The Situation Looks Encouraging.

Colonel James B. Finlay, of Kittanning, Republican-I am hopeful of Republican success, but no man can be certain. The situation looks encouraging to me. The noisy bluffing and betting on either side does not mean snything, and I never pay the least attention to this business. I recently returned from Europe, where I studied the laboring classes carefully for the purpose of comparison with our own people. In London during the evening I trequently noticed men on the streets without hats and shoes; others were badly dressed, their clothes were worn and faded and some had holes in their coats. They were workmen. Now, you never see any. thing like that in this country. Our labor ing classes are well dressed and fed. Why, then, should they introduce an economic system into the country that will reduce them to the level of the foreigners. I think the American workmen have more sense. The country is in a prosperous condition, and people will besitate a long time before exchanging a sure thing for an uncertainty The old men who had a taste of free trade during Buchan un's administration, nevel want a recurrence of the experience.
