A most painful accident, if it be not the termination, as is sadly feared, to her earthly career, befell on Friday night Miss Bessie Young, daughter of Ezra P. Young, Esq., of Sewickley, She is now lying on what may be her deathbed as the tearful result of treading upon a match. All the valley is plunged in mourning, and truly it can be said of the heart-stricken parents that they have not been left to grieve alone, for a bond of sympathy has united the entire suburb in one common grieving watch round the sufferer's bedside. In Sewickley she is spoken of as one of its sweetest young girls. Another winter would have brought, if not her formal debut, at least what is equally dear to the school girl's heart, the permission to entertain and be entertained with the school girls and boys' charming holiday dances and parties. A school career of certain brilliancy at the Pennsylvania College received a fitting acknowledgment last year in a gold medal won for superior work in her favorite study of painting, for which she showed a most marked ability. Hand in hand with this was a decided taste for literature, which home influences carefully fostered and cultivated; and adorning these gifts of mind were those of the heart, which so impress all who know her with a sense of personal affliction in the suffering that has come to their young friend.

The family of Mr. Charles E Speer, of Craft avenue, Oakland, has gone to Bedford Springs for a sojourn of three weeks.

Mr. H. Kirk Porter, who sailed with his family some months ago for Europe, has been in Pittsburg during the past week. As Mr. Porter's intention when he went away was to visit the continent at some length, this appearance in town is doubtless to be of short duration. None of the ladies of his family are with him.

Yesterday Senator William Flinn joined his family at Bedford Springs.

I have just been debating with myself the feasibility of a school street car. There are school ships for naval cadets, departments at college for the training of wouldbe journalists, and then why not a car in which might be trained the young gentle-man whose ambition is bounded by a conductor's horizon. The new departure need not be run at anyone's expense except that the inculcation of some good common sense rules as well as those of politeness. Think what a salvest would be to the feelings of those who have just seen their dearest friend drive by, behind a spanking team, to have a gentle-volced conductor, hat in hand, awaiting their leisure and their fare. Street cars have made life almost not worth the living, and conductors aggravated it into a state when it is fit for nothing save dying.

Fancy what a godsend would be a man who knew the streets along his line, or, barring that, would let you off at the street it you knew it yourself without your mak-ing preparations half an hour beforehand to attract his attention! Then there are the conductors who have a precocious fancy that their passengers are Saratoga trunks to which heels first or head first makes no practical difference in their internal sys

Seriously speaking, there is a vast reform needed, especially on one line, which need not be specified, because every street car rider knows. I saw a conductor yesterday afternoon treat a woman entering his car with a baby in her arms in a most ill-na-tured manner. He took her open umbrella, as she stepped up, and his evident reluctance to give her even that slight assistance proved that he only did so at her request, and as she steadied herself in the doorway, shoved the umbrella, now closed down in front of her. The woman didn't see the umbrella, but the conductor dropped it nevertheless, and only for the timely assistance of a passenger the unfortunate woman would have been flung on her face, with doubtless serious resultant injuries doubtless serious resultant injuries to herself and her child. The cause of it all stood back on the platform with his arms folded and a soft whistle of contentment issuing from his lips. The woman ant the entire way in with a flush of anger on her cheek, and indeed she would have been justified in reprimanding the conductor most severely for his inhuman conduct. Only last week a similiar complaint was made in THE DISPATCH concerning this same man.

There are a great many thoughtful and gentlemanly fellows in the street car service in whose cars it is a pleasure to ride.

Mrs. Schenley, of London and Pittsburg, is to be immortalized in stone. The grateful daughters of the Bevolution have got up a gentle agitation for a statue of Pittsburg's benefactors, to be erected in the park, and for which the purse strings of the daughters are to be liberally loosened. The idea is a very good one, and in view of Mrs. Schen-ley's probable gift of the blockhouse, would really seem not only to be a gracetul re-cognition of a broad minded and liberal woman, but an honorable attempt to balance an account.

Mrs. Edward Bosworth, of Hudson, O., with a blue eyed, golden haired fairy of a little 4-year-old daughter, is a guest in the city of her sister-in-law, Mrs. M. M. Bosworth, of Denniston avenue, East End. MAEION CRAWFORD GALLAHER.
