

QUAY IS STILL SICK.

Afraid to Exert Himself in the Campaign, Owing to His Vertigo.

HE IS NOT NEEDED IN NEW YORK.

So He Says, but He is Expected to Go There in a Few Days.

HE SAYS THAT HARRISON SHOULD WIN.

(SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.) PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—The morning papers had barely time to announce the coming East of Senator Quay on another business trip, for he followed the telegrams by his arrival at the Continental hotel early this morning, and made himself at home in his old first-floor rooms. There breakfast was served, and his son, Richard R. Quay, was the only one present until toward 10 o'clock, when personal friends began to send up their cards. The cards were few in number—not more than a dozen, all told—and the remarkable thing about them was the fact that not a single local politician was represented in the list of callers.

Senator Quay failed to hear in mind that October 21 was Columbus Day, and therefore a general holiday. He said so, at any rate. "It was my intention to go on to-night to Washington, where my family is in winter quarters," said the Senator, "but the holiday prevents that, and I may not get down before late to-morrow."

The senator's few callers. Among the Senator's visitors were Hamilton Diston, who remained some time; Collector Cooper, General Reeder and Senator Horace B. Packer. If a conference took place on the State or national situation nobody appears to know anything about it. The various callers came so quietly and got away so secretly that nothing could be gained from them about their visit. The Senator was only a shade less non-committal than he is in New York. They are getting along very well without me," was Mr. Quay's answer to the query as to his intention of going to New York. "They are getting on all right and don't want me there."

To a question as to what he thought of the President's election, Mr. Quay said: "Harrison should be elected, and I say that he should, but who can tell? My health has been the cause of much anxiety to me, and I have been unable to give attention to political affairs. Scarcely anything in the line of information concerning campaign matters comes to me outside of what I hear from the papers and the news."

"Do you look for Harrison's election?" "Harrison should be re-elected." "He should be elected, but who can tell? I cannot. I am not in a position to prophesy events."

"You intend to visit Chairman Carter?" "Probably not. I don't think I will go to New York. My physician forbids me to do a thing that would excite or agitate me, and I must obey orders. During my last visit here I busied myself State headquarters somewhat, and paid the penalty by suffering afterward. I think I will keep quiet this time."

The Senator had heard the story about campaign funds being used in his interest in the close districts, and regarded it as just what he needed to get him out of the campaign. The idea that Chairman Reeder was expending money in his behalf when the general chairman appeared to have herculean regular purposes amused the Senator very much. In fact, he laughed a great deal over the matter because the story was such funny one that he really could not help it.

State Campaign Funds Are Low. "State campaign fund" he inquired. "I wish there was one. Republicans are sending all their contributions to New York this year, and I rather guess Chairman Reeder is very short in consequence. The State is having hard luck, I'm thinking."

Mr. Quay should decide to visit Chairman Carter at Republican headquarters here until he runs over Monday next from Washington. The Senator appears to be in no way troubled, but complains of the old vertigo troubles. He tells his friends that vertigo generally subsides or leaves him altogether when he comes to his city on business. Quay will know all about the national end of the campaign after ex-Collector Dave Martin's arrival from New York to-morrow, and then he will doubtless go on to Washington.

BLAINE WON'T SPEAK AGAIN. The Ex-Secretary Repeats His Statement of His Intentions During the Campaign—No Particular Significance in His Calling at National Headquarters. NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Since James G. Blaine spoke at Whitelaw Reid's house at Ophir Farm reports have been circulated that the Maine statesman would speak again. Knowing politicians talked mysteriously about the number of speeches that Mr. Blaine would make, and even went so far as to tell where the addresses would be given. When Mr. Blaine arrived here Monday, he told a reporter of the Associated Press that he would not speak again. He said that he did not want to answer the question directly, as a "yes" or a "no" would each bring comments. If he declined, friends would write him to reconsider the question and he would be bothered daily.

Mr. Blaine visited the national headquarters Wednesday afternoon, just for a formal call, he said, and he had no sooner heard the rumor gave flight to a story that Mr. Blaine would address two more audiences during the campaign. A reporter for the Associated Press called upon Mr. Blaine this afternoon and showed him a clipping containing the foregoing statement. Mr. Blaine read the article quickly and replied: "There is not one word of truth in it."

