Stroke of Paralysis.

FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT, 1

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Everybody was shocked, though nobody was surprised, to read this morning of a paralytic stroke suffered by Justice Lamar, of the Supreme Court. Though it was stated that the stroke occurred last Wednesday, the fact was known to no one in this city until to-day.

He has almost entirely recovered and to-day

Justice Lamar has declined rapidly in well for years. During the last year, pre-he wasted away until he was hardly more than a shadow, and strangers looked with pity on the man, remarkable of figure and

Criticism went beyond the point of fault-finding, in astonishment as to what it could all mean. As Secretary of the Interior Lamar was notably incompetent. He rendered many decisions that were remarkable for their errors or their mistiness, and many of them were of necessity suppressed by his inferiors in office, His decisions were few, however, as most of the duties of his office were performed by his assistants. Often he was aroused from his condition of lethargy with difficulty merely to induce him to write his mame to some official document. HEALTH BEFORE POLITICS

The Thought of the Keystone Junior Senator, Just at Present.

INPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. JACKSONVILLE, FLA., Sept. 25 .- "I'm much improved in health," was Senator Quay's reply this morning to a question as to how he had enjoyed his tarpon fishing vacation at St. Lucie. "That's what I went down here for, and the result, therefore, is very satisfactory."

"Are you going back North to take a hand in the campaign, Mr. Quay?"

"The first thing I do will be to consult a physician, some specialist, probably. My vertigo hasn't left me, and I want to know why, mighty quick, and apply the remedy."

Mr. Quay had been troubled with dizzy spells before he came South this time, and they have been quite as frequent here as before. "When I lie down," he said, "it seems as if the whole room was swimming round in mid air. It's just the same when walking or sitting still. I have never been overcome by this vertigo, have never tallen, even, but I feel that it is not safe to be left alone while I am subject to these spells. I don't know what might happen. So my first duty is to get my health back, not to jump into politics."

Quay Doesn't Need Any Placating.

"Do you think any effort will be made to placate you before the November election?" "I don't know why there should. I don't know that there's any reason to suppose that I need placating. My relations with Harrison have been cordial as far as it was necessary for them to be. When I've wanted anything of him I've always gone wanted anything of him I've always gone straight to him for it, and I've generally The President of the club had called on him deal to say about our strained relations, and have charged open personal hostility between us, but you know how that is yourself," and the Senator's right eye dropped its lower lid a bit.

Mr. Quay said he had read in the newspapers that President Harrison had actually called on Platt in New York. "I would hardly believe it," he added. "Has this report ever been confirmed? I should want looks to me as if Harrison's election was a dead certainty. No changes in the West can change the result, in my opinion. If Harrison carries New York he will be elected, and he's going to carry New York, too,

Why Cleveland Will Lose New York. "I have seen some statements to the effeet that, by reason of a fear of the trade disturbances incident to the tariff legislation which would be inevitable with a Democratic Congress and a Democratic administration, business men in the New York Democracy favor Harrison's re-election. But I don't take any stock in this. Cleveland will be beaten by dissensions in the New York Democracy-nothing else. My belief is that the business people throughout the country would as lief have Cleveland for President as Harrison, as far as their business interests go. A split in his party, a lack of unity in sentiment for him, is what is going to defeat him."

"Do you look for anything sensational in Cleveland's letter of acceptance, Senator?" "Well, it's a long time coming; isn't it? I think he must be wrestling with the tariff plank, and that other one committing his party to an advocacy of wildcat banks; don't you? I can't for the life of me see how Cleveland can inderse the Chicago tariff plank. He must be preparing a modification of it, in some way.

Cleveland's Strength With the Bankers. "And that wildcat bank plank-he can't stand squarely on that. He is particularly sound in his financial views. The financial interests all over the country swear by Cleveland, especially the bankers. kept the national banks well stuffed with Government deposits-or rather, Secretary Pairchild did it for him. There was a big Treasury surplus, you remember, in those days. So I can't see how he can commit himself to the Democracy's 'wildeat bank' politics. Sometimes it seems to me actually as if that Chicago platform had been framed especially to kill off Cleveland with. I shall await that letter of acceptance with much interest."

