A RESULT OF PITTSBURG'S GROWTH

The remarkable growth of Pittsburg in the last ten years is too well known to need much comment. The city is pushing out and spreading on all sides through Allegheny county. Town after town has been started in the suburbs, and while at one time it was leared the city would be injured by neighboring competition, the builders of the local places knew very well what they were doing.

Each town was a nucleus established mainly by Pittsburg capital. Many of them have east off their swaddling clothes and have become full-fledged boroughs. The intervening country between them and the city has become settled and the suburban line of Pittsburg greatly extended. Al egheny in reality is Pittspurg, and the teeming population along the Pennsylvania oad to Jeannette, on the beautiful bluffs overhanging the Ohio to Sewickley, and on the other side below Coraopolis, up the Monongahela river to McKeesport, the iron towns of Duquesne and Homestead, and the development of the country up the Allegheny and West Penn roads are in fact part and parcel of the great city named after the English commoner.

Bringing Big Business to Pittsburg. The new business resulting has been enormous, and has naturally gravitated to the downtown triangle below Grant street, from which point the varied industries of Allegheny county are directed.

It is surprising how the hill district overlooking the Ft. Wayne road has grown. The Pleasant Valley Company realizes this fact, and is building a big bridge across Jack's Run to the old Watson place with the intention of extending the line to Avalon. It is expected that the structure will be ready by spring, and real estate in that neighborhood is booming. It promises to be another East End in five years. The people are going at the improvements on an extensive scale, and are laying out the streets with an eve to the future. All this will reflect glory on the two cities. The extension of the street car lines is bound to result profitably,

The effect of the outside development has been to make property exceedingly valuable in Pittsburg proper. Mills and factories that were a few years ago considered in the outskirts of the city are now downtown. The real estate is to-day worth more than the buildings and the plants. The demand for the sites to be used for business houses and dwelling purposes is growing all the

The latest people to "catch on" to this idea are the green bottle manufacturers on the Southside. There are four companies in the business in Pittsburg-D. O. Cunningham, William McCulley & Co., Thomas Company. They control six factories, and together do a business of $2,000,000 per year. The plants were built at a time when the ground was cheap, but the city has grown, and now they are hemmed in by

H. Sellers McKee suggested a plan of factory near the city with a capacity much larger than the six plants put together. The firms have not consolidated like the flint glass men in the United States Glass

Company, but they regard the scheme with great lavor. The six factories are old and it would pay to rebuild them. The trouble now is to select a suitable site close to Pittsburg. All the available places along the railroads have been canvassed and the sub-

The Project Under Discussion.

Young Mr. Wightman said his company would be willing to sell its plant at the city's valuation. Mark Watson, of McCulley & Co., declined to talk, but admitted the bottle manufacturers are discussing such a plan. The affair is indefinite at present, but will soon assume shape.

The use of the tank in the manufacture of glass is a modern idea that is very successful. The combination intends to build at least two or three tanks. The glass can be made cheaper, while a good round sum for the manufacturers can turned by pulling down the old factories and putting the sites into the real estate market. It is rumored that some of the big mill owners out Penn avenue intend to do the same thing. The sites of some of the big plants in the Penn avenue district are said to be worth at least $1,000,000. This increase is the result of the city's develop-

Street Car Employes Now Taking on Their Wind Protectors.

Trees and street car employes are not alike. The former shed their foliage each fall, while the rapid transit men allow theirs to bud in autumn and bloom and blossom until the rays of an April sun warm the chilly winds of winter. On the faces of every motorman and conductor, old and young, little whiskerlets are now spronting. Most of the street cars in Pittsburg are open fore and sft. The motorman's position during the stormy months is a chilly one. The conductor, too, suffers considerably from the raw and piercing winds of winter. Their only face protection is a luxuriant growth of whiskers, and just now they are all trying to cultivate them. Their efforts are not always successful, and the barren faces of some of the traction men present unique appearances. They look like a storm-swept forest, with abort stumps stick-ing up here and there. Thanks to the warmer winds of spring these not altogether beautiful face stumps disappear.

MAKING REPUBLICANS. The McKinley Law's Effect on the Gun Ir

dustry-Belgium Not Able to Compete With the United States Under the Pres-

BUFFALO, Oct. 28 .- [Special.]-Hardly & day passes that Western New York does not see some practical illustration of the benefits of the tariff as imposed by the McKinley bill. The latest is that of the Burgess Gun Company, which is building immense works in this city, to be in running order by December 1. The company will employ about 100 men as a starter. Later the force will be largely increased, and everyone of these workmen will be an American. The works will cover ten acres and will be 100 feet long and four stories high.

A. Burgess, the treasurer and organizer of the company, and who is the inventor of several important gun mechanisms, is in his city overseeing the building of this f actory and will remain here. When asked how the McKiuley tariff affected his business, he replied:

ness, he replied:

"But for McKinley our industry would never have existed, and Belgium would have continued to manufacture nearly all the guns used in this country. Without a tariff we cannot compete with their pauper labor."

"They earn 1 franc in Belgium where they earn $1 here. The sweating system exists there in its worst form. Mr. Burgess called attention to another feature of the McKinley law. It takes the duty entirely off gun barrels. The reason is there are no twist barrels made in this country. It is all hand work and labor is too high here.

