A MONETARY SCHEME

the French ten-franc piece, worth about $2, were in use anywhere in Europe, and expressed my inability to comprehend what Dr. Soelber was aiming at. Since then I have learned from foreign newspapers and from a copy of Dr. Soelber's own "memorandum" that the cable synopsis of his plan was incorrect in putting the minimum he proposes for gold coins at 28 grammes, whereas it is 58 grammes, or nearly double

The first effect of the measure, if adopted, would, therefore, be to retire all the 10-franc, 10-mark, half-sovereign and $2 50 gold pieces 10-mark, half-sovereign and $2.50 gold pieces now onistanding, leaving only the pieces of twice their value and upward. Dr. Soeluer would also have all the existing silver coins above the value of 20 or 25 cents called in and melted up and their piace supplied by hew ones coined upon the ratio of 20 to 1. With commendable candor he acknowledges that the idea underlying his scheme is not original with him, but was suggested in 1881 by Bank Director Moritz Levy, the Danish delegate to the Paris Monetary Conference of that year, in a paper prepared by him for the conference, and that it was again put forth the following year by Herr Drenend, President of the Imperial Bank of Germany, in an article published anonymously in a German newspaper.

The Proposed New Silver Coins.

The Proposed New Silver Coins, The new silver coins with which Dr. Soelber proposes to fill the vacuum created by the withdrawal of the present small gold and the old silver coins, he would have coined, as I have said, at the new ratio of 20 coined, as I have said, at the new ratio of 20 to 1 instead of the present ratios of 15½ to 1 in Europe and 16 to 1 in this country. He would have them made a legal tender among individuals and private corporations up to three times the value of the smallest gold coin permitted under the new system, but receivable to an unlimited amount by the Government. In order to avoid the necessity of carrying them around in bulky and heavy quantities, he suggests the issue of heavy quantities, he suggests the issue of certificates, representing them in denomina-tions of not less than the half of the value of the smallest permitted gold coin, and possessing the same legal tender quality as the actual silver coin. The current small the actual silver coln. The current small change he would not disturb.

Dr. Soelber frankly concedes at the outset that bi-metallism is dead, and a part of his scheme is the establishment of a common unit of gold as the standard of money value. He even says that no European government would join in a conference called for no other purpose than to consider bi-metallism. Fortunately President Harrison, in convening the monetary conference metalism. Fortunately President Harrison, in convening the monetary conference shortly to be held, has suggested the new topic simply of increasing the use of silver as money, and this topic Dr. Soelber expects to be respectfully considered. The leaders of both political parties in Great Britain have pronounced against bi-metallism. Germany is equally opposed to it. Austria has just adopted the single gold standard, the Latin Union has long age abandoned sixer in practice, though not in theory, and the recent defeat of free silver coinage in our Congress shows that this country, too, ir Congress shows that this country, too will adhere to gold.

Some of Soelber's Computations. All that is possible is to prevent silver from being still more depreciated than it now is, and it is to aid in accomplishing this ild result in adding to th inak reserves of the commercial world 600, 600 kilogrammes of gold, worth about $400, 600 kilogrammes of gold, worth about $400, 600, 600, and in the employment in its place, as currency, of a corresponding quantity of silver, which, at the proposed new ratio of $10 to 1, would be about $40,000,000 onnees. By thus increasing the gold reserves of the masks and simultaneously decreasing the surplus stock of silver pouring on the market the relative value of silver to gold, he thinks, would be increased—or at least that the evils resulting from its further depreciation would be prevented. That he has ne hope of restoring it to its ancient position is plain from his suggestion that the new ratio be established at 20 of silver to 1 of gold, and even this he is willing to have reduced. ok reserves of the commercial world 600.

An obvious objection to the plan, and one to which I find no answer in Dr. Soelber's "memorandum," is that the effect it would produce would be only temporary. When once the existing stock of small gold coins had been gathered in and stored away in bank vaults, nothing more would remain to be drawn upon, and when once the channels of circulation had been filled by the proposed new silver coinage and silver certificates, this means for the employment of cates, this means for the employment of the surplus silver mined would be ex-hausted, and the downward course of the value of the metal would recommence. Too Much Trouble for a Little.

This being so. I fail to see the inducement to take the immense trouble required: first, to win over the Governments whose cooperation is essential to the success of the scheme; and then, to execute it in detail. As Samnel Weller's boy said of learning the alphabet: "It is hardly worth while to go through so much to get so little." Even if the decline in silver could be arrested permanently by Dr. Soelber's plan, or by any other, and the value of the metal, as compared with gold, were fixed at somewhere near 20 to 1, or 24 to 1, or whatever might be decided on, the result would fail to content those whose interests demand the restoration of the old order of things.

The outcry in behalf of silver money comes chiefly from the Western and Southwestern citizens of this country, who want a cheap dollar with which to pay their debts, and from the British residents in India and owners of property therd, whose incomes have been diminished by the decline in the rupee. If the gold standard is still to be maintained in Europe and in the United States and the ratio of silver educed to 20 to 1 as Dr. Soelber proposes, these people will all be dissatisfied. operation is essential to the success of the

as Dr. Soelber proposes, these people will ill be dissatisfied.

it will be said, probably, by Dr. Soelber, and the other advocates of the use of silver money, that gold alone does not furnish enough currency, and that it must therefore be supplemented by silver in order to avoid the svils of a money stringency. The the evils of a money stringency. The prices of commodities being regulated by the vol-time of currency in circulation, they are low when that volume is scanty and high when it is full.