The talk drifting into Pennsylvania polities, Senator Quay said there was nothing new in the situation there that he had been apprised of. "Will you be a candidate before the new Legislature for re-election to the United States Senate?" he was asked.

Democrat, for the Senate?" "Oh, he's a Mugwump himself, a Mugwump Democrat. You know what that is." "The tail end of a genuine Mugwump?" was auggested.

Senator Quay nodded his head approvingly and laughed heartily.

Not Juggling With Florida's Vote. When told of the opinion recently advanced by some Northern newspapers that he was down here in Florida 'juggling with the Florida electoral vote," he laughed even more heartily. "I don't believe," he said, "that it can be juggled with. I guess the Democrats have got it nailed down pretty close to the floor, haven't they? No politician of either party has visited me in Florida. I have had no letters on the subject, and our cottage is three miles from a telegraph office. Senator Quay read aloud from a newspaper the headlines of a Washington special noting the return of Mrs. Harrison to the White House. "Poor woman," he said, "I'm afraid she's going to die." There was much feeling in his tone and his sympathy for the President was manifestly a gennine one.

The Senator and his son Dick will both return to St. Lucie next November, seven weeks before Congress opens.

THE INFLUENCE CLUB DEAD.

Woman's Movement Coolly Snubbed by the Democratic Leaders.

New York, Sept. 25 .- [Special.]-What it was proposed to call the Frances Cleveland Influence Club will not participate in the National Convention of Democratic clubs in this city next month. Since its organization, three months ago, it has been awaiting the indorsement of the National Democratic Committee. This indorsement has not been forthcoming, and the secretary of the club has resigned in disgust. The secretary is Miss Sarah E. Fuller. She was seen to-day Miss Sarah E. Fuller. She was seen to-day at Central Park, Long Island, where she has been spending the summer. "So far as I am concerned," said Miss Fuller, "the Influence Club is dead It has never been renamed since Grover Cleveland wrote refusing to let Mrs. Cleveland's name be used. If the Democratic Committee had given us support we would now be doing effective work. The Republicans have backed Mrs. J. Ellen Foster in her organization of Republican women, and I understand that the Republicans intend to organize the colored women into clubs. It seems to me that if women can heip the Republicans, they might at least be recognized by the Democrats."

Miss Fuller has written to Mrs. Ormsby, the President of the club, that in her opinion it would be well worth while for the club to disband. The Democratic Campaign Committee was the body from which the Democratic clubs expected assistance. The Chairman, Don M. He was assured that the administration had succeeded in actually "placating" the New York Republican boss, and then he was asked: "So the existing relations between you and the Harrison administration are not likely to be changed at all in the next six weeks, are they?"

"Not that I know of. Pennsylvania's "Not that I know of. Pennsylvania's vote is sure for Harrison, isn't it? I've nothing to ask of the administration, and I don't know what I've got to give it, if it should ask for anything from me."

When asked about the general situation politically, Senator Quay said: "I don't speak from the inside, of course. I'm no longer a member of the National Committee, and have not been in close touch with the situation for many weeks. But it looks to me as if Harrison's election was a lost of the campaign.

LESSONS OF CHOLERA.

Fierce Onslaught From the Pulpit Upon the New York Health Authorities, Tammany Hall and the Steamship Companies-No Quarantine Against Anarchy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Rev. Thomas Dixon, before his sermon to-day, spoke of the lesson America should learn from the appearance of cholera. Said he in part:

"The sudden appearance of Asiatic cholera in the bay of New York carries with it a startling message to the people of America. We have been taught that pothouse politics is a poor training for health officials. We must commend in the past the zeal with which our quarantine officers have sought to quarantine officers have sought to prevent the entrance of the disease into the city; but say what we will about the efficiency of our quarantine, its methods have been a jumble of stupidity and brutality, with scarcely a trace of executive ability backed by scientific knowledge. The public opinion that supports such methods is no better than the mob of ignorant baymen that drove helpless women and children with guns and stones from the landing at Fire Island.

