THE PRICTION IN THE GERMAN CABINET

IBY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.] BERLIN, Oct. 9 .- [Copyright.]-The interest of all Berlin has centered in the last eight days at the Templehoferfeld. This spot has presented since Sunday the aspect of an annual fair ground. Officers of the guards, diplomatists, society leaders, court officials, sporting men and staid, solid tradesmen have crowded it night and day to learn the latest news from the long distance race. A few German officers bet on Count

Starbeinberg, and as they got good odds they won heavily. The vast majority, however, bet according to their prejudices and iest immense sums. Sporting men here, who from the first backed the Vienna riders, have profited greatly at the expense of the military and aristocracy. The sacrifice of good horseflesh has been lamented by the bourgeoisie, and their newspaper organs are asking: "What good did it all do?" In fact, it has done much good from the German point of view, and is likely to lead to some important innorations in the German cavalry. teerman Veterinarians Behind the Times.

The most important result of the race has been the demonstration that the veterinary been the demonstration that the veterinary department of the German army is behind the times. The majority of the Austrian horses were in fairly good condition when they arrived. The majority of the German horses staggered past the finish post in Floridsdori, rained for further cavalry service or for any service at all. The Emperor feels greatly chagrined by by the evidence of the superior veterinary skill of the Austrians, and has ordered that a special inquiry be made by a commission of cavalrymen into the Austrian methods and time horses and the defects of the present German methods. Some German caval-car German methods. Some German caval-rymen have tried to excuse themselves by harking much of the fact that the Germans had to cover a hilly country at the end of their ride, when the horses were exhausted, their ride, when the horses were exhausted, while the Austrians could cover the worst roads while their horses were fresnest. Generally, however, the test is considered to have been as fair as possible. Expert horsemen here agree with the Emperor that the conditions, even to the qualities of the horses, were equal, and that the Austrians won through superior knowledge of the treatment of horses.

An Analysis of the Mounts

An analysis of the mounts shows this view to be indisputable. Of the 109 German entries 9 were English thoroughbreds or hunter stock, 14 were English haltbreeds, 5 were Hungarian and 1 was Russian. The rest were bred in Germany, most of them with strains of English blood on the side of with strains of English blood on the side of the sire or clam. Among the 121 Austrian horses there was not a single thoroughbed, despite all reports to the contrary. Eight of them had strains of good English blood. Forty-eight were bred in Austria-Hungary, many by imported English sires. One was by a Cossark sire, another by an Arab sire out of an English thoroughbred mare and was bred in Eussian Poland. One was a pare Arab, and 60 were of unknown pedi-gree. If there was any choice of mounts it certainly did not incline towards the Aus-trians.

Another point, which indicates the same Jesson for the Germans, is given in a Vienna dispatch as regards the work of Baron Relizenstein, who made the best record of all the Germans, having covered the course in something over 73 hours, and came in second to Count Stameinberg only. Relizerstein's treatment of his 12-year-old Lippspringe was in striking contrast with the heutality and ignorance shown by the other 108 German riders toward their mounts. He rode in equal number of hours, day and night. He rested for 15 minutes after every 20 miles and two hours after every 120 miles.

Treatment of the Count's Horse, During the long rests Lippspringe was unaddled, rubbed down with wet cloths and washed in a special lotion. Twelve pounds of outs and peas mixed were given him. A salts was adminstered after cating to facilt. salts was administered after eating to facilitate digestion. During the short rest the horse got a small quantity of hay mixed with Carisiad salts, and a cake made of cats, Idaan comment and eggs and dissolved with flour in tepid water. Every 12 miles, mercovet, the horse's mouth and head were sponged with cold water.

Reinzenstein assisted in feeding and sponging the horse, and during the long passes slept in the stable by the horse's slite. After test he walked beside the horse for the first half hour, then mounted and side. After test he walked beside the horse for the first half hour, then mounted and rode at a smart toot or an hour and a half en two hours, gradually reducing the speed as he approached unfavorable ground. In the hilliest country Reitzenstein dismounted and ran along beside the horse. He did not use spar or whip once until within 60 miles of Vienna. He and lost an hour and a half in the fog, he says, and feit compelled to force the pace somewhat.

The first report of Lippspringe's condition at the Fiorid-dorf finish post is a gross exaggreration. The horse was disressed, but suffered from no radical trouble, and to-day suffered from no radical trouble, and to-day is about as well as ever. No placker horse was in the race, certainly, for, although one sloc was gone and another was broken, he covered the last 49 miles of the course at the rate of 12½ miles an hour.

A Fine Animal for Thirty Dollars. Lippspringe is an Irish hunter, and formerly was a carriage horse in Ghent, where l'aron Reitzenstein bought him for 120 marks. The Baron broke him to the saddle. That with such a modest past the horse should have made such a creditable record is due, without doubt, to his muster's humanity and intelligence in veterinary iters.

he most important result of the race will be the spirit of comradeship promoted by it among the best young cavalrymen of both arnies. There has been complete absence of jealonsy throughout the event, and the Austrian officers have been treated with as sincers cordiality as could be desired by

On Monday evening the Emperor will receive the Austrian riders, and will speak to them formally, it is said, of the desirability of promoting close comradeship between the officers' corps of the allied armies of Central

I he official denial that friction has been The official denial that friction has been timple as antly manifest in the Cabinet recently has deceived nobody. The intrigues against Count Von Caprivi continue uninterrupted, and vary only with the high official who happens to come forward at this or that time as the instigator. Count Botho Eulenberg in the present case professed to be offended because Count Caprivi neglected to swomit the military bill to the Prussian Ministry before the the final decision to introduce it in Parliament was made.

