HILL IS SUSTAINED.

His Apportionment of New York Is Called Proper and Legal

BY ALL THE DEMOCRATIC JUDGES,

Put the Two Republican Members of the Court of Appeals

DISSENT FLATLY WITH THE DECISION

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 13.—In the cases of the people ex rel Horn, appeal against the Board of Supervisors of Monroe county and the people ex rel Horn, appellant, versus the Board of Supervisors of Oneida county, better known as "the apportionment test cases," the Court of Appeals today reversed the order in both cases, and motions for a mandamus were granted, with costs in all courts. These were cases in which the court was asked to issue orders for writs of mandamus compelling the Board of Supervisors of Monroe and Oneida counties to redistrict the assembly districts in those counties in compliance with the apportionment law passed by the last Legislature.

The order of the lower court was affirmed, with costs in all courts in the case of the people ex rel George E. Carter, of Utica, appellant, against Frank Rice, Secretary of State. In this case the court was asked to grant an injunction order restraining the Secretary of State from recognizing the new apportionment law or sending out notices of election of members of Assembly to county clerks except under the apportionment law of 1889, the lower court having refused to grant such an order.

Two Judges on the Minority Side.

The main opinion upholding the law is written by Judge Peckham. Justice Gray also writes an opinion upholding the law. Judge Andrews wrote a dissenting opinion, which was concurred in by Judge Finch.

The court is unanimous upon all the questions involved except those discussed in Judge Andrews' opinion. The Judges practically agree on all questions touching the constitutionality of the apportionment law except on the question of the discretion used by the Legislature in apportioning the remaining members of Assembly among the counties having the fractional ratios.

The vote of the Court of Appeals sustaining the apportionment is practically 5 to 2, the 5 being Democratic judges—Earl, Peckham, Gray, O'Brien and Maynard. Judge Andrews files a separate opinion.

To elec a United States Senator requires 81 votes on joint ballot of the two branches of the Legislature. The Democrats will have 17 votes next winter, when the time comes for electing a successor to Frank Hiscock, assuming that the majority in that body holds together till that time. The Republicans will have 13 votes, and one—Edwards, of the Thirty-second district—may not be cast for either regular party candidate.

The Republicans Still Have a Show.

To elect the Senator the Democrats must have 64 votes in the Assembly and the Republicans 67. While, therefore, the Republicans will be able to control legislation if they elect 65 members, they will need three more to control the United States Senatorship. There are 67 Democrats and 61 Republicans in the Assembly of 1892. Three of the Republicans were from New York and three from Kings. If the Republicans can elect 4 out of 30, which this new apportionment assigns to New York, and 4 out of the 18 which it gives to Kings, they can secure not only the control of the Assembly, but also the Senate.

In the main and decisive opinion by Judge Peckham these conclusions appear:

First—It is contended on the part of those who allege the invalidity of the law of 1892 that it was passed in violation of that provision o the Constitution, which directs the alteration to be made by the Legislature at the "first session after the return of every enumeration." The act was in truth passed at an extraordinary session of the Legislature called by the Governor, and after the return of the enumeration of 1892. The point is made that an extraordinary session is not such a session of the Legislature as is contemplated by the Constitution. To my mind the objection is wholly without force. There is no basis in the language of the Constitution for the claim that a session of the Legislature referred to in that instrument is the first session of the Legislature which itself first convenes after the return of the apportionment. The Constitution does not say so, and I fail in finding any reason, in principle or in the nature of the subject, which calls for such a construction. Such construction twists and distorts the ordinary and plain meaning of the language actually employed.

A Duty That Was Long Neglected.

Second—The act is alleged to violate the Constitution because based upon an enumeration taken in 1892 instead of 1885. It is true that it was the duty of the Legislature in 1885 to direct an enumeration of the inhabitants of the State in that year, and if it had discharged that duty it would have been the duty of the Legislature at the first session after the return of that enumeration to proceed to apportion the districts. The Legislature of 1885 omitted to perform the duty of directing an enumeration which was cast upon it by the Constitution. Each succeeding Legislature up to 1892 also omitted to perform this duty, and thus for seven years the Constitutional mandate had been violated. And this duty continued and was cast upon each succeeding Legislature until the constitutional obligation was fulfilled. We are of opinion that the objection made has no color of validity.

Third—The third objection is raised to the validity of this act. It is stated that as to the Senate districts it is not based upon an equal number of inhabitants, excluding "persons of color not taxed."

The Judge here reviews the amendments to the United States and State Constitutions regarding the complete enfranchisement of colored citizens, and holds that the provision regarding an enumeration on which Senate district apportionments shall be used against the colored man has been abrogated by these amendments, and says: "We are of the opinion that the objection to the validity of the act of 1892 based upon the failure to exclude persons of color not taxed cannot prevail."

As to the Inequality of Districts.

