CHOLERA IS A CRIME.

A Prominent Pittsburg Physician Believes That Filthiness Should Be

PUNISHABLE BY THE LAW.

Pestilence - Breeding Warehouses Around the Public Schools.

PLAGUE-SPOTS OF A BIG CITY.

The Cultured and Clean Victims of Ignorance and Dirt.

SANITARY IMPROVEMENTS SUGGESTED

Jail Physician A. V. Chessrown holds that disease is criminal. He believes that the sources of filth should first be attacked in cleaning up the city. The Doctor was extremely averse to being quoted, but feels that too radical measures cannot be taken to prevent an epidemie of cholera. In this connection he said yesterday:

"Too much time is being consumed in the discussion of methods for the disposition of filth in our rivers, sewers and streets and not enough to the prolific source. I was directed by one of our prominent iron firms to see an employe injured while at his work. I found my patient with a fractured leg in a small, ill-ventilated room containing four beds with only room between them for a man to edge through. It was occupied by six men at night the same number during daytime. The room beneath was of the same size and occupied as the one described. The only other apartment, a kitchen or dining-room for the family, consisting of husband, wife, three children and several dogs and cats, contained a bed, stove, table, old clothes and quite a variety of rubbish, and, in the midst of all, tainted meat and decaying vegetables in abundance. The beds, floors and the Hungarian who lived there were unkempt and filthy, and a sickening odor pervaded the premises

Only One of Many Hundreds, "This is only one of hundreds in our city, and a palace compared with some inhabited by Italians, Poles, Hungarians, etc., many occupying cellars alone.

"Why don't these people take sick? Because they are acclimated, as it were. They partly subsist upon bacilli, were born and raised among them, and are accorded, through gracious nature, immunity there-

"Thousands of children from our best families are assembling now at our public schools, passing and repassing these diseasebreeding haunts, and still you wonder why diphtheria, scarletina, typhoid fever, etc., are always among us. Go with me to that beautiful Forbes School, in the midst of her parks and other attractions and attended by hundreds of children from miles around, and we find beneath her very windows open storehouses for the accumulation of diseased rage and rubbish. Others are located almost within her shadow. Go to Fifth avenue, from Soho to the jail, and you find many

A District of Dangerous Possibilities.

"Take the district bounded by Grant street, Seventh street and Bedford avenue, Washington and Shingiss streets and the take from Eleventh street to Thirty-shird street, and from Liberty avenue to the Allegheny river, and past the Point and others of smaller dimensions. Go through the alleyways and courts, visit the cellars and vaults and rickety tenement houses, terribly overcrowded and reeking in squalid dens. Go among our oyster and fish depots; visit our market place and Diamond street from Market square to Liberty avenue; see the immense warerooms th the reception of raw hides. Visit our fruit and commission houses. See our city studded with slaughter houses and then be astonished that we have sickness and death? "Visit one of many places, the notorious Yellow Row on Second avenue, where every class and condition of humanity, from the whitest to the blackest, are living in fiithy squalor, and commingling in loathsome revelry and crime, at which the better and nobler instincts of brute creation would stand aghast, making night hideous and shaming day, making Satan sanguine and defying nature's God, spreading broad-cast unmindful and regardless of consequences, disaffection and disease, penetrating and poisoning the abodes of the rich, as well as the poor, and creating un-told consternation, misery and death.

The Danger of City Streets. "Little do the shopping thousands, daily upon our streets, realize what danger they may unconsciously encounter in their ways to and iro, or that they are to be the medium of communication of some intal malady, to the loved ones at home.

"Follow me to yonder abode. All the culture and all the luxuries of wealth are there. The joy and gladness of wealth are there. The joy and gladness of yesterday are hushed into gloom. Terror and sadness are depicted in their stead. A fatal disease has intruded itself, and a heart-broken, horror-stricken family are taking a last farewell. Nature has established her impartial rulings—has been offended against somewhere men the warride. The somewhere upon the wavside. The tragedy is repeating itself hundreds of times in every second we live.

