

25 MILES OF VETERANS

In the huge Grand Army Parade, the Biggest Thing of the Kind

THAT THE COUNTRY EVER BEHELD

Rainy Weather Prevents a Repetition of the Success Next Day.

LOTS OF WORK FOR THE RAILROADS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Eighty thousand veterans in line, beside 236 other organizations, such as bands and so on, a line 25 miles in length, time eight hours, spectators 500,000. That is the summing up of the grand parade of yesterday by those who took notes and have had their heads together to-day in regard to this momentous matter.

It was therefore not only the greatest parade in the history of the Grand Army, but the greatest in the history of the country. Washington is proud of it, and the Grand Army to boot. They are to-day to-day that the parade is a success as to them. It seems as though Uncle Jerry Rusk, who rode all through the review yesterday, made the weather to suit for that day, but exhausted his means and permitted Jupiter Pluvius to get the better of him, as to-day has been as disgustingly nasty as yesterday was perfectly lovely.

One Parade Hurt I the Rain.

The turning of the little wheels within the big wheel of the Grand Army, in the shape of parades of minor organizations, was to a great extent spoiled by the rain which has pelted down constantly and chillily since nine o'clock. The parade of the Union Veteran Legion, which was to have been quite an event, was a very small affair. The Pennsylvania Reserves marched nearly their full number of men to march to Georgetown, and then ride by car to Tenleytown. But the most of the success as though they would just as lief give it all up were it not a matter of pride with them to make a nice showing on this particular occasion.

No all bedraggled, but with unflinching spirit and martial step, elastic almost as they were in the early eighties, they took up their line of march in the rain, went out to Tenley town, as per programme, looked over their old marching ground, passed over what is left of Fort Penn, went to "The Willows," an elegant road hotel, where the stately mistress, now Mrs. Kirkwood, was a few years ago the wife of Signor Bramelli, the artist who frescoed the dome of the Capitol, and there partook of a grateful banquet and indulged in toasts, pipes, stories and speeches until there was no thought of the rain without.

A Most Agreeable Hostelry.

It was a more agreeable barracks, this pretty hostelry, "The Willows," than those which the gallant Reserves occupied in the dark days of the war, and in which they spent many an hour with worse weather beating upon them than that which made the inside of the hotel doubly attractive to-day for the other tens of thousands who were forced indoors by the weather—as many of them as could get in. They scattered to the sixteen winds of the heavens. They trooped down the Esplanade on some of the elegant steamers, which ply on that broad, beautiful river; they crowded the Departments, and all of the public buildings to suffocation; they held reunions in their quarters.

The great building of the Capitol was thronged all day, from sub-basement to the highest balcony of the dome, where occasionally in the rain could be seen the faint glares and the dots of umbrellas of the thousands that streamed up and down the winding stairs from early morning till dark night.

Secretary Charles Foster Greatly Delayed.

Cabinet officers and officials of departments found it impossible to transact any business, they were so overrun with visitors from their respective States. Secretary Foster, of the Treasury Department, has been delayed in his attention to official business by the cholera scare that he has been forced to attempt the impossible by sticking to his desk during the stay of the Grand Army, but he might as well have abandoned his purpose, as he is interrupted every moment, and can scarcely steal time to sign his official mail. He had a constant stream of Ohioans to-day, and his usual snailly almost forsook him at times. To one of the chief men, just as he was in the midst of his final and necessary work of the day, in came half a hundred little cadets in gray from Hamilton, and he had to shake hands with every one of the little fellows, to whom the visit was the event of their lives.

This is a fair specimen of the scenes enacted in all of the departments. Where the hundreds of visitors who slept outdoors, or who did not sleep at all, either last night or the previous nights saw the truth of the legend, are sleeping to-night, is a problem. Hereafter the nights have been clear and dry, if a trifle cool, but this one is lumpy and chilly, and the comfort of the cur, or the genial and comfortable doorway of other nights are out of the question. The stations have been crowded all day with the departing guests, and they will be crowded for several days more before the crowd of visitors can be got out of the city.

Some Old Scenes at the Stations.

The scenes at the stations and the uptown ticket offices are both grotesque and pathetic. Many of the old soldiers are there without money or ticket, and pleading for means to get home. It is said that in nearly every case of this kind the veteran has sold his ticket to get additional food with which to see the sights of the gay capital, and therefore the railroads will be glad to respond to the frequent demands of this sort. Where the character of the men is good they can always get assistance from their posts, but in the many other cases it is probable the old fellows will be left to shift for themselves. One of the impetuous ones at the Pennsylvania station to-day was an old man of 77 years, all the way from Michigan, who had "lost his ticket," and was wondering, in a manner that plainly showed he had been in the same fix before, how he was going to get out of the city. He came to the usual philosophical conclusion that as this was the seat of government, and as the Government must take care of the old soldiers, there was little danger that he would not come out all right in the end. It may safely be said, however, that hundreds, if not thousands of the inevitable shiftless men will be left "on the town" far some time to come.

Great Credit Due the Railroads.

To the railroads credit must be given for the admirable manner in which they have managed this wonderful affair, and especially at this end of the lines where trains concentrated from branches and other lines until they were almost trying to climb over the top of one another. With only the two trunk lines which, the Grand Army, West and Southern, the task of bringing in the visitors without mishap was one of herculean proportions, and yet all the accidents that have occurred have been distant from the city and not where the trains are thickest. To Passenger Agents Boyd, of the Pennsylvania, and Seull, of the Baltimore and Ohio, and to the local passenger agents, Mr. Park, of the Pennsylvania, and Mr. Hoge, of the Baltimore and Ohio, the greatest praise is due for the marvelous manner in which they have fulfilled their trying duties, which, however, are but beginning, in so far as the home stretch is concerned. From now until Monday the roads will be taxed to their utmost, and trains will be sent thundering closely after each other every few minutes.

