

Give Harrison the Best of the Situation, and Believe

HE WILL WIN IN NOVEMBER.

A Silly Democratic Foorback Enocked Out of the l'olitical Arena.

REPUBLICAN PRINCIPLES BANKED ON

FROM & STAFF CORRESPONDENT. WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 .- "What is your opinion of the situation?" is the one question asked here, and it can be asked here with a better grace than almost anywhere else in the country, for the reason that in some measure Washington is supposed to be out of the political whirl. This, however, at this stage of the game is a supposition based on the reflection that the only people of the District who can vote are at this particular moment getting out of the disfranchised regions to their respective homes, while the big politicians who are in-fluential in State and National affairs have been out most of the time for a month or

It is a fact, however, that in the last week be ore the elections there is no place in the country where the political pulse is telt so keenly and so surely, for there is no place in the country where the results of a national battle are of so much social and physical moment; for in this city there is little except that which is the capital of the coun-try, and politics and the social atmosphere that is the result of politics are almost all there is of it. It therefore happens that at the last moment before the elections the heartheat of things is possibly felt with a finer finger than at any other time or at any other place.

Republicans Have the Best of It.

The keenest politicians of the country in both parties pass much of the last weeks of the chuppings at headquarters in New York, but their weakly runs over to the capital, many of them having their homes here, are probably productive of a freer expression probably productive of a freer expression of opinion than could be got elsewhere. A larger number than usual of this class of keen observers have been here yesterday and to-day, for a last visit belore they go home to vote, and what is their verdict? The one certain thing is that at no time within the memory of living men was there an expression of so much doubt. Whether it be a Cabinet offleer, or a great Senator, or that larger class of politicinas who are potent in their States, members of the Lower House and local manacers, if their dicta were lumped in one word it would be that nobody could tell anything about it until after the elections.

nobody could tell anything about it until after the elections. In all this, however, there is a leaven of bins to one side of the situation-a very deli-ente leaven, to be sure, but still sufficient to enable one to make a real division of the doubt, and show its leaning to one side of the middle of things, and this, among Demo-crats as well as Republicans, is in favor of the Republican side.

A Democrat Gives Up New York.

I met to-day a politician from the South, a thorough and enthusiastic Democrat, who has spent the last week in New York and has been in the most intimate intercourse with the managers at the Democratic headquarters. He has a warm personal as well as political intimacy with several of these managers, and he assures me that while they are willing to bet their bottom dollars they are willing to bet their bottom dollars on the election of the Democratic ticket in New York and Brookiyn, and of a clear ma-jority in the State Legislature, they would not put up a dollar, except as a bluff, on the success of the Democratic electoral ticket in the State. This gentleman is a loyal iriend of Cleveland, and desires his election above all things political, and his name has great weight in the connels of the country. This very evident excess of Democratic doubt over Republican doubt, small as it is, adds to Republican hope and confidence, and none of the Democratic stories can dash and none of the Democratic stories can dash their confidence that in the midst of all the doubt the advantage is theirs and will re-main theirs when the votes are counted.

Imain theirs when the votes are counted.
The specially interesting roorback of the day is that the nomination of Reid for the Vice Presidency was against the wish of Presidency was against the wish of Presidency was against the wish of the tormer upon his return from Paris, and that there has been no cordiality between the two. Now, whatever difference of opinion there may be among Republicans on the guestion of the policy of the nomination was the direct result of the interposition of the policy of the policy of the policy of the policy of the interposition of the policy of the interposition of the policy of the

The average for the part may justly be taken as the average for the whole; but to be sure to understate the case rather than incur the risk of any error of energention, we may safely put theaverage at 25 per cent. The establishments reported are chiefly in the textile industries. According to the consos of 189 the aggregate mount of wages paid by all of the establishments energed in the textile industries in Phila-delphia wos $22,147,34. As a matter of fact this increased amount, due to greater business, arises both from an increase in the number of persons employed and from the steadier employment and consequently greater earnings of the former operatives. We give results in Philadelphia because they are personally known to us. But Philadelphia is not exceptional. We submit to our countrymen that what is true here is true in greater or less degree of all indus-trial centers and activities. And the pros-perity of all the people is interwoven and bound up with the prosperity of these broad industrial interests and the confinued active employment of this great body of workers. We submit to our countrymen that it would be madness to incur these risks, and that every consideration alike of American patriotism and business prodence urges the maintenance of our present industrial pol-icy and the continuation of the administra-tion of Pre-ident Harrison, both of which have so splendidly justified themselves by practical results.

President Harriso

Reid Ever Loyal to Harrison

Whatever Reid may have been to other leaders in other days he was always loyal to Harrison, and his appointment to the great post of the mission to France is well known to have been the result of Harrison's admiration of the values service rendered to him and to the Republican cause by Reid, when the intter had no thought of diplomatic or other reward. The mission to France was urged upon

The mission to France was urged upon Reid by the President personally as was his acceptance of the nomination for the Vice Presidency, through the medlum of Mr. Depew, who was the prime spokesman of Mr. Harrison at Minneapolis. Mr. Harrison has repudiated to his friends the assertions that he has felt any displeasure at Reid's numination, or that he has felt at any time that his presence of the ticket detracted in any way from what it would be if his own name were the sole tower of strength, and Mr. Harrison will repudiate after the elec-tions, if they should go against him, any suggestion that Reid's name was a weakness to the ticket more than any other man's would have been. While Mr. Harrison has a fine condidence in his own abilities he is not an egotiat and he believes the party and these and wall the set the party and not an egotist and he believes the party and it a bord will carry the day, irrespective of the lidates.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.-[Special]-The Union League of this city has sent out the following address, which speaks volumes for the beneficial effects of the Mc-Kinley bill on the industries of this city. The address is signed by Charles Emory Smith, President, and a committee composed of the leading members of the organization:

The Union League, of Philadelphia, with 50 years of pathiotic history and embracing 1,500 active business men of this great industrial city, addresses an earnest word to the putriotic impulses and the business interests of the country. Within ten days the American people are