When Paper Money Is All Right, Waiving the discussion of the question whether low prices are a curse and high prices a blessing, it is enough to say that the volume of a currency can be increased as well by the addition of paper money, the value of which is derived from its prompt redemption in gold on demand, as by silver coin which is maintained at par with gold only by being redeemable, like paper, in gold at the will of the holder. For example, we have in this country, at this moment, about $800,000,000 of paper money in use, in the shape of greenbacks, sliver certificates, and coin notes issued for the purchase of silver builton under the act of July, 1890.

This mass of currency is redeemable either in silver or in gold at the pleasure of our Government. So far the Government has redeemed it in gold on presentation, and, therefore, it is accepted as equal to gold. If the Government were to refuse thus to redeem it, it would sink at once to the level of its builton value as silver, whatever that value might be. If, too, while the redemption in gold continued, the whole must of silver in the Government vaults were to vanish into smoke and blow away, leaving only the gold there, the value of the paper would remain unimpaired. It is the gold held by the Government will maintain gold payments, that makes our maper money as good as well by the addition of paper money, the held by the Government, and the faith that the Government will maintain gold payments, that makes our paper money as good as rold, and not the silver in the Treasury. What this country is doing any other civilized country can do likewise. Paper money, redeemable on demand in gold, is made no more valuable and adds no more to the volume of currency by being issued against silver than if it is issued on its own merits. The security apparently offered by the silver is illusory, since, if an attempt were to be made to substitute silver in any large quantity for gold, it would either produce a panic in the money market or else could not be sold at all.

There is only so much gold in existence and swapping 1,000,000 ounces of silver for sny 40,000 onness of gold would not increase the stock. For pocket money silver coins may be more convenient than paper, but

There is science in the making of good ginger snaps, and very few people there are who have mastered it. That's the reason Marvin's ginger snaps are so much superior to others. The New Orleans molasses and susar used in them are of the very finest grade; the butter is of the highest quality; the ginger we grind ourselves from the pure root. ## ANARCHY'S NEW ARM.

An Infernal Machine Invented by Nihilist, That May lie Used

No Dynamite, Matches Nor Clockwork, but a Secret Ixplosive.

WITHOUT RISK TO THE OPERATOR.

SET OFF AT WILL BY A QUEER LIQUID

NEW YORK, Aug. 28. - After years of labor the Russian Nihilists have at last succeeded in inventing a perfectly satisfactory infernal machine. The model was finished in London a few days ago, and a report which has reached this country says that those who examined it pronounce it as perfect a death-dealing instrument as could be

The machine is 16 centimeters in height and 4 in width. It is rectangular in shape, portable and looks somewhat like a small book. Even when charged it can be carried with the utmost safety in the breast pocket of a coat, and no one but the initiated would ever imagine that it was anything but a bulky purse. When the time for action comes the Nihilist can take it out of his pocket, place it where the explosion is to occur, and then calmly walk off to a place of safety.

At the appointed moment the machine will explode without the aid of clockwork or even of a lighted match. Instead of dynamite a secret explosive is used and with this the bottom of the machine is Ignited by a Strange Secret Liquid. Over the explosive is placed a detonator, which consists of a chemical product and is set on fire by coming in contact with a drop of some secret liquid. A glass ball holds this liquid and, when an explosion is desired, all that is necessary is to let it trickle drop by drop through a tube, at the lower extremity of which is the small chemical mass resting on the explosive.

When the machine is turned upside down so that the glass ball is at the bottom no applications are taken less that when the explosion can take place, but when the machine is held upright so that the liquid can trickle down to the detonator an explosion is bound to follow.

In the eyes of revolutionists the merit of this machine lies in the fact that it can be this machine lies in the fact that it can be operated without any danger to the operator. Moreover, it is always ready and can be regulated to a moment. Heretofore clockwork or a lighted match was necessary to produce an explosion and the result was that, once set going, the machine could not be stopped. This new machine, however, can be stopped at any moment before the explosion takes place. After placing it in position the operator may decide to postpone the shake-up for awhile and then all pone the shake-up for awhile, and then all that will be necessary for him to do will be to turn the internal device upside down and put it back in his pocket. Perfectly Safe to the Handler,

He will run absolutely no risk in handing the machine, for by means of the five ling the machine, for by means of the five plugs of blotting paper in the glass tube he can determine the very moment at which the explosion is to take place. If he allows the liquid to trickle very quickly, he may confidently expect an explosion in five minutes, whereas, if he uses the five plugs of blotting paper, he may reckon on a full hour for flight before the liquid touches the datonator.

Nihilists consider the invention of this matchine almost as important as the inven-tion of dynamite and are very auxious to learn what steps the authorities will take to guard themselves from it. When dynamite bombs came into use among Anarchists the authorities in France and other cour tries placed many restrictions on the sale of dynamite, and it is assumed in revolution-ary circles that they will pursue the same policy now and by restricting the sale of dangerous chemicals and explosives render it difficult, though hardly impossible, for their implacable enemies to do much harm with this new instrument of destruction. What will make their task especially difficult is the fact that they do not know what kind of explosive and liquid is used in the new machine and Nihilists are determined that they shall not be enlightened on