The gun business has been greatly bene-fited by the tariff. The factory at Batavia made 7,000 guns last year; this year there will be 20,000 turned out. This year Mr. Burgess will vote the Republican ticket for

Two Little Children Made to Suffer by an Unloving Father. Wonderling Epner, of Friendship ave-

He works at night sometimes and as he is a widower there is no one to look after his children. He is the lather of five little ones. For three of these he has a father's love, but for a girl aged 10 and a boy of 13 years he has no care. According to Mr. Fisher, Epner is only happy when these two children are out of his sight. He drives them from home in the dead of night, and for quite awhile the boy has secured his slumber in neighbors' coal sheds or at the police stations.

A night or two ago the girl was found on a neighbor's step. It was past midnight, and the little one said her father had driven her from home. She was picked up and carried to her door. Wonderling Epner was sitting in the kitchen dozing over a glass of beer, and when he slept his poor daughter was smuggled into bed.

Three Southside Boys Attempt to Rob a Store in Broad Daylight.

Three boys, ranging in age from 8 to 12 years, made a bold attempt to rob a store on Seventeenth street, Southside, yesterday and and with the money building a tank afternoon. They had succeeded so far as to have broken open the till, and were about to leave the place when discovered. One of the three, Anthony Ganghen, aged 11 years, of 1116 Frederick street, was captured by Officer Smith and locked up in the Twenty eighth ward police station. The store is owned by Mrs. Anna Reinheimer. As it was about 3 o'clock there was little business at the time, and she was in the rear room. Two of the boys remained on the outside to keep a lookout while Ganghen was sent in. He was taking the money out of the drawer, when the officer came along and saw him through a side window. He hastened around to the front of the store, when the other two boys told him they were waiting for Ganghen to come out, as he was making s purchase. The officer then arrested Gar ghen, and the other boys escaped. He will be given a hearing this morning.

Piazza, Spalle and a Third Man Attack the Victim on the Street.

THE MEN M'KEESPORT FRUIT VENDERS

"My knife was no good, it was too soft, but his was all right." These were the words of Salvatore Cantazaro, as he laid on what may be his death bed at the Homeopathic Hospital. Cantazaro is a Sicilian fruit dealer, of McKeesport. He came down to Pittsburg yesterday to buy some fruit, and while walking along Duquesne way he got into a dispute about business with three of his countrymen. A fight tollowed in which Cantazaro received an ugly stab on the left side near the heart. No one saw the beginning of the trouble and

Salvatore Cantazaro, the Victim of the Stilleto. the causes which led to it are not easy to find out, as the men implicated will not or cannot speak English. Edward Friel, a driver, happened to be driving along Duquesne way, and saw the men grapple each other. Friel jumped from his wagon and attempted to separate the men, but he was too late-the knife had found a victim. Upon Friel's interference two of the men ran up the street, tollowed by Francesco Lungo, who had a cobblestone in his hand.

o Falls in a Faint. In the meantime Cantazaro, who had been stabbed, staggered to the Fourth street, where he fell exhause ted from loss of blood, striking a pipe with his chin. Lungo followed the some distance up the street, and then turned to look after Cantazaro. Some of the employes of James Rees & Son had seen the man fall, and ran to his assistance. Every person thought Cantazaro was dead, but it was suggested that he be taken to the Homeopathic Hospital. Lungo was locked up in Central station. When Cantazaro arrived at the hospital he was in a state of semi-collapse, and there was but little hope of his recovery, but later in the afternoon a reaction occurred. Unless the effect of the internal hemorrhage is bad he will recover. A DISPATCH reporter saw Cantazaro yesterday atternoon. As the doctor came in Cantazaro asked in broken English if he was going to die. When the doctor told him he thought not, he said: "We only have to die once, but I don't want to go until I see my wife." He was asked what caused the fight, and said he and Plazza, who is rather an elderly man, have been engaged in the fruit business in McKeesport for some time.

A Business Rivalry Between Them. There had always been great rivalry between them, having lately resolved itself into a cut rate war. Whenever Cantazaro would reduce prices, Piazzo would follow suit and go him 5 or 10 cents better. Piazza usually got the worst of their business fights, and Cantazaro said that Piazza was so enraged at his success that he went to his store yesterday and, after making some little fuss, struck his brother-in-law in the eye. When Cantazaro heard this he angry and wanted revenge. He he couldn't tell much about the fight on Duquesne way as he was so weak. Cantazaro claims that the three nen who were with him, Piazza, Spallo and another man whose name he could not remember but who is evidently Lungo, all united in their attack upon him. Can-tazaro is married and has three children. He has been in business in McKeesport for five years.

Thomas McGowan, a commission merchant who has had considerable dealings with Cantazaro, said: "He is an honest man and does quite a large business. He has purchased as much as $40,000 worth of goods from me this last year. He is the leader of a crowd of fruit dealers.

Organize Italian Buying Clubs. "You know the small Italian dealers have what you might call buying clubs. They band together and buy a car of fruit. Then each one comes to the office and pays his share of the amount. The dealers then repair to the freight yard and stock the fruit in as many piles as there are members in the party. They then decide who shall have first choice in a very peculiar manner. It is called 'throwing fingers.' They stand in a line, and at a given signal they simultaneously display as many fingers as they please. The sum total of the number of fingers displayed by all the men is then taken and commencing at the head of the lipe they begin counting. The man upon whom the number which is the sum of the fingers displayed falls has first choice This is repeated until each gets his share."

A telegram from McKeesport last evening says that Piazza so far has not returned home, and the Pittsburg officers who are there will have to look elsewhere for their
