Tenderly Laid All That's Mortal of the First Lady of the Land. .

THE SORROW OF THE PRESIDENT

Reveals Itself to Old Time Neighbors in the Simple Obsequies.

INDIANAPOLIS SHOWS ITS SIMPATHY

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 28.—It was 9:30 o'clock this morning when the special train bearing all that is mortal of Mrs. President Harrison stopped at the depot. It was met by thousands of sympathetic friends, who awaited its coming with bowed heads and saddened hearts.

Everything being in readiness the casket was lifted, and slowly and reverently the cortege moved out to the carriages in waiting. The casket was born by John B. Elam, the President's law partner; John B. Martindale, Judge Woods, General Lew Wallace, Dr. Lew Allen and T. P.

A detail of 30 police officers led the way, and was followed by carriages containing the officiating divines, Rev. Dr. Haines and Rev. Dr. Hyde. The carriages containing the pallbearers preceded the hearse. Then came the President's carriage and those of the family and the members of the Cabinet and their ladies, Governor Chase and the State officials, the Supreme and Appellate Court Judges, the Ladies' Board of Managers of the Orphans' Home, the delegation from Chicago, Mayor Sullivan, of this city, the city officials and friends of the family. It was a long line of vehicles, for the head of the cortege had traversed nearly half of the long route to the church when the last of the procession was leaving the depot square.

The Grand Army Shows Its Respects. From Ohio street to the church the route was lined with the members of the various local posts of the Grand Army, standing in open order and uncovered. About 5,000 of the veterans thus evidenced their sympathy for their comrade in his overwhelming atfliction.

The First Presbyterian Church, where the services were held, had been elaborately draped, and there was great profusion of flowers and plants. The services were sim-ple, in accordance with the President's desire, and commenced immediately after the congregation had been seated.

Rev. Dr. Haines, Mrs. Harrison's pastor during the latter years of her residence in this city, delivered a touching and eloquent address, his text being: "Comfort One An-other With These Words." In conclusion

We all mourn here to-day, but we canno forget the mostly circle where this sorrow is the heaviest; the Christian household, now desolate, of which she was the light and joy. 1 pray you who suffer most to remem-ber that you have the heartfelt sympathies of your old friends and neighbors and felof your old friends and neighbors and fel-iow citizens, irrespective of creed or party, or nationality or station. We sorrow with you in your sorrow. I ask you not to forget that the sympathies of the people of this whole land are yours. They have hushed their steps and waited with growing solici-tude these weeks and months of struggle and anxiety. And now that in spite of the skill of the physicians and the tender minis-trations of loving hands, the will or Heaven has been made clear, they carry you in their hearts.

And better even than all the sweetness and strength and comfort of genuine human sympathy, I pray you to remember that you have the great heart of a covenant-keeping God as your refuge. He has promised to walk with as in our troubles, to make them work together for our good, and, finally, to to give us complete deliverance. Trust in the Lord and wait patiently for Him. God never yet failed a human heart that did trust and wait. May He bring to you new sense of the larger meanings of life helping you to realize that arter all, in this universe, "Li e is lord of death, that true love, is immortal, that this world is but the vestibule to a grander realim, that now you have treasure beyond price haid up for you there, that earth linth no sorrow that heaven cannot heal." And better even than all the sweetness

The Services at the Grave.

After the services the funeral cortege reformed and proceeded to Crown Hill Cemetery, the sidewalks along the route being crowded with sympathizing spectators. The services in the cemetery consisted of the reading of passages of Scripture and the offering of prayer, after which the remains of Mrs. Harrison were lowered into the grave, which was thickly lined with chrysanthemums and evergreens.

