

POOR TIME TO MEET

If the Cholera Reports From New York Are Not More Satisfactory, the GRAND ARMY GATHERING

May Not Be Held at the National Capital Just Now, After All.

ONE CASE OF ASIATIC CHOLERA

Reported by a Washington Physician to Be in the City Now.

OFFICIALS CONSULT ON THE SUBJECT

(FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Though the erection of stands for spectators still goes on, and though everybody and his neighbor are hanging out bunting and a thousand and one devices in proof of good will and a desire to heartily welcome the veterans of the Grand Army, nearly everybody yet predicts disaster to the success of the annual encampment.

Additional news from New York, showing that there has been no exaggeration in the reports of yesterday, furnished no reassurance and anxieties on account of the situation of the metropolis was not lessened by the report that has been flying on the wings of the wind all the afternoon that there is in Washington a genuine case of the Asiatic cholera.

A rumor first got into circulation that there were two well-authenticated cases on Capitol Hill, but no one could give street, number or name. A physician assured the correspondent of THE DISPATCH this evening that there is no doubt that a case has been developed in the city, but where it is or who it is he refused to state. Up to this time the health officials refuse to admit that any knowledge of a case is in their office, and say that if physicians are aware of the presence of the contagion it is their duty to report the facts.

Every effort is being made to prevent a severe outbreak of cholera. The same may be engaged in extensive preparations to make money out of the thousands of veterans next week, it is possible the health authorities here may be as secretive as those of New York, and that the presence of the plague here, if it be here, may not become known until the encampment is well toward its end, or until there occurs an outbreak that cannot be kept from the public.

The managers of the affair admit, however, that the gravity of the situation, and that the authorities admit it is yet possible some action will have to be taken to stop the assembling of the veterans, in the interests of their own safety and the safety of the community. Nothing is yet done, however.

Commissioner Douglass was asked what he would attempt in the matter, and answered that it was too soon to say, but that they would make every effort to prevent that would throw a damper on the assembling of the Grand Army until it should become evident that any other course would result in disaster. He doubted if the District authorities have the power to establish a quarantine, but he supposed there would be a way found to erect a barrier if it should become necessary.

All Depends on the Cholera's Spread.

Later in the day the Commissioner and the Secretary of the Treasury were closeted together for a long time in discussion of the subject, and it was practically agreed between the two officials that if any alarming increase of the disease at New York were developed within the next 24 hours, and especially if there should be a case or cases of cholera in this city, some radical action in regard to the encampment would be imperative, as fearful results might come of the presence of so vast a crowd if there should be a sudden development of the disease in the midst of it.

The local authorities assure the public and the Government officials that the sanitary precautions for the encampment are of a most elaborate and perfect character, but the fact remains that the precautions are of the simplest and most primitive description. In one of the most malarial spots of the city, now made ten times dangerous by the rains and the rotting vegetation of the swamps, 25,000 people are to be lodged in barracks and tents at a season of the year when the nights are cold and the days warm in the sunshine, the difference between the temperature in the sun and in the shade being so marked as to cause chills when one steps out of the sun into the shadows; and of course these contrasts will affect one who is not acclimated much more than one who is accustomed to such quick and radical changes.

School Buildings No Places for Barracks.

The clamor against the use of the school buildings for barracks is naturally much heightened by the prospect of the advent of cholera. Hitherto the basis of opposition has been that the buildings would be greatly damaged and the children of the District would lose one month of the instruction which they should have during the school year. Opposition on this score is trivial compared with that which would spring up on account of the possibility of the contamination of the buildings with cholera germs, and it is already evident that if there are cases of cholera in the city, the presence of the encampment many hundreds of the families of the District will refuse to permit their children to enter the building for some time to come.

This is not the least grave aspect of the affair, as in the event of contamination of buildings the disease might be distributed to quarters of the city which would otherwise enjoy perfect immunity. The next 24 hours will probably tell the story of what is to be done to preserve the Capital from the dangers of the contagion which would be vastly heightened by the presence of a great host of strangers. If anything is to be done at all it must be before Saturday, as after Friday night a great bulk of the veterans and others who purpose visiting the city will be on their way.

Preparing for the Dread Visitor.

The office of Secretary Foster in the Treasury Department might have been mistaken for the Cabinet room at the White House today, and the Secretary for a kind of acting President. General Wansford, the maker called to consult the Secretary in regard to the prospect of a fumigation of the mails in case the cholera makes rapid progress in New York, and preparations looking to that end will be taken at once. Secretary Tracy called, as he has every day this week, to talk over the co-operation of the navy with the civil authorities at New York harbor. Agents of steamship companies besieged the office to secure a speedy release as possible of vessels liable to detention.

No less a dignitary of the Catholic Church than Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, was unheeded by "Dixie" Kernan, the St. Louis politician, to confer with the Secretary in regard to a probable annoying detention of the representatives of the Vatican who anticipate attending the dedication of the World's Columbian Exposition on the 21st of October, and the Secretary did a graceful and polite act by the immediate writing and cabling of reassuring information to the colleagues of the cardinal at Rome. The Secretary was much worried to-day with his constant stream of callers, most of whom had either official or unofficial business in regard to the cholera, and any indiscreet person who intruded the subject of appointments or politics was given a short shrift.

