"I have lived by the river 32 years and of possible to live down here. The stench was simply frightful. You could smell is while walking on Water street. The sewers emptied their refuse into the river, and their being no water to carry it off, it used to lay and rot in the sun. This water is not stagnant, as some people say. It is being renewed all the time and is anything but that. We are not troubled with the stench now, nor have we been since the dam was put up, but lower those wickets once and I think I will make a move for safety."

Keene as Richard III. The most fascinating villain of all that Shakespeare created, the hunch-backed Plantagenet has practically no exponent in America to-day who can approach Thomas W. Keene, who played the character last night at the Duquesne Theater. Mr. Keene's performance, while it has some blemishes, is really a great piece of art, and it grows no less admirable as age mellows it. Mr. Keene's company includes several actors of note, and, on the whole, is more than usually competent for Shakespearean work. Miss Emma Vaders was of course admirable as Emma Vaders was of course admirable as Queen Elizabeth, but Miss Burroughs hardly seems equal to the trying role of Lady Anne. The audience which was large was cordial in its applause. A very artistic new pro-gramme has been published. To-night "Richelleu," in which Mr. Keene is excellent, will be presented.

The Charity Ball.

Belonging to the society drams produced by New York in imitation of the same thing in London "The Charity Ball" appeals gently and persuasively to the emo-tions, be they sad or mirthful. It has been seen here before, and its presentation last seen here before, and its presentation last night at the Alvin Theater cails for little in the way of general criticism. The com-pany is one of Daniel Frohman's, and is in the main equal to the undertaking. There are weak spots in the performance, which experience, for the company has only been out a few days in the piece, may build up. Mr. Elliott is the best John Van Buren we have seen; he has the somewhat unchoose have seen; he has the somewhat unctuous grave of the fashionable rector down to a grave of the isshionable rector down to a niceity, and he is genuinely forceful. Mr. Sands made a dryly humorous Judge Knoz, and the high comedy of Mr. Conger as Alez. Robinson was always spontaneous and devoid of silliness, in which such parts tempt some actors to indulge. Mr. Conger's progress since his last appear-ance here with Palmer's "Alabama" is noteworthy. He found an amnuing fellow. noteworthy. He found an amusing fellow-conspirator in Miss Jean Coze, whose Bess is a pretty little piece of fooling, if the lines are stage-conventional. Mr. Wagen-hals, a young actor of ability, looked the part of handsome but weak Dick Van Buren, and put some intensity into it Miss

Oil City's Easy Triumph.

FRANKLIN, PA., Sept. 5 .- To-day's ball game was started at 5 o'clock on very muddy grounds, and Manross proved the best wetday ball tosser of the two pitchers, Alexander having no control of the ball in the second inning, when Oll City scored all their runs. The game was called at the end of the eighth inning on account of darkness.

GEORGE WOOD is batting well for Cincinnati. CATCHER BEEGER was released by Washington

MANAGER DURYEA has rejoined his old love, Cin-cinnait and Comiskey. PRESIDENT GEORGE WAGNER, of the Washing-ton chuk, started for home last night.

ACCORDING to Richardson, Abbey will hardly be released, as he is too promising a pitcher.

WASHINGTON wanted Genins not long ago, but he has been released by Cincinnati for incompetency.

Big Perry Werden's release has been recalled by Von de Ahe. The big fellow is a great favorite in St. Louis.

THERE are no championship games schedu to-day. But many postponed games played off

It was expected by many that Brooklyn would win the second champiouship, but is don't look that way now.

WHAT the Senators need is more batting, and Manager Richardson has been giving the men a splendid example of late. He has been hitting the ball hard, and this is calculated to inspire the
