a Very Good Game. PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—The Williams Colmoon by the University of Pennsylvania team by a score of 50 to 0. Their opening rush was nearly the last throughout the game, and from the time they lost the ball at the

and from the time they lost the ball at the 25-yard line Williams played entirely on the defensive. Their line could not hold the heavy forwards of Pennsylvania and the latter rushed the ball with ease.

In the first half the University scored 16 points and played a miserable team game. Only the superior weight and strength of its rush line prevented their opponents from scoring. Williams made gains every time they kicked the ball, as the University backs musfed and fumbled the sphere every time it came their way. In addition to musting the ball the backs received but little protection from the forwards when they ran with the ball, and the Universities' gains were nearly all made by bucking the Williams' line. In the second half the Universities played ball improved in every particular, and the 34 points were made by touchdowns made by the back. The third play in the second half also told on the Williams tam and they did not play with the vigor they did when the game began. The usual number of casualties took place on both sides, but no one was seriously injured.

A. I. Banker Makes the Upward Distance in the Open Contest.

OTHER EVENTS IN THE FIELD OF SPORTS

The wheelmen had a busy day yesterday. They assembled in large numbers to take part in the parade, after which there was the hill climbing contest of the Keystone Bicycle Club. This was set for 2 o'clock in the afternoon, but, as the parade was not over by that time, it was 4 o'clock before the first men undertook to get to the top of Roup street hill. The Keystone Club members had invited the wheelmen to partake of lunch with them in their rooms, and over 100 were entertained there between 3 o'clock and 3:45. At 4 o'clock the 'cyclers gathered at the intersection of Fifth avenue gathered at the intersection of Fifth avenue and Roup street, where over 500 people, a large proportion of whom were ladies, had waited from 2 o'clock to see the novel affair. There were about 20 entries for the first climb, which was open to all of Western Pennsylvania, but a good many of these refused to attempt the feat. The success of A. L. Banker, who climbed the 950 feet with 143 feet ruse in one minute and 40 with 143 feet rase in one minute and 40 seconds, discouraged them, and they could not be induced to try for the gold medal

The first man to attempt the hill was L. C. Miller, of the Allegheny 'Cyclers. He rode up 800 feet before he gave out, and then H. M. Corwin got up to the 650-foot mark. Last came A. L. Banker, whose machine had a 49-inen gear and 7½-inen pedal. He went to the top in one minute and 40 seconds. The other entries could not be persuaded to try their strength and outsiders were invited to compete but they were were invited to compete, but they were deaf to the inducement offered.

Then Paul Nelson, with Banker's wheel, went up 875 feet. Wilson tried again, this time on Banker's wheel, and resched the 900-foot mark. Paul Nelson on next trial got clear up in one minute and 54 seconds. W. L. McConnell also made a good showing in his only attempt, but didn't quite reach the top. LEXINGTON, Oct. 21.-Four thousand people saw five races, which, if not of the best class of sport, at least furnished excitement and a great deal of money went, resulted in a reversal of the judges of the positions in which the horses actually finished. The foul was very apparent and the bettors were satisfied with the decison. Faraday, a horse for the running qualities of which $15,000 was paid, again met defeat at the hands of an ordinary selling plater. The books held him tight at odds of 1 to 6 on. The fourth race was a farce. The bad acting of Lord McLoucan, wild and bleeding at the mouth, ran off a mile and Carmenotia followed by running away for three-quarters. When finally they got away the field was strung out for an eighth of a mile and four horses left at the post walked around to the judges' stand. Alsogether it was a disastrous day for the talent, but the books were not large winners owing to their refusal of the Faraday money. Freeman was the only jockey to win more than one race. In a back parlor in the home of Edward D. Wind, at 400 Larimer avenue, lave the dead body of pretty little Estelle Wind. Her face is as beautiful now as when she lived. She was only 2 years and 9 months old, and was scalded to death by Fannie Leschkey, a servant, Thursday morning. Estelle was the twin sister of Clara Wind.

one of the sweetest looking children of her age in Pittsburg. Besides Clara there are two other little daughters in the family, the twin sisters of a boy and girl who are dead. Both the latter were killed by socident, as was Estelle on Thursday morning. One of the children fell downstairs over two years ago and died almost instantly, and the other little one, a year previous, broke her foot while playing and died from the effects of the injury. Little Estelle's Awful Death.

The story of Estelle's death is full of sorrow. Herself and her twin sister, Clara, were in the habit of awaking at 7 o'clock each morning. The first thing they did was to go to the kitchen to get coffee from the servant girl. On to get coffee from the servant girl. On Thursday morning Estelle came down stairs alone in her night dress, and sat behind the stove. Fannie was in the yard at the time, and the child's father, who keeps a large bakery, was out on the street. When the girl came in the child rushed to her arms and said she wanted something to eat.

A large pot of coffee was aimmering on the stove. Estelle hung on to the girl's dress while she went to get the coffee. She raised it off the stove and was about to place it on the table when the handle broke, and the contents fell on the child. The boiling liquid landed on the child's breast and hands and burned them in a frightful manner. The servant, with a scream, sank into unconsciousness, and Estelle dropped on the floor with a shrill cry.

What the Father Saw. Mr. Wind heard both shrieks and rushed toward the kitchen. He found his child apparently dead; her night clothes saturated with the coffee, and the skin beneath peeled with the coffee, and the skin beneath peeled off as if it were watered paper. He sent immediately for a doctor. When Fannie Leschke was restored to consciousness she began to realize the consequences of the accident and commenced to weep as if her heart would break. She cried herself sick and was placed under the doctor's care.

Estelle never recovered her senses, and died yesterday morning just 22 hours after being scalded.

When a DISPATCH reporter called at the home of Edward Wind last evening the house was crowded with friends who came to offer sympathy. Beside the bler of house was crowded with friends who came to offer sympathy. Beside the bier of Estelle sat Clara, the twin sister, her eyes bedimmed with tears, and fast asleep in her baby rocking chair. The sleeping child's golden curls hung about her neck in fleeces of the fairest texture. as she rested her little head upon her mother's arm. Set upon an easel in the opposite corner of the room was a large painting of both children. They were hand in hand and dressed alike. No artist could detect a line of difference in either face. They were perfect pictures of the one child in stature and appearance. stature and appearance.

This Was the Third Accident This was the third accident that Estelle had battled with in a short time. Four months ago she got away from her nurse one of the yard. One of the horses kicked her in the head, inflicting a wound which neces-sitated nine stitches in her forehead. She recovered from this accident after several weeks. Two weeks ago she was struck by a Larimer avenue electric car while attempting to cross the street. She was thrown several feet toward the sidewalk, but she was unburt. Her Providential escape was the talk of the neighborhood up to the time The servant through whose hands the child so unfortunately met her death is a German girl of about 20 years of age. She cannot speak a word of English. She has done nothing since the little girl died but done nothing since the little girl died but cry day and night. Mr. and Mra. Wind throw no blame on the young woman, and intend retaining her in their service, as she loved the children very much. Mr. Wind said last night that some fatality seemed to hover over his children. Three sets of twins had been born in his family and one of each pair was dead. He is himself one of the 24 children, and although there were many twins in the although there were many twins in the family, none of them met their death through any other than natural causes. Estelle will be buried to-morrow afternoon at St. Mary's Cemetery.