A Case That Congress Must Settle. Representatives of the Knights and the Federation of Labor called on the Commissioners of the District to-day, to present their argument against the employment of convict labor on public work in the District. The only comfort they got was the opinion that there was nothing to be done without Congressional action, which will not be so easy to secure at the coming session of Congress, after the elections, as it would have been at the last session.

In the opinion of the commissioners, the fact that the work of the convicts is of the value of from $50,000 to $60,000 annually to the District and the general Government seemed to outweigh all moral considerations, as well as the argument that the work of the convicts takes just so much bread out of the mouths of honest citizens who are out of employment and who might be hired to do the tasks set for the convicts.

Bering Sea Work to Be Done.

The Bering sea controversy experts at the State Department will again be compelled to buckle down to arduous work, in a day or two, in the preparation of the answer to the argument submitted by the British Government, a few days ago. This will be really a task requiring more skill than that of producing the argument for the side of the United States, as the present duty will be to demolish the ground from under the feet of the counsel for the British. The work will occupy a month or two, and the arbitrators, which will be in January, probably, with Paris as the place.

A good deal of comment has been heard in regard to the difference in style of producing the arguments already submitted between the British book and that of the United States. The work received from the other side is neatly printed, but is bound in ordinary blue paper covers, and altogether a cheap, though respectable affair. The volume of the United States is printed in the highest style of the art of printing and is bound expensively in morocco leather, with the title of the person to whom a copy was sent stamped in golden letters on the cover.

"The one is suggestive of the simple and sensible way in which they do things in old England, and the other is suggestive of the display of money-bags, indicative of the ruling deity of the American," was the comment of one of the critics of the Government who was discussing the subject.

"TID-BITS."

EXPOSITION—"As sure as a gun," you will enjoy a trip to the Exposition. Don't take out the words, but take the gun. It will soon be over. You do not realize the amount of pleasure you are missing.

EXPOSITION—"Throw physic to the dogs! I'll none of it." A visit to the Exposition will drive away the blues, and cure most of the ailments that beset the person to whom they are curable. Levy and his glorious band will discourse most elegant music for you.

EXPOSITION—"Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war." The same may be said of the Exposition; it is a place of gladness, not of sadness. Levy and his band will entertain you with music "fit for the gods."

EXPOSITION—"No tears dim the sweet look of peace." The same may be said of the Exposition; it is a place of gladness, not of sadness. Levy and his band will entertain you with music "fit for the gods."

(Something New To-morrow.)

Luella Place.

Situated on Highland avenue, near the park, elevated above the fogs and dampness of the lower valley, commanding a wide and interesting view, perfectly graded, with broad asphaltum streets and avenues and concrete walks, a complete system of sewerage, electric cars right to the grounds, presents attractive features never before equaled in Pittsburgh, and which will not fail to command the approval of those in quest of perfect East End home sites. Lots in this plan will be offered for sale in a few days.

Attention, G. A. R., on to Washington and Gettysburg.

Post 123 will leave Pittsburgh at 9:30 P. M., Saturday, September 17, in special train via the B. & O. R. R. to the encampment at Washington, D. C. The train will arrive at Gettysburg, arriving in Gettysburg on Sunday morning about 10 o'clock, spending the day there, arriving in Washington Sunday night. All comrades wishing to take in Gettysburg are invited to join this train. The Grand Army band will accompany this post.

WHY NOT buy your Fall Overcoat at once? We have them ready to put on. Will they fit? Are they well made? Are they correct style? How can you know this unless you see for yourself. We believe you have confidence in our statements, we are sure of it—from your continued patronage. Season after season you are buying your Made-to-Measure Suits. Why not try us for Fall Overcoats? Why not a five or ten dollar bill additional in your exchequer. You'll save that much, our word for it.

To-day's story on Made-to-Measure Clothing: We're filled with orders. An increase every day. The goods, prices, our fitting and workmanship must be satisfactory, else we would not be having many more orders than last year.

NO MORE IRISH COERION.

The Privy Council at Dublin Puts an End to the System.

DUBLIN, Sept. 15.—At the meeting of the Privy Council to-day it was decided to revoke all the proclamations hitherto made under the provisions of the coercion act, and also to revoke the proclamation of the National League as a dangerous society.

The Arizona Kicker's Grocery Store.

We beg to announce to the public that we have opened a grocery store in connection with the Kicker office. Having run a partition across the room, the front will be stocked with choice groceries and our literary and grocery emporium will hereafter be one and inseparable. We do this that the editors will have a legitimate way of disposing of sundry bushels of potatoes, dried apples, hen fruit and turnips contributed by our readers in return for the yearly subscription. Cash being preferred to perishable commodities, these goods will be found in our front office at "forced sale" prices. In addition to our regular stock we will also handle Camellia flour, the acknowledged queen of flours. This will be our only brand, as there is no call for it in this neck of the woods. Our wife uses it and says it is the best bread maker going, being always white, pure and regular.