"Then you will not speak again?" "I have not changed my opinion since you saw me Monday." "Well, do you mind telling what political significance there is in your visit to New York?" "Not in the least. I am journeying from the seashore to Washington, where I will spend the winter. I had to wait here some time. That's all the politics there is in my visit to New York."

At Republican national headquarters all knowledge of Mr. Blaine's intention to speak during the campaign was emphatically denied. When Chairman Carter was asked whether Mr. Blaine had at any time signified his intention to speak during the campaign, he denied having consulted Mr. Blaine with reference to his speaking, or that he knew of any intention on Mr. Blaine's part to speak. The statement that Mr. Blaine had officially announced that Mr. Blaine would take the stump, Mr. Carter said, was absolutely untrue.

Committee-man Joseph H. Masley was also seen on the subject. "I have not heard that Mr. Blaine intended to speak," he said. "I suppose he would if he felt strong and well enough."

A SYNOD'S SYMPATHY.

Extended to President Harrison Because of the Illness of His Wife—Sunday Closing of the World's Fair Approved—United Sam's Indian Policy Condemned. WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 21.—[Special.]—At the Friday morning meeting of the Presbyterian Synod of Pennsylvania, the Committee on Overtures sent in the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Synod expresses its great satisfaction with the action of the Board of Directors of the World's Fair, in accepting the Congressional appropriation with the Sunday closing condition attached, and we earnestly urge that the directors stand fast in this action and resist all efforts made to remove this condition. We also, urge, as the representatives of the Presbyterian Church in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, that the people of the land be granted, and the sale of intoxicating liquors be prohibited in accordance with the laws of the State of Illinois.

Rev. Robert H. Fulton reported in behalf of the recently appointed Committee on Satisfaction of President Harrison, that the President desired the committee in their report to advise that no Presbytery be allowed to draw any larger sum from this source than the Presbyteries of Parkersburg and Westminster being excepted. This advice was not adopted by the Synod, but was discussed at some length, and the following resolution of sympathy:

The Synod of Pennsylvania, now in session at Washington, Pa., moved by deep sympathy for President Harrison, and his sorrow and anxiety because of the serious illness of his honored and beloved wife, desires to express to her the tenderest sympathy in his hour of trial, and earnestly prays that the abundant grace of God and the consolations of Christ, so manifestly enjoyed by him and his suffering wife, may be continued to them and their dear children, to the glory of God in the heart and home and life of this nation.

After the adoption of this resolution the Synod was led in prayer by Rev. J. I. Brownson, D. D., who pleaded earnestly that the presence of the Most High might be with the sufferer in her great trial. This was followed by the Moderator's announcement of the appointment of Rev. R. F. Hunker, D. D., as Vice Moderator for the coming year.

Rev. James Roberts, stated clerk, made a report as Chairman of a special Committee on Indian Schools. In this report the discrimination among schools in the distributing of funds by the Government was condemned. It was declared by the Chairman that out of about $25,000 given by the Government, $400,000 were distributed to Catholic schools, and only about $125,000 was divided among all the other denominations. A minority report, which would somewhat modify the majority report, was submitted. The consideration of these reports was handed over to a committee of five. Reports on colleges and universities followed.

Rev. Dr. Greenough, of Philadelphia, offered the following resolution, supporting it by a strong speech: We rejoice in the evidences of a deeper interest which our public schools are exhibiting in the hearts of the people; in the increasing number of scholars; in the multiplication of new buildings; in the better methods made to extend the course of study and lead up to a better practical education. That we express our sympathy with and our confidence in the efforts of the public education, and we protest against any interference from any source whatever in the management of the public schools, and we believe that the character of the instruction should be so changed as to allow any claims to be made for the education of its doctrine.

This resolution called forth some rather warm discussion. The opposition was in the hands of the Roman Catholic Church's policy, but because Protestants themselves were divided on the subject, and it was thought wisest for the Synod to thus hastily commit itself. The resolution was finally referred to a special committee.

MRS. HARRISON'S MISSIONARY WORKS. The Subject of Enology in the Annual Conference of the Friends. INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 21.—At this morning's session of the Friends' conference the president announced that a paper conference on Enology would commence in the city Saturday evening and last until next Tuesday.

