went back. Wacher remarked to the wil-ness that if they had gone to him in the first place he would have gone in and brought Reed out without any trouble. William-son wanted him to go in then, but Wacher refused. In his charge to the jury among other things, Coroner McDowell said:

things, Goroner Mellowell said: You have a right to say whether you ap-prove of such means as were employed to take Reed, or whether the divil authorities should have been called into action. Of course, in some instances our civil authori-ties do not amount to much, but these vio-lent gatherings do not tend to elevate the moral standing of any community.

The Verdict Rendered.

The jury returned the following verdict:

The jury returned the following verdict: Martin Beed, aged about 38 years, came to his death Saturday, August 6, 1982, about 8 o'clock r. m. in the icehouse on the property of Peter Wacher, Noblestown, North Fay-ette township, from a gunshot wound through the heart, fired by his own hand. From the evidence, the jury find that said Martin Reed had been convicted and sen-tenced to be hanged for murder in Washing-ton county Pa and had brown isil and tenced to be hanged for murder in Washing-ton county, Pa., and had broken jail and escaped from there, and had been located in said behouse, and was about to be captured by deputy sheriffs from Washington county, and being heavily armed, a crowd or gathering of people assembled at said pince and set fire to said icehouse, cremating said Martin Reed after he had shot himself, and we further condemn the ac-tion of the said unlawful assembly in burn-ing said icehouse down, and in not appealing to the civil authorities for assistance.

The verdict in the Coyle case read:

Hugh Coyle came to his death on Saturday, August 6, 1822, about 5:30 o'clock r. M., from a gunshot wound received from a gun or re-volver in the hands of Martin Reed, an escaped murderer, whom he was assisting to escaped nurbers, where the lochouse capture, he being concealed in the lochouse on the property of Peter Wacher, Nobles-town, North Fayette township, Pa., and we inrther find said shooting was done with nious intent.
