also have wings, so they are not long in getting from one place to another. You don't see them as they were before the heavy rain, for where there is one now there were 500 then. If they continue to spread and multiply, they have in this locality in the past week, notice should be sent to the Agricultural Department, for they are a formidable foe to the plants.

"We seem to have a corner in peculiar insects up here on the hill. There is some sort of a bug or spider which has been troubling us during the summers for several years past. It has the singular habit of biting the upper lips of people during the night. The lip swells up to enormous size, causing much pain, and the swelling gradually subsides. We have never been able to find out what sort of a thing it is that does this, but there is no doubt that it exists, as a dozen persons have been attacked in exactly the same manner."

An Expert on the Flea Beetle. The reporter obtained several specimens of the little insect and took them to Dr. Hamilton, 18 Ohio street, Allegheny, who has studied the subject for 30 years and is considered one of the best authorities on beetles in the city. The doctor has collected about 2,000 specimens of the beetle found in this locality, each one as different from the other as a flea from a cow. He says there are about 1,000 specimens, more which he has not yet obtained. The doctor's collection numbers some 5,000 in all, out of 11,000 species to be found in the United States.

Upon examining the specimens brought to him, he said: "This is a very common species of the beetle, known as the flea beetle on account of its jumping like a flea. Its scientific name is the epiphiolera curvipes—the latter part of the name being given by the discoverer, because he found his specimen on a cucumber vine. They have never done much damage, but have never been known as a pest, but this year I have noticed a very unusual number of them there being present in numbers they may do a great deal of effective work. The insect usually feeds on weeds in the woods, but it has also been known to attack cucumbers, melons and potato vines, cabbage and turnips. The eggs of the flea beetle are laid on the leaves of the vine, then the larva is hatched and falls to the ground, where it burrows into the soil. The larva then hatches out in a beetle, they multiply very rapidly, there being two or three broods during the summer, taking a month or more to grow. You would not have noticed that these insects have wings if it had not been a hot day, for they have a shell completely hiding them from view, and they are unable to fly when it is cold.

"The absence of the common potato bug is easily accounted for by the intense hot weather we have been having. The hot sun kills the larva and therefore hatches. The same means used against the potato bug ought to be effective against the flea beetle. The only trouble is that on account of their smallness they cannot be brushed off like the common bug."

PROGRESS IN THE WEST.

The Industrial Commissioner of the Milwaukee Road Says Eastern Capital is Helping the Western States—Manufactories Growing in Illinois and Iowa.

Louis Jackson, of Chicago, Industrial Commissioner of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway, registered at the Monongahela House yesterday. He has been all over the East securing industries to locate on his line of road. Mr. Jackson says that there is a healthy industrial development going on in the Western States, the cheap coal of Illinois and Iowa having made manufacturing possible. He believes that in the enlargement of the manufacturing territory of the United States the West will come into the great share of the development, because the people there are enterprising and abreast of the times in every thing. In conjunction with Eastern money and Eastern capital, are now rapidly utilizing the hard wood, iron and other natural resources.

From here Mr. Jackson leaves to make a circuit of the sewer pipe districts of Ohio. He says that a new sewer pipe works at Sioux City, Ia., turns out pipe and drains of the best quality, nor does this in any way affect the output of the Ohio plants, because the distance is too great to ship to, whereas a western plant creates its own market by bringing the material within reach of the consumer. He says the crop outlook in the West is very good and another prosperous season is expected.

"While it is the business of the industrial department of the St. Paul road to act as a means of inter-communication between manufacturers seeking eligible locations and the cities that offer them," he continued, "I did not call on Mr. Frick. Of course it would be a grand thing to locate a plant of 15,000 men somewhere on our line between Illinois and South Dakota, but we are not interested in the output of a 15,000-man industry yet and I did not call for the reason that we don't want to bite off more than we can chew."

Mr. Jackson says the fathers who have made money in the East usually set up their boys in business in thriving Western cities. Few plants are removed from the East, but the output of the Ohio plants in different industries in the West. The people of Iron Mountain, Mich., are figuring on building steel mills there, but the question now is whether they can get coke cheap enough to compete.

LOOKING AFTER LITTLE ONES. Securing the Release of a Boy From Morgantown.

Secretary Dorente, of the Anti-Cruelty Society, yesterday secured the release of Russell Zollinger, who was committed to Morgantown on the oath of his father. The father had been prosecuted and fined by Alderman Keer for abusing his family and the child in the care of the Anti-Cruelty Society, so that the commitment to Morgantown was illegal. Secretary Dorente promised to assume the responsibility of the boy's future and the lad was given in his care.

