NEWS FROM THE EUROPEAN CAPITALS

LONDON, Oct. 26 .- With a view to avoiding the calamitous effects that would tollow the threatened strike among the English cotton operatives, the Mayors of Liverpool and Manchester are trying to induce the disputants to consent to arbitration. The matter will be submitted to the council of the operatives Cotton Spinners' Association, which will meet next Saturday. The Masters' Federation has already held a meeting, but the decision arrived at has not been divulged. The opinion is general that the negotiations to bring about the arbitration of the trouble will prove truitless.

The subject is discussed on the Manchester Exchange. It is estimated that the threatened strike will affect 13,000-000 spindles. The Masters' Federation controls 18,000,000 spindles. The spinners in North and Northeast Lancashire and Bolton are not affected by the strike, and the 5,000,000 spindles in these districts will be run as usual, paying the Federation fine of 1 farthing per spindle a week.

Both Sides Are Well Prepared.

If 13,000,000 spindles stop, 52,000 persons, a large proportion of whom are women and children, will be idle. The funds of the operatives' organization are in a prosperous condition, and already support has been received from the spinners in the unaffected districts. Stocks of yarn in manufacturers' hands are heavy, and it is believed that if the production of yarns were stopped, weaving of cloth could be continued for two or three weeks without difficulty. If the lockout or strike should exten | over three weeks, the pinch would begin to be felt, and many of the weaving sheds would have to close.

The fine of a larthing a week on each of the working srindles will provide an income of over £5,000 weekly, and this will enable the Federation to continue its lockout. The operatives' organization is well prepared for a long straggle. Their fund already amounts to £120,000. The unaffected opera-tives are binding themselves to pay special levies during the strike. Many of the spin-ners who will quit work have voluntarily signified their willingness to forgo their pay for the first few weeks of the struggle. This will materially aid their organization.

One Weak Point of the Strikers.

A weak point in the position of the oper-atives is that nearly half of the men who are affected by the reduction of wages decided upon by the masters do not belong to the association and are, therefore, not entitled to draw strike pay. Their inability to hold out may result in a speedy ending of the struggle. The executives of the Masters' Federa tion has announced that the Federation is willing to submit the cotton trade dispute to arbitration if the operatives wish to adopt that means of settlement.

LONDON, Oct. 26 - A meeting of the London Chamber of Commerce was held to-day. The Rt. Hon. Sir John Lubbock, President of the Chamber, dwelt upon the unsatisfactory state of trade, which, however, he declared, had not been effected by the McKinley tariff to the extent that was expected. British trade with Americs, he said, had declined less than it had with other countries. The greatest sufferers were the Americans, who felt the pinch more acutely than did the British. "Canadian exporters, Sir John added, were in a condition of commercial paralysis that could not be indefinitely prolonged. The McKinley bill constituted a grand op-portunity for Canada. This bill had placed portunity for Canada. This off had placed American farmers at a disadvantage. If Canada profiled by the position and low-ered her import duties, her mer-chants would be benefiled, be-cause many British products required in the West would inevitably find their way through Canada and the border without paying the heavy American custom dues. Sir John declared that bimetallism would never be adopted in Great Britain, as it would be impossible to fix a ratio of value.

Final Arrangements for the Fervices in Washington and

AT THE CEMETERY IN INDIANAPOLIS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 .- The body of Mrs. Harrison was laid out to-day in the room in which she died. The emaciation shows the effects of the long, wasting illness of eight months, that reduced her large, matronly figure to a thin, frail form. But her tace in death has the same kindly expression that it had in life. The appearance is natural, and there are no lines of suffering visible upon it. She looks as if her last moments had been full of peace, and her expression suggests that she was tired and had gently dropped asleep. Mrs. McKce superintended the preparation of the remains for burial, and communicated the rishes of the family to the undertaker.

Mrs. Harrison, as is well known, was exceedingly fond of flowers. The casket will be deeply strewn with them, and they will form her couch. The body will be placed in the casket during the afternoon and quietly removed to the East Room at a late hour to await the funeral services to-morrow morning. The arrangements for these services are in a general way complete, though details yet remain to be fixed.

The President More Composed.

The President was more composed to-day than he was yesterday. He is reasonably calm, though deeply grief stricken. Private Secretary Halford consulted him for a short time during the morning about the details of the arrangements here and in Indianapolis, and the President made suggestions with reference to them. Habitually considerate of others, the President appears to be holding back his own deep griet in order to lighten the burden of those around him. He passes much of his time with his little grandson, Benjamin Harrison Mc-Kee. Between the two-the experienced soldier, statesman and President, and the light-hearted, manly little boy-there has always been a touching bond of affection, and an intimacy which overlooks the dis-parity in years. The lad is never happier than when he can persuade his grandlather than when he can persuade his grandlather to read to him, and Mr. Harrison, in his deep bereavement, finds in the lad's cheerful presence a welcome outlet for his strong iomestic feelings.