NOTHING NEW AT THE ELBA.

Strikers Claim the Firm Is Having No End of Trouble in Operating.

The strikers at the Elba are jubilant over the trouble the firm seems to be having in starting their works successfully. They claim that only 16 furnaces are in operation and that nothing has been turned out that is at all marketable or fit for use. The leaders say that there will be no trouble at the Elba. They intend to win the strike, they say, with law and order on their side, and will offer no violence to any one who works in the mill. Moral suasion is what they will use.

Manager Everson said yesterday: "To-day is the best day we have had so far. We are working away smoothly and are having no trouble. We will be getting more men every day from this on."

An information was made yesterday morning before Alderman Gripp by Mrs. M. Cook, wife of a manager of the Elba Works, against Elizabeth Kant, Johanna Duka and Catherine Jorce for selling hats made in the mill. They will have a hearing to-morrow.

Nailers Win Their Struggle.

The nailers of the Jefferson Iron Works at Steubenville won their point yesterday, after holding out three months. The management, in a conference with the workers, agreed to pay the same price for both hot and cold nails which was in vogue before the trouble. The rollers and heaters went to work Monday, and the nailers will commence to-day in a few days. The entire mill will then be in operation.

Prizes for the Best Steel.

James Stroup, a scraper; William Binard, a blower, and James Maloney, a heater, were the lucky men who drew the $20 prizes at the Edgar Thomson Steel Works at Braddock for making the best steel.

A New Woolen Manufactory.

A woolen manufacturing company with a capital of $40,000 was granted a charter under the name of the Parsley Woolen Company. The works will be located at Mansfield, Tloga county, Pa.

Introducing a New Process.

A new converting furnace to make steel rails will be introduced at the Millvale mill shortly. It is the invention of a German expert steel maker and will be an entirely new process.

THE JUNIOR ORDER AT EASTON

Elect Their Officers for the Ensuing Year and Some of Their Delegates.

EASTON, Pa., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—The State Council of the Jr. O. U. A. M. heard reports from officers to-day. This afternoon the election of officers and representatives to the National Council began, but at the hour of adjournment the council was not completed. The council to-day sent greetings to the State Councils of New Hampshire and Massachusetts, in session this week, and to the G. A. R. at Washington's.

The following are the new officers: Con-

Concillor, C. W. Raymond, Middletown; Vice Concillor, W. T. Kerr, Pittsburg; Council Secretary, Edward S. Deemer, Philadelphia; Council Treasurer, John W. Calver, Philadelphia; Representatives to National Council—P. A. Shaner, McKeesport; George Hobson, Philadelphia; John Engle, Pittsburg; Frank Armstrong, Meadville.

THE TWO-HEADED BOYS

Exact Opposite Coming to the World's Museum-Theater Next Week.

Miss Josephine Myrtle Corbin, a very handsome lady of 20 summers, of Southern birth and parentage, is hotly contesting the laurels with the "king of curiosities" of the "two-headed boy" is called. Miss Corbin says she has equally as good a claim to be called the queen of curiosities as the two-headed boy as to his title, as in a reversed position they are alike, and, if anything, she is the most wonderful. Miss Corbin's peculiar anatomical characteristics lie in the singular double and single formations at the extremities, the upper part of her anatomy being one person, and the lower part two persons. She has one head, two arms and four legs, and a double body, or rather two bodies. Miss Corbin is a very bright and intelligent young lady, and owing to her double development. She will be on exhibition at the World's Museum-Theater, Allegheny, for two weeks, beginning next Monday, and she extends a cordial invitation to the ladies of the two cities to call on her and to be present during her stay, when she will take great pleasure in talking to them and describing fully her remarkable double existence.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S EXHIBITION.

Over 5,000 of Them Find Amusement at the Exposition Yesterday.

The attendance at the Exposition yesterday was very large. There were three excursion parties from out of town. The school children swelled the crowd in the afternoon. Over 5,000 of them from Pittsburg and Allegheny were there. A great number of the people took advantage of the excursion down the Ohio given by the steamer Nellie Hudson.

Prof. Cromwell gave his illustrated lecture, "Salt Lake and the Mormons," yesterday afternoon. Last night his subject was, "Castles of the River Rhine." Prof. Levy's band, of course, was one of the great features.

CONROY, PRUGH & CO.,

41-47 Western Ave., Allegheny.

It will be of interest to the visitors who have so much admired the fine exhibits of mirrors made by the firm, not only at their stand but in the band stand, that their American plate glass is used by them in their extensive factory, and they not only make mirrors but all the fine grades, plain and fancy, for architectural purposes. They have found the American glass the very best for these purposes. This is proven by the magnificent results shown at their display. No prettier or more artistic mirror can be found in the building than this brilliant spot lighted by electric lamps.

Washburn's Mandolins and Guitars.

Persons about to take up the study of either the mandolin or guitar—now the popular instruments in fashionable society—should secure one of the celebrated Washburn makes. Why? Because they are the only instruments constructed on scientific principles which produce tone qualities unequalled by any other make. From any point of view the Washburn instruments are beautiful works of art. The prices are moderate. The genuine can be seen at H. Kiebler & Bro.'s Music Store, No. 505 Wood street. Send for catalogue.

Lavish Display of Wire-Work.

This exhibit, the only one of the kind in the building, is so light and pretty, and the designs so numerous are of such desirable, useful articles that visitors want to see it often. The entire assortment of grilles and scroll iron work, the models of fire escapes and bank vaults give an inkling of the manufactures in heavy iron of the Taylor & Dean's, Nos. 201-5 Market street.
