Interested in Ship Canals.

The Senator's bill authorizing an expenditure for a governmental survey of the proposed ship canal from Lake Erie to the Ohio river passed in the Senate but was not acted on in the House. It goes over until the second session, beginning next Decemher, and Senator Quay expressed confidence that it would be passed by the House. He is greatly interested in this measure, and commented on the fact that the people in commented on the fact that the people in Western Pennsylvania seemed to have lost their interest in it and were doing little or nothing to push it before Congress. He is also interested in the proposed ship canal across New Jersey to make a direct water line from New York to Philadelphia. This enterprise, he believes, will be put through, and will prove to be a great promoter of water transportation be-tween those two great cities. He thinks its tonnage will be so large that it would richly nav a private corporation to construct and pay a private corporation to construct and operate such a canal. The distance from Raritan Bay to the Delaware river is very short. The cost would be much less than the sum appropriated by Congress at one session for the improvement of the harbor of Galveston, while the traffic over such a waterway would be many times that which the improvement of Colorate the improvement of the harbor of Galveston, while the traffic over such a the improved harbor of Galveston accom-modates.

He Has Become a Farmer.

He Has Become a Farmer. Senator Quay, while not allowing polities to bother him just now, has on his mind a subject for ample worry. He has bought a tarm away down in Chester county, and having a man there to operate it, the Sena-tor is trying to do the managing at long range. He receives, every day or two, a letter from the farm asking his desires in regard to the various crops, the use of fertilizers, the care of stock, etc., etc. Each friend who calls upon the Senator is placed in an easy chair, and is then cross-examined on those onesitons of farm management which have latest been presented for settle-ment. The Chester farm is receiving the benefit of the concentrated agricultural lore of Beaver, and if it is not a howling success it must be because the best farming prinit must be because the best farming prin-ciples of Western Pennsylvania are alto-gether inapplicable to the effete lands of down-east Chester county. The Senator has high hones high hopes.