"The conduct of this quarantine business has not only been a disgrace to the American nation—it is more. It is a stigma on the Anglo-Saxon race. It has lowered the record of humanity itself. As for this, we must thank our pot-house politicians, whose life principle is, to the victor—beiong the apolis."

"We have leared that there are great steam ship companies whose sole aim in life is to coin money. To do this they do not he sitate to sell the health of $0,000,000 people in America for the price of the steerage passage of a few hundred pest-stricken refugees. Every city in America is at the mercy of New York. New York is at the mercy of every city in Europe. Let our brethren in other cities remember this when they apologize for and excuse the villatnies of Tammany Hall for the sake of the vote the gang polls in a Presidental election. Let the men who stand for decency in their home cities, and yet accent with a chuckle an invitation to speak in the den on Fourteenth street, remember these facts. Tammany Hall is not simply a local disgrace. It may be a national scourge. spoils.

"I believe that God has sent the cholera to our doors as an object lesson to tell us of the still more deadly moral disease we are daily importing. What is the sense of movdaily importing. What is the sense of moving heaven and earth to quarantine a few victims of pest-ridden Hamburg, and at the same time opening wide our gates to John Most and Berkman? Why buy an island to quarantine 300 well American citizens and open our gates to the thousands who formed the mobs at Haymarket Square, delivered New Orleans over to the reign of the assassin and called forth an army in Pennsylvania and New York to restore order? Does any thinking man doubt, in view of recent events, that these steamship companies are in collusion with the prisons and poorhouses of Europe?"

DECEIVED BY A BRIGHT STAR.

Why Amateurs Imagine They Saw the Fifth Moon of Jupiter.

San Francisco, Sept. 25.-Prof. E. Barnard, the noted astronomer who recently discov ered Jupiter's fifth satellite, has sent a long communication from Lick Observatory in reference to the statement by Lawyer Cognard, first discovered the new moon. Prof. Barnard says:

for the faintness of the star that can be seen with it. No five-inch telescope would show this satellite if it were isolated on a dark sky from the planet. Since Mr. Cogley's claim was published, I have received a letter from a minister of the gospel whalives in one of the Eastern cities, and who claims to have discovered the firth satellite with a small telescope. It is unfortunate that on the night of the discovery there was a bright star near Jupiter, and every amateur that looked at the planet on that date will now recall to himself that he then, also, saw five moons of Jupiter."

MRS. HARRISON NO WORSE.

A Night of Unusual Wakefulness Causes Rumor That Is Denied.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.-The weather wa very oppressive in Washington last night, particularly before midnight. Its effect was apparent on Mrs. Harrison, who was unusu-ally restless and wakeful. This fact gave rise to a rumor which was current to-night that there had been a change for the worse n her condition. This, however, Dr. Gardner, her physician his failure had been so rapid and so sure for months.

Somewhere in the country there are a few scattered fragments of a lamily who have watched with peculiar interest the strange affection of Justice Lamar. One of them is an elderly widow and a clerk on a small salary in the Treasury Department. Sie is the widow of Judge Chisholm, who was assassinated by the Ku Klux years ago in Mississippi during the days of reconstruction. If will be remembered that after the conviction of members of the murderous "Klan" by the fearless course of Judge Chisholm, the beautiful mansion of the Judge was surrounded, the owner riddled with bullets as he was trying to argue with the mob, and his young daughter murdered at his side as she stood there thinking that the fiends would not dare to shoot her father in her presence. The remaining members of the family were saved only by the exertions of some of the better class of citizens who were horrified at the murder of the child.

