MRS. SMYTH'S BROOCH

Gets Aristocratic Families by the Ears in the Law Courts.

ITS OWNER STICKS TO HER STORY

And Positively Identifies Before the Jury the Gew-Gaw as Hers-

MRS. LIEUT. LEADER'S ACID THRUSTS

LONDON, Nov. 2.-To-day Mrs. Leader again took the stand and Sir Edward Clarke resumed the cross-examination in her suit for slander against the wife of Major General Smyth. Sir Edward plied his questions thick and fast, but his efforts to con-Juse Mrs. Leader met with little success.

In response to a question as to whether Mrs. Smyth had not on several occasions loaned her the brooch which was the cause o' all the trouble, she replied: "She loaned me a paste necklace once, not a diamond one." Sir Edward tried to show that the ladies knew all about each other's jewelry and asked a great number of questions leading in this direction. Mrs. Leader replied that she knew nothing whatever about Mrs. Smyth's jewelry, adding: "It is quite possible she knew all about mine, as she seems to be singularly observant,"

Lieutenant Leader was the next witness. His testimony throughout confirmed the evidence given by his wife. Herbert Robinson, who had been Mrs. Leader's servant while she was in Egypt, gave important evidence for his former mistress, among other things confirming Mrs. Leader's statement that she had the brooch in Ezypt. He testified that every week while he was in Mrs. Leader's employ he had cleaned the brooch in question. Mrs. Porter, wife of Captain Porter, of the Indian service, testified that in June, 1891, Mrs. Leader had lonned her a brooch similar to the one she had sold at Dibdin's. Mrs. Leader's maid and several other witnesses testified that they had often seen Mrs. Leader wearing the brooch before the date on which Mrs. Smyth says she lost hers.

The Jeweler in the Case Testifies. Mr. Stokes, the jeweler to whom Mrs. Lender had testified she offered to exchange the brooch for some silverware, but who did not ofter what she considered a fair price for it, next testified. He said Mrs. Legder called at his place of business September 19 of the said Mrs. tember 21, 1891 (two days before Mrs. Leader called on Mrs. Smyth and spent some time in the latter's bedroom, from which the brooch was alleged to have been stolen), and offered to sell him a brooch. He effected to allow her £4 for it, but she did not think the amount sufficient, and declined to make the exchange.

This concluded the evidence for Mrs.

Leader, and Sir Edward Clarke began his speech for the defense. Though in the pleadings Mrs. Smyth and General Smyth had declared that if the alleged slanderous works were spoken they were true in sub-stance and fact, Sir Edward started in by asking the jury to acquit Mrs Smyth of any wicked intention to harm Mrs. Leader. When Mrs. Smyth had made the remarks forming the subject of the action, she believed that the brooch she saw exposed for sale in Dibdin's jewelry shop was hera. Concerning That Man Trench,

Continuing, Sir Edward declared that Mrs. Leader's acquaintance with Captain Trench was rather odd. Mrs. Smyth, be said, had remonstrated with Mrs. Leader for asking Captain Trench to her house. Now that Captain Trench was dead, Mrs. Leader set up the story that the brooch was a gift from him.

Upon the conclusion of Sir Edward's address Mrs. Smyth was sworn. She testified that she had been on the most friendly terms with Mrs. Leader, and knew what jewelry she had. She had remonstrated with Mrs. Leader about the visits of Cap-tain Trench. Mrs. Smith told in detail the incidents of Mrs. Leader's visit to her room while she was dressing, the disappearance of the brooch, its discovery in the jewelry shop and other circumstances connected with the case.

While testifying Mrs. Smyth asked to see While testifying Mrs. Smyth asked to see the brooch in question. It was shown her. She examined it and exclaimed: "I notice that a point has been straightened."

In cross-examining Mrs. Smyth, Mr. Lockwood, Mrs. Leader's counsel, asked: "Do you mean that this brooch is different from yours?" Mrs. Smyth again examined the brooch, and then said: "No, it is mine."

"But you were mistaken at first?" inter rogated Mr. Lockwood.
"I am not now," was the answer. Mrs.
Smyth admitted that Mrs. Leader's second lady's maid, who is now married and living in Cairo, used to come to her house.
