

A COLUMBUS WEEK

Opens in New York With a Parade of 30,000 School Children.

AN IMPOSING PAGEANT INDEED.

Vice President Merton and Ex-President Cleveland Spectators.

MANY STREETS CROWDED FOR HOURS

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—To-day the series of imposing pageants with which the city for the coming three days will honor the memory of Christopher Columbus.

On every side throughout the city, alike in the sections filled with brown stone mansions and in those where thronged tenements are crowded together, was there lavish display of flags and streamers, but special attention was given by city officials and private citizens to the decoration of the streets and houses along the route selected for the parade.

The decorations of the City. Daylight had hardly dawned when an army of carpenters appeared along Fifth avenue and busily went to work as though preparing the houses there for a siege.

Before 10 o'clock the parade had arrived at the corners of the streets crossing the avenue, and these were fitted up with board seats or chairs and draped with bunting ready to receive spectators who were willing to pay for the occupancy of the coigns of vantage they afforded.

Little for the Police to Do. The police arrangements were most admirable. Along the entire route of the parade patrolmen were stationed about 25 feet apart, while at street crossings and at particular points where the crowds were larger bluecoats were posted. The police had little difficulty, however.

It was 9:30 o'clock before one of the parading companies of the public school division began to arrive at their designated forming places, and in the cross streets contiguous to Fifth avenue, the right of line was formed at Fifth avenue and Fifty-seventh street, and here the Grand Marshal, Colonel David S. Brown, and his aides assembled at 10 o'clock.

At 11 o'clock Colonel David S. Brown grand marshal of the school and college parades, gave the order to march, and nearly 30,000 pairs of legs were soon executing the command. The immense parade started at Fifty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, and marched to Seventeenth street, then across to Fourth avenue, and through Fourteenth street to Fifth avenue. As the long line of the parade turned into busy Fourteenth street loud cheers went up from the Union Square free stand and from the dense crowd on the ground and in the buildings.

John Winfield Scott was Grand Marshal Brown's chief of staff and Adjutant General. Major George M. Barry was Assistant Adjutant General, and George Lawrence Myers Chief Aide.

Where the Greatest Crowds Gathered. While the line of march of the parade was banked on either side by crowded masses from the starting point at Central Park plaza to the finishing point at the University place, the greatest numbers congregated on Madison square and Washington square. The west side of Fifth avenue, Madison square, was occupied by an immense stand with 3,500 seats. 200 seats reserved for reporters, were furnished with a writing desk. Opposite was a stand that seated 1,000 persons. Among those seated there were, in part, Hon. Levi P. Morton, Secretary of the Treasury, Foster Governor R. P. Flower and his staff, Governor Tillman, of South Carolina, United States Marshal Fairchild, and other officials. This stand was in charge of ex-Mayor William H. Wickham.

Long before the procession reached Madison square the head of the advancing column, preceded by a platoon of mounted police, could be seen advancing. As it reached the square itself, Vice President Merton, Governor Flower and the other officials arose and stood uncovered until the 30,000 boys and youths in the procession had passed the stand.

Others Who Reviewed the Parade. At Washington square two stands, seating 5,000 spectators, had been erected. There the Mayor and several Commissioners left the ranks and took seats reserved for them on the stand, from which they reviewed the procession as it passed by its way on the Fourth street and University Place, where it disbanded.

Ex-President and Mrs. Cleveland, with a party of friends, witnessed the parade. The great parade of schoolboys demonstrated the patriotism of the rising generation. Twenty-five Harlem schoolboys, however, gave evidence in a more effective way by tearing down and trampling under foot an English flag displayed in front of a Harlem store. The boys, ranging in age from 12 to 17 years, were coming down Columbus avenue on their way to join the big parade. Near the corner of Ninety-third street, they saw a large English flag floating in front of a cigar store kept by an Englishman. No other flag was displayed, and the boys, thinking it un-American to display a foreign flag without a United States flag with it, tore it down, and trampled and demanded of the storekeeper either to raise a United States flag beside the English one or to lower the English flag. This the keeper of the store refused to do.

American Patriotism of the Boys. After considerable angry discussion and several threats on the part of the boys, one of the little fellows climbed upon the shoulders of one of his larger companions and took down the English flag. As soon as the others could get their hands on the objectionable flag they tore it into hundreds of pieces and scattered the fragments about the street, trampling them under foot amid the cheering of the older onlookers. The Englishman was indignant, and it looked for a time as though he would attack the boys. The sympathy of the crowd, however, was evidently with the boys, and after threatening to have the boys arrested for malicious destruction of property, he retired to his store.

The loan exhibition of the National Academy of Design, with its exhibit of some of the best achievements of native art by American artists in recent years, even as early as this forenoon proved a strong attraction for out of town visitors as well as local residents. The formal opening on Saturday evening proved a grand artistic and special success. The collection of oils, water colors, pastel and ink sketches, fairly indicates the condition of American art at the present time. The kindly lent pictures from private collections, embracing the highest effects of world-renowned artists of the past and present make a grand feature of the general exhibit.

ALL THE CABINET TO ATTEND. The Columbian Celebration During the Week in New York.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—A special meeting of the members of the Cabinet was held at the State Department this afternoon for the purpose of arranging for Federal participation in the Columbian celebration in New York this week. It was decided that all the members of the Cabinet should be present in New York at some time during the week to represent the Administration. Vice President Merton is already there and so is Secretary Noble. Secretary Charles Foster will be there to-morrow.

CHOLERA. Horstler's Acid Phosphate. The cholera microbe will not live in acid solutions, and this acid phosphate is recommended as the most desirable and safe use as a remedy or preventive because of its medicinal properties. It is a powerful stimulant of digestion, as well as its tonic and general strengthening effect on the whole system.

WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL. No Excuse for a Bare Floor When You Can Get a Carpet at These Prices.

This makes the fourth week we have placed special prices on as many different lines of goods. It is a satisfaction to see the rush for these goods, and by the way this is the only profit derived from these sales.

"TID-BITS." EXPOSITION.—"A night off" now and then to take your family to the Exposition is the proper thing. To offer the suggestion in all its kindness, knowing that you will enjoy the rest and recreation.

EXPOSITION.—All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy. The same remark applies to children of older growth. In all its kindness, knowing that you will enjoy the rest and recreation.

EXPOSITION.—"Beautiful Venice the Bride of the Sea." Very romantic. Our Exposition is more romantic, although equally beautiful. It is a happy combination of the realities of life, interspersed with a touch of sentiment here and there.

EXPOSITION.—"Nothing ventured, nothing won." is an old saying. There is more or less risk in everything we do in this world, but in all our kindness, knowing that you will enjoy the rest and recreation.

EXPOSITION.—"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." The same remark applies to children of older growth. In all its kindness, knowing that you will enjoy the rest and recreation.

One rounded teaspoonful of Cleveland's Baking Powder does more and better work than a heaping teaspoonful of any other. A large saving on a year's bakings.
