

IMPOSSIBLE SCHEMES

Of Endowment Associations De-nounced by Frank P. Bennett.

FIGURES THAT ARE MADE TO LIE.

Difficult to Understand How So Many Dupes Could Be Found.

ALL THE ORDERS IN THE SAME SHAPE

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Representative Frank P. Bennett, of the Massachusetts Legislature, delivered an address before the American Economic Association here today upon "The Endowment Craze."

In introducing his remarks he said: Any person who had occasion to pass through Tremont street, Boston, on the evening of Friday, January 20, 1892, would have noticed that Tremont Temple was surcharged with a demonstrative gathering of people, and that hundreds of curious or interested observers were being turned away from the doors because of the inability of the great audience room to accommodate them.

On the platform inside the Temple was a box containing $40,000 in crisp new $50 treasury notes, and the principal feature of the evening's programme consisted in giving one of these $100 bills to each of 400 persons whose payments to the organization giving the entertainment aggregated $1 within the previous 12 months.

Among other speakers, a lady from Cleveland, who was announced as the "State Deputy from Ohio" and the "leading lady of the order," said: "Cleveland people had to have the order of the Iron Hall explained to them. A one-year order was something new. Now we have six months' and even four months' orders, and the time will come when we can put in our money Monday morning and draw it out Saturday night. I can't say."

The order which this lady represented and which she gave $100 for, with the accompanying of several thousand people, was one of Massachusetts endowment associations of a similar business in Massachusetts at that time, while 200 "bond investment companies" and foreign endowment associations were then engaged in an even more brilliant system of getting the public to take $100.

The "endowment craze" reached its height in Massachusetts during the six months ending June 30, 1892, and on that date the 38 Massachusetts companies had 233,485 members, to whom they had promised the enormous aggregate of $4,810,778. And as the existing companies were given a monopoly by the amendment of the State Statute, the formation of any further similar corporations in Massachusetts, a great number of organizations were organized in other States and came into Massachusetts with promises of the still readier method of acquiring riches, to which they were unconditionally allied.

The New Hampshire "bond investment" company differed from the Massachusetts endowment companies in that it required each certificate in numerical order, as soon as the necessary amount of $100 was paid. For instance, if the face value of the certificate was $100, the "bond investment company" agreed that the amount was $100, as soon as the amount was in the treasury after paying expenses of management. The order which she gave $100 for, with the accompanying of several thousand people, was one of Massachusetts endowment associations of a similar business in Massachusetts at that time, while 200 "bond investment companies" and foreign endowment associations were then engaged in an even more brilliant system of getting the public to take $100.

Every man brings added proof of the popularity of the above institution. The list of the class books indicates that the attendance will be very large, and the most successful year in every way is looked forward to. A "musical" will be given by the pupils of the conservatory during the beginning of every month during the school year. These recitals will take place in the "Carnegie Hall" lecture room.

Everybody wants good bread. This is why grocers receive so many calls for and are selling so much of the celebrated "Rosalia" and "Our Best" brands of flour. There is no better flour in the world. The Iron City Milling Company manufactures it.