Stella Jackson, the colored girl who was in charge of the Anti-Cruelty Society, has been sent to the workhouse by Magistrate Sweeney, and the two children of Mrs. Conway, sent to workhouse for keeping a speaking shop and for being in St. Paul's Orphan Asylum of the Anti-Cruelty Society.

MISERABLE GLASS SALES. Few Buyers Attended the July Opening at the Monongahela House.

The July glass opening at the Monongahela House resulted in failure. About 25 agents had their goods on exhibition at the hotel since the first of the month, and one of them said yesterday they never made a poorer showing. This year the glass jobbers met in New York and it was understood they would stop here on their way home. For some reason the buyers did not appear. It was either too hot or they went home by other route. The drummers do not take it as an evidence that business is depressed, but it means that the boys will have to take to the road and hunt for orders. The jobbers are expected to send in their orders by mail between now and the fall. The stocks are low and the middlemen are in need of goods, so while the glass openings in Pittsburg are very successful, jobbers find it an advantage to come here and see all the lines of goods on exhibition. It is a difficult matter for agents to show them properly on the road.

POLISH CHURCH DEDICATION. A Parade of Uniformed Societies Before the Religious Services.

The new Polish St. Stanislaus Koska Church, located at the corner of Twenty-first and Smallman streets, will be dedicated tomorrow. The dedication services will be preceded by a parade of the church societies. They will form on Smallman street and march to Penn avenue, to Eleventh street, to Liberty street, to Smithfield street, to Fifth avenue, to Grant street. Here the Bishops will join the procession and it will return to the church. They will be reviewed by the marshal and his staff and dissolved. The dedication will then take place.

Societies from other congregations will join in the parade. The parade marshal will be John Blazak; Chief of Staff, Joseph Rosinski; Adjutant, Joseph Grabowski.

Between Country and City. The people who ride on the top of the double-deckers these days notice a big drop in the temperature as they draw near to Oakland. From that point to the East End and return on the hottest nights there is a cool breeze, but from Oakland downtown the passengers can feel the air getting warmer as the train moves every square. It appears to be the hottest at the foot of Fifth avenue.

Studebaker Bros. Manufacturing Company's Patent Sprinkling Car THOROUGHLY TESTED THIS WEEK.

THE HIGHLY SATISFACTORY EXHIBITION GIVEN ON THE PITTSBURGH, ALLEGHENY AND MANCHESTER STREET RAILWAY.

Street railway managers and the general public as well have taken much interest in the Studebaker Bros. Manufacturing Company's patent sprinkler for street railways, which was given a satisfactory trial on the Pittsburg, Allegheny and Manchester Street Railway a few days since.

Why the street railway managers and the general public are both interested is because each receives a big degree of benefit from the invention. The sprinkler itself is the invention of Josiah F. Day, late of Pittsburg and now Eastern representative of the Studebaker Bros. Mfg. Co., 265 Canal street, New York City. It is designed to lay the dust on all street railway tracks and can be adjusted to cars propelled by any power. Its adoption by street railways will not only save the companies thousands of dollars on motors and other machinery, but will also prevent the flying dust from annoying the passengers. A general idea of the sprinkler is given in the cut below.

The tank has a capacity of 2,500 gallons, a sufficient quantity to thoroughly sprinkle six miles of road while going at from 6 to 14 miles an hour. This saving of water is due to the arrangement of the aperture in the cylinder outlets at either end of the car, which are controlled at will by levers on the platforms.

The apertures can be opened from one or two inches to three inches in diameter, and can be regulated so a foot or two outside of the track can be sprinkled, if desired. The output of the water can also be regulated to suit the street. Another feature is that the stream goes straight down as it does from the cylinder can wet the track quite up to a crosswalk without wetting the crossing itself.

John B. Haberer, the South Bend (Ind.), representative of the company, is the inventor of this later arrangement. The sprinkler will be of invaluable service in the process of sweeping the tracks, which is done daily on all well regulated roads. The sweeping machine can be attached and follow the car behind, thus doing away with the usual amount of dust. Guard boards are so placed that the water keeps free from the motors. Prominent officials of many of Pittsburg's traction companies witnessed the several trial trips given the sprinkler and all expressed themselves as highly pleased.

An illustration of the small amount of water required to cover the ground may be given in the fact that the sprinkler in going from the P. & M. car house to Woods' house can back a distance of three miles—completely wet the track without lowering the water in the tank but a foot. The exhibition in this city fully demonstrates the fact that the Studebaker Bros. Manufacturing Company's sprinkling car has come to star, and will fill a long felt want.

This outcome has been prophesied from the first by G. T. Greenwood, Manager of the P. & M. Street Railway. In fact, he made many suggestions to this expert electrician and to his courteously allowing the use of his tracks for the exhibitions is in no small degree due to the satisfactory developments of this sprinkling car's good qualities.
