

THE RIGHTS OF A HOST.

He Cannot Be Punished for Giving Liquor to His Sunday Guests.

A SUPREME COURT DECISION.

Judge Kennedy Talks Plainly to a Criminal Court Jury.

THE NEWS OF THE COUNTY COURTS

Nineteen decisions were handed down in the Supreme Court yesterday. The most interesting opinion was by Justice Williams in the case of the Commonwealth against Carey and three others.

Justice Williams said: "This question is based on the question of prohibiting the use of liquor by a private citizen on his own table on Sunday, or making it a misdemeanor to furnish them to his own family or guests in his own house."

"But if for reasons of health or habit one chooses to have for himself, his family or his guests, liquor in his house, there is no law forbidding him to do so. If the jury in this case had found that the camp used by the men was the defendants' home while engaged in the legitimate and important business they were engaged to do and that the acts complained of were of hospitality and extended to guests, they should have acquitted them."

The case of Gill against the Johnstown Lumber Company, decided by Justice Hendrick, is a peculiar case. It is one in which Gill recovered in the lower courts for a lot of logs, which were swept away by the Johnstown flood before they had been delivered to the defendant's property.

IN THE SUPREME COURT.

Law and Order Society Suits Argued—Considerable Interest Manifested in the Cases—Seeking to Recover the Expense of a Sheriff's Post.

The Law and Order Society cases against the Sunday newspapers were up before the Supreme Court yesterday for argument. There were eight of them in number, all the defendants having been fined $25 before Alderman Robe for selling Sunday newspapers.

The defendants had all been fined before Alderman Robe; had appealed to Quarter Sessions Court, and Judge Porter sustained the judgment of the Alderman. Attorneys W. R. Rodgers and A. M. Brown appeared for the appellants, and William Yost argued the cases for the Law and Order Society.

The attorneys in their verbal arguments before the court were listened to attentively by the Justices and a large number of spectators whose presence had been attracted by the announcement that the arguments would be made yesterday.

The other cases argued were: The borough of Verona against the Allegheny Valley Railway Company, an action to compel the company to remove a freight station from a piece of property over which an easement had been granted to the company.
