

STORY OF THE RIOT

Told by Officers and Men Who Were Stopped From Going to Work.

NINE HELD UNDER $1,000 BAIL.

Alexander Morrison Struck in the Back With a Chair and Clubs.

LIVELY TILT BETWEEN THE LAWYERS

The Duquesne rioters had a hearing before Alderman Reilly yesterday afternoon. It resulted in a parole of McLean and Snyder, their counsel promising to deliver them when needed. The other nine were held under $1,000 bail for court. The evidence against Snyder and McLean was not strong. Captain Breck explained that Deputy Sheriff Sam Young was responsible for the information against them. He left to attend to other business while the hearing was going on, but his testimony will be taken again. Mr. Brennan asked for the discharge of the two men, but it was finally agreed to parole them until Deputy Young could be heard.

Ursin, the Hungarian, was brought from the jail. He doesn't seem to have any friends, and must languish in the bastille. When Alderman Reilly rapped for order, shortly after 2 o'clock, his study rear office was packed with mill workmen. The weather was warm and the room was uncomfortable. The crowd was restless, and interrupted the proceedings at various times. Finally the Alderman cleared the room and called in the people wanted. Several constables were pressed into service to preserve order.

A Baptist Was Perfectly Satisfactory. O. P. Griffith, a coal and iron policeman, and the man who made the information, was the first witness called. He had his commission with him, and he twiddled the big envelope nervously. He soon settled down and answered questions glibly. Mr. Brennan asked him if he had seen God, or a place of rest and punishment. He replied that he was a member of the Duquesne Baptist Church. Captain Breck smiled, and asked his opponent if he thought he would do.

Mr. Brennan explained that somebody told him Griffith was an infidel. Mr. Griffith stated that he had lived in Duquesne for three years and had been an officer since March 21, 1891. He worked first for Carnegie Bros. Mr. Brennan told him that his commission had expired, but it didn't worry him. He said he wasn't aware of it. In substance, Griffith said that he was on duty at the Duquesne works during the night of August 3 and the morning of the fourth. I left at 8 o'clock in the morning. I saw a good many men around the mill gate during the night, and about 1 o'clock in the morning I was stopped by several who wanted to know where I was going. Toward daylight a crowd of 100 men or more collected around the gate. Some stood on the street, others on the Charleston and the street car tracks. I recognized among them Jacob Baker, William Bennett, F. P. Hogan, William Grant, James Essler, David Matthews, Emalie Cots, Martin Kennedy, William Thompson, William Nollen and Fedley.

Saw the Workers Arrested. "I saw Baker, Cots and Bennett use violence on Alex Morrison, who was coming to work. After Morrison had been turned around, Baker struck him on the back with the back of a chair, Cots hit him with his fist and Bennett pushed him. William Millislagie, another workman, was approached by the crowd and told to get his home. I saw H. Y. Boyce stopped by F. P. Hogan, but he got into the mill afterwards. The mob had clubs made of staves. I saw no other weapons. I saw men stopped, but don't know their names. They kept back old employees from entering the works."

At this point Mr. Brennan cross-examined Griffith and asked him if he said Hogan had a roll in his hand that he was using. Couldn't tell whether it was paper or a club. Grant and Bennett carried good-sized sticks. He said he was not an expert on the growth of trees and couldn't give length, breadth or thickness. Essler had a piece of a limb. Cots Baker and Hess carried clubs. Matthews he saw in the crowd, but he hadn't a club. Kennedy, Thompson, Fedley and Nollen had clubs longer than the others. The mob tried to keep out Boyce and Millislagie. The witness had nothing to say against Ursin, McLean or Snyder. He had no conversation with Mr. Brennan and Griffith had several lively tilts. At one time the lawyer said the witness was an expert sweeper. "Yes, to the truth always," he quickly answered.