"You tell me that it always has been, is now, and always shall be. We reply with the scientist and sanitarian that it might have been averted, can be averted, and with the help of God might not be so, We proceed against anarchy and treason and the offenses of law with a stern hand, but poor nature must suffer and die. Un-conscious and neglectful of the inevitable, we move on in our social and business pur-suits while infection and affliction are lurking and threatening us in every breath we breathe, and in every drink and morsel

"Perhaps the most striking illustration of Perhaps the most striking illustration of practical and effective sanitation is seen at our county jail, where a promisenous throng are coming and going all the time. Go through her spacious cerridors, into her 400 cells, visit her hospital wards and culinary apartments, her laundry and bath rooms, her store houses, machinery halls and retinue of offices, and nooks and corners everywhere are scrupulously clean. Sanitatinte of omees, and nooks and corners everywhere are scrupulously clean. Sanitation is never finished and never ceases. Personal clean liness, wholesome substantial food, regularity in eating and sleeping have prevented disease thus far from originating there, and enabled those sick when com-mitted to promptly regain health.

Where Bacilli Is Banished. "We find no odor peculiar to such places, and no manifestations of decomposition and the presence of bacilli and that we are in the midst of disease, a startling fact that embraces us everywhere without.

"Sanitation in private dwellings could and should be managed in the same manner. Renovation and sanitation can't be estab-Renovation and sanitation can't be estab-lished in our filthy places with water alone, and caustics are seldom if ever applied, hence the propagation of bacilli and dissem-ination of disease. Let the Board of Health, through Councils and the Chamber of Commerce, if need be, establish the rem-edy and purge our city of this death-deal-ing pestilence while it is yet time. Let every man, woman and child be prompted to the importance of the occasion and in the interest of suffering humanity, and in averting a calamity that threatens, as the armed assamin, not only from the seaboard, but from every polluted crack and crevice in the land. These facts are pertinent and must not be disregarded if we value our lives or those of our kin.

"Let us have a garbage system that cans may be within the reach of everyone, and it could be made self-sustaining. Let us have a public natatorium and establish obligatory laws. The venture would be life-saving, and no one could or would be so uncharitable as to complain. Flushing sewers and cleansing streets is like treating symptoms regardless of the causes of disease and the results must be alike."

By an American Consul, Backed by Representatives of Other Powers in Vene zuelz-He Compels the Release of Con suls Who Had Been Arrested.

PANAMA, Sept. 12 -Further news of the parchical state of affairs existing in Venezuela has come here. General Pepper, Mendoza's commander at La Guayra, on the morning of September 3, received orders from Caracas to squeeze a large sum of money from the merchants. General Echeverria, Pepper's adjutant, at once summoned all the leading merchants of the place to the Governor's office, and when they were assembled informed them they were prisoners until they paid in sums ranging from $500 to $2,000. The German, Dutch, Swedish, Norwegian, Belgian, Brazilian, Argentine and Costa Rican consuls and American Vice Consul Golding, the agent of the Red D steamers and the manager of Boulton's firm here, were also

An appeal was made to American Consul Hanna for protection. Mr. Hanna at once saw the Spanish, British and French Consaw the Spanish, British and French Consuls, laid the facts before them and they all agreed to act together. The commanders of the Dutch, French, Spanish and German warships also upomised their hearty cooperation. With this backing Mr. Hanna, formally demanded the unconditional release of the other Consuls. Pepper hesitated. The foreign warships got up steam, the Venezuelan forces beat to arms and the guns at Fort La Vigia were run out.

For a time it looked as if a collision was unavoidable, but Mendora hearing of the situation, telephoned from Caracas for Pepper to comply with the demand and to do anything to avert trouble. He then called his lieutenants to the Casa Amarilla and resigned the Dictatorship, proclaiming Guillermo Tell Villegas, as President and a
