THROUGH IN A RUSH.

All the Officers of the Republican Leagues Are Re-Elected

WITHOUT A BIT OF OPPOSITION.

The Next Meeting to Be Held at Louisville, the Middle of May.

WHITELAW REID TO THE DELEGATES

EUFFALO, Sept. 16.-General Clarkson called the National Republican League Convention to order at 11 o'clock this morning. Meetings of various committees delayed the opening of the session for a full hour. During the morning a determined effort developed to deteat A. B. Humphrey for Secretary. The Committee on Time and Place reported in favor of Louisville as the place and the second Wednesday in May as the time for holding the next annual convention. Hon, Milan Gallagher, of Cleveland, moved that Cleveland be substituted for Louisville. After a spirited discussion, Louisville was chosen and the committee's recommendation of time was also indersed.

General Fairchild, of Wisconsin, presented the report of the Committee on Res-clutions, as follows:

The representatives of the Republican clubs of the United States, in convention assembled, mindful of the splendid history of the Republican party, a history lumin-ous with heroic services rendered our beloved country, make the following declara-tion of principles:

The Declaration of Principles. First-We most heartily indorse the wise, patriotic and state-manlike administration of President Harrison.

Second-Believing that the principles ansecond—neteving that the principles au-nounced by the representatives of the Re-publican party at Minneapolis, in National Convention assembled, fully express the sentiments of the Republican League of the United States, we therefore most cordially indorse those principles to the end that the continued prosperity of our country may be assured.

indorse those principles to the end that the continued prosperity of our country may be assured.

Third—The Republican party has been, from its birth, the advocate of all measures of advancement and progress. Its principles are and always have been such that appeal to young men having the good of their country at heart. We cordially invite all young yoters who believe in the prosperity and perpetuity of the union, to unite their political fortunes with the Republican party.

Fourth—Resolved, That it be expressed as the sense of this convention that the Republican press of the country is one of the most potent agencies that may promote the principles of Republicanism, and that it is worthy of the hearty encouragement and support of all Republicans.

Resolved, That in the Inture each State and Territory shall be entitled to six delegates at large from each Congressional district. Each college Republican club in the United States shall be entitled to one delegate, and each college where there is but one college is located to two delegates in the national convention. The title of colleges to representation under this provision shall be subject to the action of the Executive Committee. We recommend that Republicans residing in the District of Columbia, having a legal residence in the States and Territories, connect themselves with the National Republican League.

All the Old Officers Re-Elected.

All the Old Officers Re-Elected. Nominations for officers then was the order, with Colonel McAlpin as temporary chairman. W. I. Squire, of Toledo, was the first to get the floor. He nominated Mr. Clarkson for President. By a unanimous rising vote General Clarkson was reelected, and Raymond, of Illinois; Blanchard, of New York, and Seamans, of California was reasonable to the control of the contro fornia, were named as a committee to notify General Clarkson.

Then came nominations for Secretary.

Mr. Curtiss, of Binghamton, placed A. B.
Humphrey, the present Secretary, in nomination for re-election. He spoke very highly of Mr. Humphrey's executive ability. A vote was called for, and when it was taken it was found that the opposition had dropped out of sight. Humphrey was elected by acclamation. Treasurer Lounsberry was also unanimously re-elected.

When General Clarkson entered the hall
he was greeted with deafening cheers.
Upon the stage Colonel McAlpin handed him the gavel, with brief, complimentary words. "As a good soldier," said Mr. Clarkson, "I obey orders and accept the honor you have conferred upon me. I had hoped you would have selected a better man."

"Impossible!" cried many voices. The convention then proceeded to name vice presidents and executive committeemen, as follows: One each from each State and Territory represented. But before the selection was completed it was decided, in view of the arrival of Mr. Reid, to leave it until 4 o'clock.

A Speech From Whitelaw Reid.