Fourth—It is finally objected that the act is invalid because the Senate districts do not contain an equal number of inhabitants as nearly as may be. This question of inequality contains, in my judgment, the only debatable proposition arising in these cases. We think that the courts have no power in such case to review the exercise of a discretion intrusted to the Legislature by the Constitution, unless it is plainly and grossly abused. The expression "as nearly as may be," when used in the Constitution with reference to this subject, does not mean as nearly as a mathematical process can be followed. It is a direction addressed to the Legislature in the way of a general statement of the principles upon which the apportionment shall be made. We are of the opinion that the Legislature, by the alteration of the Senate districts under the act of 1892, has not violated the legitimate and necessary discretion intrusted to it by the Legislature. As to the Assembly districts the burden of complaint rests upon the apportionment of four or five members of the Assembly out of 128. The reason for the particular action of the Legislature upon this question must be sought for in some considerations other than partisan, for I think it is shown these did not enter into the question upon this point. The inference is fair that these changes were absolutely necessary in order to secure the passage of the bill. Other considerations might be added to show that the Legislature of 1892, in the passage of the act under review, did not approach the danger line of an abuse of legislative discretion.

A Travesty on Law and Justice.

When we come to the question of what law is in force in this State if the law of 1892 is not, the situation becomes most alarming. If the act of 1892 is void the act of 1879 is also plainly void, and no elections of members of Assembly should be tolerated under it. This might relegate the people to the act of 1866, and thus we might have an attempt at an election for members of Assembly under an act more than a quarter of a century old and a legislative representation of the people of that time. This would be a travesty on the law and upon all ideas of equality, propriety and justice. We are compelled to the conclusion that this act of 1892 successfully withstands all assaults upon it, and is a valid and effective law.

Judge Andrews wrote a dissenting opinion, holding the Legislative apportionment law to be unconstitutional, which was concurred in by Judge Finch. It says:

I am of the opinion that the apportionment act of 1892 is void for the reason that in apportioning members of Assembly among the counties of the State it violates the rules of the equality established by the Constitution. The departure from the constitutional method in the act of 1892 is substantial, and its validity having been challenged in the courts, it cannot be upheld without establishing a dangerous precedent for the future. The claim that the Legislature in making an apportionment may take into consideration the probable growth of population has no support in the Constitution. The apportionment is to be based upon the existence of the population ascertained by the preceding enumeration and apportionment is the constitutional remedy for any such temporary inequalities.

One Case of the Utter Injustice.

If the Legislature was permitted to act upon the ground suggested it would introduce a most uncertain element, and might be the cover for great abuses. It is plain that in the present case the inequalities are not attributable to any such consideration. Monroe county, containing a rapidly-growing city and with a much larger population than Albany county, was given three members, and Albany was given four. It is unnecessary to consider, in this case, the question of constitutionality of the act of 1892, so far as it relates to Senate districts. The act must stand or fall as a whole, and if, in respect to one branch of the Legislature, the act is unconstitutional, it cannot be upheld.

The power of the courts to set aside an unconstitutional apportionment has quite recently been asserted and exercised by the courts of Wisconsin and Michigan. These cases consider with much ability the question of judicial power, and determine that a substantial departure in an apportionment act from the rule of equality renders it void. I recognize the gravity of the question now presented, nor do I fail to appreciate that holding the apportionment void will produce temporary inconvenience, but the evils which may flow from this are not to be compared, I think, with the public injury which will result from sanctioning a disregard of one of the vital principles of representative government.

Judge Gray concurs in the validity of the apportionment, and writes a separate opinion giving the grounds of his conclusions.

WOUND UP THEIR WORK.

The Grand Jury Breaks All Records and Retires—Important Cases Considered—Many Defendants Included in One Indictment—Builders' Exchange Officials Indicted for Conspiracy.

The grand jury finished its business for the present term and was discharged yesterday with the thanks of Judge Kennedy on behalf of both court and public. The grand jury has acted on the largest number of cases in any one term in the history of the county since 1881. There have only been two terms in which a larger number of bills were returned. The first was the September term of 1874, the year following the panic of 1873, when so many larceny and assault and battery cases resulted from people being out of work. The number of bills acted on that term was 1,278. The number returned in the September term in 1881 was 1,565. That was the year in which over 1,500 people were indicted for illegal liquor selling, during the administration of A. H. Rowan as District Attorney. The September term seems to be the large one each year. In 1890 the number of bills acted on reached 776, in 1891, 904, this year there were 1,099 bills. This includes 53 Oyer and Terminer cases, comprising the higher degrees of crime, such as murder, burglary and indecent assaults, as against 37 Oyer and Terminer cases in the September term last year, leaving 1,046 Quarter Sessions cases this term.

The number of bills, however, does not represent the actual number of defendants, as in many cases there are from two to ten persons indicted in one bill. For instance in the Homestead cases there are 31 people indicted for treason and one bill covers all of them. It is estimated that the 1,099 bills acted on this term represent nearly 1,500 defendants.

The ignored bills returned yesterday were John Bartsits and C. M. Parish, larceny; J. Gannon, false pretense; James Walls, assault and battery.

The true bills were: Grace Brown, concealing the death of a child; John Burke and Amanda Bassett, larceny; H. R. Barnes, John Carr, L. T. Yoder, Dr. F. McAfee, D. E. Shendon, H. M. Kerr, E. A. Knox, T. J. Hamilton, J. W. Beckett, conspiracy; H. J. Bigger, embezzlement; F. H. Cummings, bigamy and perjury; Lew McAlister, misdemeanor; O. S. Weddell, offering a bribe. The conspiracy cases are against Builders' Exchange officials.