Called a Case of Retribution. This, however, Dr. Gardner, her physician, asserts is not the case. He reports that Mrs. Harrison slept several hours during the day, and took her usual amount of nourishment, and that she is as comfortable as usual to-night and is resting quietly. No new complication of any character has manifested itself, nor is there an indication of any. Called a Case of Retribution. The Chisholms have always held that Judge Lamar's course had much to do with ations. In his capacity counsel for the Ku-Klux it is said that he virtually advised his clients to resort to the extremest measures to avoid being taken to prison. It is but stating a truth known to many persons here, that those who were best acquainted with the conduct of Lamar in connection with that block and bloody episode in the history of Mississippi look upon his strange condition of the last few years as a result of, if not retribution for, his acts of that time, brought about, partially at least, by his brooding over the almost unparalleled ferceity of the murder of Judge Chisholm and his daughter, the ruin of one of the loveliest homes in the State, and the permanent expatriation of the remaining members of the broken-hearted family.

It is possible that in the heat of his plea as counsel for the Ku-Klux, Lamar went farther than he thought, but that he threatened with death and advised the death of any who dared to take a hand in the conviction of the men under arrest, or in their transportation to prison if convicted, is said to be capable of the clearest proof. The camp, after a quiet and peaceful day, was thrown into excitement by the appearance within the lines of a tramp whose arance within the lines of a tramp whose arrival is enshrouded in mystery. The man has the appearance of having received rough usage, from the torn state of his clothing and his hatless head. He is a German and gave his name as Anton Duda. He is apparently a lunatic, and told the officers he left New York, the last time he was shaved, apparently some months since, and that he walked here on the water. He added that he had been locked up for three months for voluntarily walking into prison. As far as can be learned, the man eluded the sentiuels posted by the New Jersey authorities at the State line boundary, and got on the ground occupied by the regular troops at Sandy Hook, who turned him over into the marine camp, whose officers in turn, ran him out of their lines into Camp Low under the impression that he was an escaped immigrant.

Let him be ever so deeply abstracted, if a fellow-Senator sought him in the cloak-rooms, where he usually lay as one half dead, and told him of some unusual assault in the way of flaunting the "bloody shirt" in the face of the South, Lamar would be on fire at once, his letharry all gone in a moment, and for an hour or more he would hurl eloquent denunciations at the Senator who had dared to put an insult upon a fallen foe or to impugn the hour of any man in the South. receive the most absent and irrevelant answers to their questions, and would go away reeling that they had not been understood, that they had not even been heard; and the wonder that one in his condition should be retained in office went to every part of the country. At the very time when gossip was most rife in regard to the inability of Lamar to perform the duties of his office as Secretary, everybody except the few who had been consulted was astounded to hear of his nomination for the position on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States. HARTFORD, MICH., Sept. 25 .- Five drunken lumbermen had a desperate fight near Covert yesterday, which resulted in the death of two of them. Morris Casselman, George Casselman, J. Vencame, C. Burton ouble, having been paid off, chipped in and bought a gallon of whisky, which they took to work with them. Drink followed drink until all thought of labor had fled and the crowd became uproarious. During some rough skylarking one of the Casselmans be-came angered and struck at Burton. The came angered and struck at Burton. The row became general and blows fell thick and fast.

Suddenly George Casselman whipped out a revolver. With a savage yell the others grasped their axes and commenced a flerce and bloody battle. Morris Casselman sprang forward in defense of his brother, but too late. The keen ax descended and buried itself in the flesh of George Casselman, who fell to the earth fatally wounded. Venamen succeeded in inflicting a slight wound upon his opponent, but was in turn cut down and lay dying on the ground. The sight of their terrible work sobered Burton and Strouble, who threw away their axes and fled. Morris Casselman, as soon as his wounds would alto be regretted, as exposing Lamar more than ever to the scrutiny and criticism of the public. Since he took his seat with the august body who sit in their somber gowns in the old Senate chamber, he has scarcely ever roused himself. Much of the time during the sessions of the court, when he has been present at all, he has slept with his chin upon his bosom in the presence of the court and of the wondering visitors who throng the chamber daily, and who never failed to ask, "who is the old fellow who is fast selept" He would leave the court room and walk in the streets in an abstracted way, and probably go far out of his road. He has been known to fumble around a fire alarm box trying to drop a letter into it, until some bystander would inform him of his mistake, and scores of other instances of his abstraction might be told.