John Henry Douglass called attention to the condition of Mrs. President Harrison. William Pele, of this city, testified to the efficient missionary work of Mrs. Harrison accorded the children of Indianapolis. Prayers for the sick lady of the White House were read, and a telegram of sympathy was ordered sent.

CAN SHOOT TO KILL. Great Penetrating Results Obtained From the Haskell Muzzle-Load Gun. READING, Pa., Oct. 21.—Extraordinary results were obtained in firing at iron targets with the half-inch Haskell muzzle-load gun at the proving grounds near here to-day. A hammered solid wrought iron target 7 1/2 inches thick was penetrated entirely through, backed by a boiler plate 5/8 of an inch thick, which was also penetrated through, making a penetration of 7 3/4 inches. The projectile was of Carpenter steel and 10 inches of powder were used. This penetration was obtained with sixteen times the diameter of the projectile, or more than four times greater than has ever been obtained by any other gun. Several experts were present.

A VICTIM OF FOOTBALL.

Jose Perez, a Spanish Student at Eastman College, Killed.

BY A COLLISION IN A CLASS GAME.

Concussion of the Brain Being the Direct Cause of the Death.

HOW THE SAD ACCIDENT OCCURRED.

(SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.) PITTSBURGH, N. Y., Oct. 21.—The killing of Jose Perez, a Spanish student of Eastman College, in a football game at Eastman Park yesterday has put a damper on the game hereabouts. The game was called for 4 p. m., and it was between the first and second teams of the college. Perez was in the rush line of the first team. The lines were drawn up ready to start and the ball was passed to the first rush of the second team, Mr. Mery, of Massachusetts. He started with it on a fast run to the left, with his head down. As he started, Perez started and made a lunge for Mery, with his head down also, and they came together. Mery's head struck Perez's over the right eye with such great force that the sound of the collision was heard some distance.

The Young Spaniard's Fall. Perez staggered and fell, Mery being only dazed, and he kept the ball and dashed into the opposite team. Richard Maddon, of the second team, who was not in the rush, saw Perez on the ground and his face bathed with water. Soon he revived and there was a big lump over his right eye. His mouth was working as if he had something in it, and Maddon saw that it was a roll of chewing gum.

By this time a crowd had gathered about the prostrate man, and he was picked up and carried to the bank nearby and his face washed with water. Soon he revived and was walked around the field once or twice. Then he was sent to his boarding house in a carriage. There he was able to walk quite well and he told Dr. and Mrs. Seelye, with whom he boarded, that he would come out all right in the morning.

Death Overtakes the Young Man. He retired quite early. At 9:30 o'clock p. m. Mr. and Mrs. Seelye heard a heavy fall upstairs, and going to Perez's room found him lying on the floor in convulsions and with his night clothes on. He had evidently fallen out of bed. Dr. Marill was sent for, and every effort was made to save him, but he remained unconscious until 11:30 p. m., when he died. He was 18 years old and had been in the college three months. His father and mother are wealthy and live in Spain. His brother is one of the proprietors of the Hotel Esplanade, New York, and he came here to-day and saw the doctor, and he learned all the details, and he thought it necessary to hold an inquest, as the doctors said death was caused by concussion of the brain.

The brother gave the necessary instructions for the proper care of the remains. Eastman students will view the remains to-morrow morning, and a committee of the schools will accompany them to New York.

KILLED BY A GUN TRAP. A Kentucky Man Sets the Snare for a Thief, but It Slays His Mother. LOUISVILLE, Oct. 21.—Mrs. Edward Neulist was instantly killed by the discharge of a gun trap this morning. Her son Edward had set the trap to kill a chicken thief, and as his mother opened the door of the coop the gun was discharged and the woman's head almost blown off. Neulist gave himself up and was charged with murder, but released on bail furnished by his father. The coroner's jury verdict was accidental killing.

Journalistic Work Made Easy. CHICAGO, October 21.—Journalists assigned to duty in connection with the dedication ceremonies have found their work much facilitated by the admirable arrangements for the press made by the Department of Publicity and Information. A complete space in a convenient locality, adequate telegraphic facilities and the free use of 50 Remington typewriters made the work of the press reporters comparatively easy, and enabled them to get off a full report of the proceedings in good shape.