Along Delaware street thousands of people stood with uncovered heads as the long line of carriages passed slowly by. In front of the President's Indianapolis residence sightseers had gathered in numbers that rendered the sidewalks almost impassable. Crown Hill Cemetery was not reached until 1:30 o'clock. Here a crowd of 5,000 people had assembled to witness the close of the ceremonies, which here, as elsewhere, were characterized by the utmost

The lot selected is upon a hillside which slopes gently forward. The grave had been dug facing the East. The means for the preservation and protection of the remains were of the most substantial character. The proceedings were watched by the President with streaming eyes, and ever and anon his sturdy frame was convulsed with the poignancy of his grief.

Returning to the Capital. Leaving the cemetery the President, Mr. and Mrs. McKee, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Harrison and Mrs. Dimmick and other near relatives proceeded to the residence of R. S. McKee, where they had luncheon and were visited by a few intimate friends.

The special train bearing the Presidental party left here at 5:30 o'clock on its return to Washington. Secretaries Rusk and Noble did not go back with the party. The former is going to Chicago and from there o Wisconsin to take part in the political campaign, and the latter is going to his home in St. Louis for the same purpose. General Schofield and his aide, and Secretary Charles Foster and his Secretary, Mr. Wyne, who joined the party here, returned with it to Washington. Ex-President Haves accompanied it to Co-lumbus. A large crowd assembled at the station to pay a parting tribute to the President, but made no demonstration beyond an uncovering of heads and the waving of handkerehiels. Just before his departure, the President gave the press a note to the public, of which the following is a conve

My Dear Old Friends and Neighbors:

I cannot leave you without saying that the tender and gracious sympathy which you have to-day shown for me and for my children, and, much more, the touching evidence you have given of your love for the dear wife and mother, have deeply moved our hearts. We yearn to tarry with you and to rest near the hallowed spot where your loving hands have laid our dead, but the little grandchildren watch in wandering silence for our return and need our care, and some public business will not longer wait upon my sorrow. May a gracious God keep and bless you all.

Most gratefully yours. My Dear Old Friends and Neighbors:

Most gratefully yours, BENJAMIN HARRISON,

Colonel James Andrews Talks Entertai ingly on This Interesting Subject. Colonel James Andrews gave an interesting talk on the Eads jetties to the students of the Western University. "The jetties," he said, "consisted of what are termed mattresses. We first fastened together the planks with hickory pegs making a raft about 50 feet wide by 100 feet long leaving the pegs stand up about three leet. We then filled in around the pegs with willows, turning and weaving them around the pegs. When completed they were floated to the end of the pass and

WILL VISIT BEAVER FALLS.

Committee Appointed and Resolution Adopted by the Strikers.

The strikers in the Twenty-ninth and Thirty-thifd street mills held another meeting yesterday, at which there were fully 500 men. Beaver Falls received the most attention, and a committee was appointed to attend the conference at that place, and on its return to make a report of the special proceedings. A resolution was unani-mously adopted, declaring that every member of the organization could affiliate with any political party and take part in the demonstrations of any national political organization without restraint from the association. This resolution is intended to refute any publication that the men were being coerced in their party affiliations.

From the East End.

good customer from the East End writes:
"I used to think that there was nothing "I used to think that there was nothing like home-made bread, but have changed my mind completely. I haven't baked for over a year and I find that the whole samily likes Marvin's Bread fully as well as they did my own. It seems to arree with the children, too. They have got fat on it and I know too. They have got fat on it and I know that I have enjoyed better health since I quit the drudgery of baking. I don't see what excuse anybody can have for baking when they can get Marvin's Bread."

This is only one of a good many letters that we have received, but it shows the general sentiment of those who use Marvin's Bread. You can get the bread from your grocer. Give it a trial.

Oriental Rugs as a rule come to this country in great bales. They are sorted by experts. The commoner kinds, the poorer qualities and the defective Rugs are tossed aside to be disposed of in the auction rooms or to the wandering rug pedlers, who make the circuit of the American cities, never expecting to see their customers a second time. To one who is unwary in these things it is very easy to be woefully deceived in buying from irresponsible deal-

It would startle the crafty turbaned merchants of the bazars of Cairo and Constantinople to see our large stock of Oriental rugs, every one marked at an unvarying price.