All this is painful, but the most painful part of it was that he should have been placed in this high position when he was known to have passed into such a physical and mental condition as to render him absolutely unfit for the office, and to become unavoidably a subject of remark and wonder. Casselman, as soon as his wounds would al-low him, made his way to the cabin of a lumberman and made known the details of sailors. This morning he made the matter a subject of earnest appeal to the members of his congregation. He dwelt at length upon the great need of such an institution in Chicago, and said:

"We must do something to save these men. They now have no place to go but to the dives and sailoons. What wonder then that they are so disreputable?"

"You're a liar!" yelled a voice in the back of the church. "I'm a sailor, and we are not disreputable. We don't want any bethel home. What we want is more wares." What we want is more wages And the toiler of the sea gave to the congregation his personal opinion of the pus-tor, which was neither flattering nor couched in polite language. All efforts to pacify him falled, and he was hustled through the sacred portals by an array of ushers.

BISMARCK AS BITTER AS EVER,

His Editorials Attacking the Coalition in a Vigorous Way.

SOCIAL DEMOCRATS IN A WRANGLE

[BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.] BERLIN, Sept. 25 .- [Copyright.]-The Black Alliance of Clericals and extreme Conservatives has been consummated in the face of the bitterest opposition of the Liberal press. Ridicule, invective and pessimistic prophecy have been heaped up by Berlin editors in the way of the negotiations for this coalition, yet, in spite of all, Count Caprivi has found the means which will enable him to "swim against the stream," against the next session of the Reichstag. There is little doubt, however, that the Alliance cost the Government a high price-the return of the Jesuit orders, at least, and probably more. An attempt to unite the National Liberals and the Independents (Freisinnige) in opposition to the Government coalition has failed completely, owing principally to the jealousy of the leaders. The scheme was impracticable from the first, and be came doubly so when Prince Bismarck was suggested as the probable leader over men whom he delighted to snub when he was in power.

The Opposition Not Discouraged.

Probably not even a temporary understanding in the Reichstag will be possible, and the passage of the military bill will be comparatively easy. This prospect does not discourage the opposition, however, who hope by sheer popular antagonism to counterbalance the majority in Parliament, as was done in the case of the school bill.

Herr Von Helldorff and his small contingent of dissentient Conservatives, who sena-Herr Von Helldorff and his small contingent of dissentient Conservatives, who separated from the regular Conservatives on the school bill issue, have declared emphatically against the military bill. In his weekly newspaper Herr Von Helldorff yesterday expressed the opinion of his faction thus: "A load would be removed from the mind of every patriotic, single-minded German, outside, perhaps, the military circles, if there were still room to hope that the military proposals would be withdrawn unreservedly. The economies and financial situation are generally unfavorable to the enormous ly. The economies and financial struction are generally unfavorable to the enormous increase of expenditure which the bills involve especially for strictly military purposes. Furthermore, every German is aware how strongly the greatest authorities of the past deprecated the adoption of the two years' term of service as an extremely dangerous and perhaps disastrous experiment."

Bismarck Bitterly Attacks the Alliance In the Hamburger Nachrichten, Prince Bis-marck attacks the Black Alliance with that bitterness which he omits no opportunity to express against the Clericals and their party policy. This Alliance, he says, has no resemblance to the old coalition of his resemblance to the old coalition of his regime. His cartel was a combination of healthy elements in the State, and was designed, irrespective of minor difference, to arrest the surrender of the Empire to a theocratic conspiracy engineered by the Ultramontane and Papish contingent. The Verbierle of the revisal of the Ultramontane and Papish contingent. The Nachrich en then urges the revival of the Old cartel to protect the Empire against the irreparable damage which would result from the proposed yielding of the Government to the Catholics. Such a cartel says Bismarck, would be able to oppose to the Government the pressure of a strong, self-reliant Parliament, and re-establish the equilibrium which the legislative power had allowed too long to be ignored.