Miquel and His Retirement. Herr Miquel has not been mentioned for some time as an active opponent of the Chancellor, and the interespe that he is losing ground at court is supported by the unanimous opinion of official circles. Miquel has himself given out indirectly that he contemplates retiring as soon as his pro-posed financial retorms shall have been posed financial reforms shall have been considered by the Landiaz. The reasons for his decline from layor are numerous, but the chief one is that the Emperor has lost ide enthusiasm for the social-financial reforms which Miquel was chosen to renize for him. Moreover, Miquel has always had to make his own way with the Emperor, as he has not been papular with the unofficial advisers at court. Eulenberg, however, has strong backing among the Conservative courtiers, who just now have the Emperor's ear. Everybody realizes that Miquel's taxation reform plan will raise a storm in the Landing, and especially among the Conservatives. This will embarrass the Government in the Emcessag, where the Conservatives the Reichstag, where the Conserve ive The peculiar relations between the Land-tag and Reichstag would render it impossi-ble for the Government to conciliate a party in one body and light it in the other. Hence, when it comes to a pinch, Miquel and his tax reform programme will be sacrificed to secure the undivided support of the Con-servatives in the military delane.

The Revenue That Has to Be Raised. The chief question, however, in connec tion with the military bill, concerns the source of the additional revenue required. is about certain that the Government will esk for at least 80,000,000 marks more. The plan for increasing the tax on brandy is be-lieved to have been abandoned, for the reason that it would not yield sufficient revenue. An increase of the customs duty on tobacco has been considered favorably during the past week, and is said to have been approved finally by the Emperor and Count Caprivi. This, probably, will be the most unpopular of all the measures singuested for meeting the present emergency. A rise in the price of tobacco will press heavily on almost every man in Germany, and even then the tax might not yield the revenue required.

There seems, in fact, to be but one way for the Caprivi administration to save itself from falling, and at the same time meet the demands of the military bill, and that way is to borrow the money needed now, and let the next Chancellor settle the accounts. This way, probably, will be chosen before the meeting of Parliament.

The revival of the reports concerning a meeting of the Czar with Emperor William and Emperor Franz Joseph means nothing. The relations between the Russian and German courts continue strained. Russia's advances in matters of tariff revision and reciprocity are treated coldly by the German Government, which believes them to be merely a new method of paving a way for a loan.

Another Rebuff From Russia.

Another Rebuff From Russia. It is reported that the Porte also has give Russin another rebuff in answer to Shiskin's lecture to the Sultan for receiving Stambuloff and not paying the arrears of the war in-demnity. The Porte is said to have replied hat the Russian note was premature, and that the Russian note was premature, and that Turkey had no intention of violating the Berlin treaty. The briefness of the reply and the delay in making it are regarded as the most courageous snub that Turkey has ever administered to the Czar.

The dispute between United States Consul Burke and the Hamburg authorities continues to attract a tention throughout Germany. The Hamburger Nechrichten says that it is the duty of the Imperial Charcellor to interfere in the affairs of the individual States sufficiently to prevent such breaches of the imperial law by local authorities, as the Hamburg Government seems to have committed. "It is obviously the Cuty of the whole empire," adds the Nachrichten, "to see that the law of the land is observed. Article IP of the German Constitution provides that when the Individual members of the union tall to perform their duty the empire may step in and do it for them. Undoubtedly, also, article 4 is to be applied in the sense that it lies with the empire to a committee common protection to German trade abroad and German shipping and the German flag upon the rea."

The Koelmiche Zeitung says: "Through the German flag upon the sea."

The Koelnische Zeitung says: "Through the sins of emission the authorities of Hamourg have done the whole trade of Germany such widespread injury that their atonement must not be delayed." The Imperial Commissioner for the World's Fair will leave with his colleagues for Chicago late in November.

BAILROAD LESSONS FROM ENGLAND.

President Roberts Talks on the Mooted Long and Short Haul Question PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.-The Railway World to-day prints an interview with President Roberts, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who recently returned from a tour through Great Britain, in which he talks of the lessons English railroads taught him. "The principle underlining the matter of terminal freight charges on the railroads of Great Britain," said he, "is fully recognized by Parliament. Railr ads in that country are permitted by act of Parliament to charge for handling, billing and loading merchandise in cars, and that charge is generally uniform, whether the freight is to be carried a long or a short distance. Thus they recognize that the length of haul has no connection with terminal expenses. The reasons why the long hauls should command a less rate proportionately than the short haul, are apparent to every one familiar with railroading.

"It is equally the duty of the Government, it it says that the railroads shall not charge too high a rate, to say they shall not charge too low a rate." He said the value of every ticket should be plainly stamped on its face, and no one should be permitted to traffic in it. In the event of its not being used, the companies should be compelled to redeem them at their face value if presented within a reasonable time.

You may remember that you put into my parlor over three years ago one of your Conover pianos and tested it side by side with one of the highest-priced instruments made. On the basis of that test I purchased the Conover piano. That decision has been fully justified by nearly tour years' use of the instrument. The points which commend this piano to careful purchasers are these:

I its purity and sweetness of tone. 2 Its combination of power with sweetness. 3. Its fine mechanical adjustment of keys for ease and precision of execution. 4 Its capacity for remaining long in tune. Only an instrument of first-class make will stand this test. 5. The excellence of its frame,