Couldn't Hear the Hard Names. H. Y. Boyce, a former Deputy Sheriff of the county, was called. His manner was mild, and he was inclined to pass off the whole affair as one of not much importance. He said there were a big crowd around the gate, talking, consulting and stopping men going to work. He is a carpenter, and was held up with others. The men hung on his shoulders, but he was not abused. They called him some tough names, but he said he was hard of hearing and didn't pay much attention to their remarks. They told him it was time to stop work and he went home.

John Walters, one of the watchmen, was the next witness. He was on duty at 6 in the morning. He saw Bennett, Essler and Baker in the crowd. The mob was yelling and shouting to keep the people from going to work. The trouble was kept up until 8 o'clock. The Hungarians left when the men spoke to them. He saw Ursin also in the crowd, but not McLean or Snyder. William Millislagie is foreman of the machine shop. He is a pleasant little fellow, and spoke of the defendants as "my friends here." He concluded discretion was the better part of valor, and when asked to go home concluded to do so without kicking up a fuss. Five men, of whom Bennett was one, stopped him, and told him to go home. Bennett acted as escort for him. He saw Ursin also in the crowd. He said he was not abused. He was hard of hearing and didn't pay much attention to their remarks. They told him it was time to stop work and he went home.

He Wasn't Afraid of Sticks. John Foley testified that he saw the crowd preventing men from going to work. The crowd gave him three minutes to get back home. He was turned around by the men, and was hit in the back with a piece of a chair, fist and other hard substances. He couldn't see who struck him, and he was out of the neck dashed him, and his recollection of the day is not clear. He heard considerable profane language, and one man shouted: "Give him the same medicine that we gave the other fellow." He didn't know to whom they referred.

David Hanna was the next witness called. He was employed as a deputy at the mill. He said he went on duty about 5 o'clock and that at 5 o'clock a crowd gathered. He saw them stop several persons, among them Mr. Boyce, but they released all of them afterwards. They were very insulting in their language to him, and threatened him with violence. He said they tried to stop one of the engineers from going in the mill, but he broke away from them and got inside safely. Some one moved and seconded that they "go in and clean out the mill." "Yes, yes," was the answer, but he succeeded in quieting them, and shortly after the troops came. "Did anybody go in the mill after the troops came?" "Yes, sir," replied the witness. "What's the use of your saying that?" said Mr. Brennan, "you know the troops kept every person out of the mill."

the men employed there were not allowed to go in to work.

Identified Three of the Prisoners. The witness said that was what he meant. He then identified Hogan, Snyder, Essler and McLean as having taken part. In identifying McLean a strap took place between Captain Breck and Mr. Brennan. Captain Breck, pointing to McLean, asked if that man was there. He replied that he was and Mr. Brennan insisted that it was not fair.

Emil Halgren was the next witness. Halgren was employed as a mechanical engineer in the mill. "When trying to go to work on the morning of August 4 he was stopped by a crowd of millmen with clubs who forced him to go home."

Mr. Brennan asked him what kind of language was used, and he replied that he heard a man say: "The fellow that went in will get a warm reception when they come out."

Timothy Olden, a clerk in the mill, was the last witness called. He said that when going to work that morning five men stopped him and picked him up bodily and carried him back. He said he received about the same usage Mr. Halgren did. He did not identify any person among the defendants. He was not cross-examined.

The men held for court were William Nollen, John Hess, Emalie Cots, John Essler, F. P. Hogan, J. E. Bennett, Martin Kennedy, Jacob Baker and George Ursin. J. R. McQuade assisted Mr. Brennan in the defense.

MAY BE DEAD AFTER ALL. The Lockport Girl Said to Be Alive in Chicago is Still Missing.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Julia Phillips, the Lockport (N. Y.) girl supposed to have been killed here by a train, but who, after a corpse had been shipped East, was to be in Chicago, cannot be found. There is a suspicion that the telegram signed with her name and sent to her parents in Lockport was a forgery.

William Ryan, a livery stable employe, formerly from Lockport and believed to be Julia's intended husband, has not been seen since the girl's death. The police are taking an active interest in the mystery.