"If the Government had to face the serried ranks of a united and determined German party, formed from moderate elements," continues Bismarck, through his editor: "if that party had the courage and self-reliance necessary to arrest the pressure editor; "if that party had the courage and self-reliance necessary to arrest the pressure of wishes formulated in higher quarters, except when such wishes were shown clearly to harmonize with the country's welfare and the necessary maintenance of state authority; if the obsequiousness and the jealous selfishness of the lactions were abolished, then the Reichstag might indeed be in a position during the impending struggles to impose on the Government the public welfare as suprema lex, and the Fatherland from drifting upon the quick-sands of elerical dictation."

A Socialistic Democratic Warnels

A Socialistic-Democratic Wrangle. The regulars and the independents of the Social Democratic party had one of their periodical rows on Wednesday evening in Urania Hall, Bangle strasse. A bout 400 me were present, the strong minority being independents. The speakers of the regular were howled down, the names of Bebel and Liebknecht, the Parliamentary leaders, were greeted with cries of "traitor," "capitalists" and "thieves," and eventually the meeting was captured by the disturbers. Comrade Herrmann closed a lurid speech with these words: "Down with the Parliamentary party! Down with the so-called Social Democrats in the Reichstag! Down with everything else tending to enslave the people!" Comrade Wilhelm Werner said that the National Executive Committee of the Social Democratic Regulars were a lot of capitalists no better than other capitalists. The members had recently placed 370,000 marks, their campaign fund for the next election, at interest in the bank of England. Bebel, their campaign fund for the next election, at interest in the bank of England. Bebel, Liebknecht and Singer, he said, ran the party for their own benefit, and spent its funds on high-salaried favorites. Werner added that the recent successes of the Social Democrats in municipal elections was only a foretaste of their successes in the next Parliamentary elections. Both Werner and Herrmann spoke amid wild confusion. Several fights among "comrades" in the rear of the hall and general hooting and yelling closed the meeting.

Wilhelm and the Bismarck Family. The retirement of Major Count August Bismarck and Captain Count Bismarck Bohlen from the Queen's own body dragoons has made a very painful impression here, as nobody believes that they resigned of their nobody believes that they resigned of their own preference. There is little doubt that a hint from high quarters was communicated to them, and that both observed its warning only with the greatest refuctance. The fickleness of the Emperor's moods in matters concerning the Bismarcks is one of the most curious leatures of court life, just now. One day the Emperor blows hot and shows symptoms of desirine a reconciliation; the next day he bloys cold and points a fresh snub at Friedrichstuhe. The secret of this changeableness is supposed to be the division among the Emperor's naminers, as well as the Emperor's fear that he may seem to be anxious. The courts of Saxony, Bavaria, Baden and Welmar, besides many members of the high Prussian aristocracy, undoubtedly tavors reconciliation. Count Caprivi, whom Bismarck continues to ridicule and denounce, is against a reconciliation on the ground that the Government would be lowered before the people by the tion on the ground that the Government would be lowered before the people by the Emperor's confessing friendsnip with its bitterest sutagonist. The Emperor is inclined, independently of all advisers, to favor an outward reconciliation, at least to save himself from popular reproach for ingratitude. At the same time he will not take the first step.

"Information conveyed to me before and since the fight confirmed my suspicious that Sullivan was not trained at all, but indulged in every extravagant whim which he saw fit to ask for. It would have been a thousand times better for Sullivan it he had been taken half tight from a New Orieans barroom and put into the ring to fight Corbett than to have permitted him to don the gloves after such a course of mismanagement with his training quarters.