Whitelaw Reid was escorted into the hall shortly before I o'clock by a large delega-tion, headed by a band and with waving plumes. He was given a splendidly en-thusiastic reception. The convention fairly went wild for several minutes. Mr. Reid's speech was as follows:

Mr. Charman and Ladies and Gentlemen:

Notice was served upon me the moment we left the rails by train that no speech was expected. Afterward your Chairman told me that the convention was about adjourning for dinner. You will testify that two such statements as these fully warrant even a candidate in making no speech. [Applause and laughter.] On this occasion certainly no words shall detain you from the further exercises to which the Chairman so hopefully pointed, excepting merely words of congratulation that the Republican fires are burning so brightly in the Western part of the State. [Applause.] Because a vast deal of interest has not thus are been shown in the canvass, our opponents have somethes flattered themselves that the Republican cause was in an apathetic state. I beg you gentlemen, say nothing whatever to disabuse them of that conviction.

A Peculiarity of the Republican Party. Mr. Chairman and Ladies and Gentlemen:

A Peculiarity of the Republican Party. Those of you who have known the Republican party in storm as well as in sunshine know that its best work has been done at the time when its adversaries believed it to be beaten. [Applause.] At present they only believe we are apathetic. Let us en-courage them, if possible, to believe morecourage them, if possible, to believe morelet us encourage them to believe that we think that the conditions in the Northern part of New England are absolutely against us. If they will only have the kindness to continue in that conviction they will add more to the many kindnesses that they have already conterred in this campaign, from the formation of their platform at Chicago on down, upon the Republican party. Not another word, Mr. Chairman, save to repeat to you and to this convention my best thanks for this condial greeting, and to extend to you my warmest congratulations upon the prospects of Republican triumph, which the work of the lengue and the spirit and purpose of theRepublican party throughout the nation assure. [Applause.]
On teh eve of adjournment Mr. Seaman

On teh eve of adjournment Mr. Seaman, of California, obtained unanimous consent to make a motion. He moved that the pompas plume selected by the Republicans of California as their emblem, receive the indorsement of the national league convention. This was carried, with cheers for Adjournment of the Convention.

The convention then adjourned sine die. Three cheers were given for Harrison and Reid, and the delegates crowded forward toward Mr. Reid, who remained on the stage several minutes, shaking hands with those who thronged about him.

those who thronged about him.

While the League meeting was in progress Mrs. J. Ellen Foster was presiding over a meeting of women in an adjoining hall, there being a good attendance. Mrs. Foster opened the meeting with some preliminary remarks preparatory to the work the women expected to do in the campaign. Other speakers were Mrs. Mary Stuart Coffin, of Michigan, who spoke of the work in that State; Mrs. Frances W. Howard, of Washington, who detailed the work of the National Women's League; Mrs. Leggett, of Boston; Mrs. Thomas W. Chase, of Rhode Island, and Hon. John M. Thurston, of Nebraska.

Shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon the American Republican College League began its session in a small hall adjoining the main convention hall. There was an excellent attendance and much enthusiasm The college delegates numbered about 150, and represented Yale, Harvard, Cornell, Union, Rutgers and Ann Arbor, besides many preparatory and high schools. The meeting was called to order by President Burke, who made a lengthy address, which was received with applease after which the was received with applause, after which the Glee Club sang some selections.

Mr. Beld Makes Another Speech. A mass meeting was called to order at Music Hall by General Clarkson at 4:30 o'clock. In a few words he introduced Hon. Whitelaw Reid as the candidate for Vice President of the United States, who was received with loud cheers. After thanking the audience for the reception Mr. Reid spoke on the chief issues of the campaign dwelling on the teriff and recicampaign, dwelling on the tariff and reci-procity. Of the present condition of affairs, he said:

Is it not true in the experience of all of you that a Presidental year has always been considered a bad business year? Why? Because the future is uncertain. Merchants hesitate to make purchases or manufacturers to extend their operations beyond current orders or financiers to take risks or employers of labor to make contracts, until they know whather the verifications. tracts, until they know whether the verdict in November would leave everything as it is or everything unsettled. In a word, they could not make their calculations till they knew what to count on. For the first time, I venture to say, in the memory of any of you, the Presidental campaign, lar from producing stagnation, is attended by general prosperity and brisk business. Not even the altogether unusual and radical threats of change and the unexpected specter of cholera combined have this year been able to cast a chill over the general confidence, or slacken the activities of buoyant business. Why? Is it not because the business world has made up its mind that there is to be no change? With an abiding faith in common sense and sober second thought, the average American citizen has concluded that he knows how to let well enough alone. tracts, until they know whether the verdica