"There is no question in my mind about Sullivan's ability to fight any man in the world, provided he is properly trained, and now that his erstwhile companious and alleged backers have deserted him, I stand ready not only to train him, but to back him with my own money."

BANKER AND MONEY GONE.

n Arkansas Doctor Skips Out and Leav but 45 Cents Out of $120,000. LITTLE ROCK, ARE., Sept. 25.—[Soccial.]— News reached this city last night that the People's Bank, of Hope, Ark., was attached, and its owner, Dr. W. R. Crossatt, is missing. The bank, which is in the Doctor's drug store, had a good line of drug store, had a good line of depositors. He lett a note, addressed to a widow, Mrs. Wainwright, who had in the bank $2,000, saying if he did not return soon, to protect herself. Yesterday a check for $50 was presented to the bank and only $25 paid on it. Several other checks were drawn on the bank, and upon presentation the holder of each was answered by the cashier, "no funds."

Immediately a stampede was made to the county seat, Washington, for an attachment. The first was issued in favor of Mrs. Wainwright, and was on the Doctor's house, bank and funds. When Sheriff J. C. Jones took possession and opened the safe he found but $5 cents. From that time attachment after attachment was issued. The deposits amount to about $120,000.

HIRED TO MURDER.

Louisiana Jurist Pays a Negro $100 to Kill an Enemy of His. New Orleans, Sept. 25.—Last night ex-Judge J. C. Bauman, of Kennerville, was arrested in this city, charged with being accessory to the attempted assassination of Judge Long in Kennerville, La., last July. Bauman's arrest grows out of the con-tession of Dennis Richards, the negro who was arrested last Friday in the swamp Boutte. Richards admits that he fired shots which wounded Judge Long but further says that Bauman offered him $100 to kill Long. He says that he was in communicatrouble.

Another feature in this case is that a few

s ago a negro named Dixon was ed for the very crime which Richards confesses that he committed himself, now confesses that he instigated by Bauman.

An Anti-British League Formed, With Protection Tendencies.

CLEVELAND'S LETTER COMING TUESDAY

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.] NEW YORK, Sept. 25.-Chairman Cartes started for Washington to-day to confer with President Harrison on the progress of the National Republican campaign. It has been decided that Whitelaw Reid will take the stump in New England, opening in Boston October 4.

Chairman Charles W. Hackett, of the Republican State Campaigu Committee, spent the day in Brooklyn. He returned convinced that the scrappers in Kings county would cease their ructions and get lown to business.

Although there are no registry figures as yet to determine the actual facts, not a few Republicans and just as many Democrats are convinced that there will be a material falling off in the vote this fall. The municipal elections in New York and Kings county may stimulate things somewhat. The up-county may stimulate things somewhat. The up-country rote, though, is in danger of falling down. This applies to the Democrats as well as the Republicans. The State ticket, consisting only of a nomination for Chief Judge of Court of Appeals, is not sufficient, it is apprehended, to arouse violent enthusiasm on either side, With this situation confronting Lieutenant Governor Sheehan and Brother Hackett, the work on both sides is to convince the up-country voters that the fate of the nation for many years to come rests on their getting out and whooping it up for Cleveland or Harrison. An Anti-British League Formed.

James Fitz, a well-known crook, got into a quarrel in Charles Drumm's restaurant, 165 Fifth avenue, with Charles Borman, one of the waiters, and stabbed him in the arm, inflicting a serious wound.

James Fitz and John Collins came in to the restaurant and began quarreling with a colored man. When remoustrated with he began abusing Borman, who became angry and tried to put both men out of the room. He had just pushed Collins out of the door and was struggling with Fitz, when the latter drew a danger and made a siash at Borman. Borman seeing the knife, jumped aside, and at the same time threw up his arm, which received the full force of the blow. The knife cut through, inflicting a wound fully 3 inches deep and four inches long. Officer Tobin hearing the rumpits came up and arrested James Fitz and John Collins.
