Chicago. This had a bad effect on young Garvin. He pined for his sweetheart, lost his appetite, his interest in everything, in fact, but the letters which came constantly from his beloved Cora. She kept writing that she was still devoted to him, always faithful to the man who had become her absolute slave. He thought he was the only man admitted to her favors, and when only man admitted to her lavors, and when she finally agreed to return he was over-joyed. He paid her fare from Chicago, as he had often before supplied her and her mother with money. Three days after her return they were married and went to live at Garvin's home in Allegheny. The trouble heres there trouble began there.

What the Defense Will Show.

The defense intends to show that on the very day Cora was married she received a letter from one Edward Rahm, of Sewickley, a married man, asking her to meet him in town. The day after her marriage she got another letter, naming the time between 12 and 5 o'clock as most convenient for their meeting. On the same day Cora told Frank he was too poor to buy the clothes and give her the pleasures of life she was used to. While she fondled him she was murmuring in his ear: "You know you can't support me on $18 a week! On Friday I want to go to town, and I want to go alone!" This from a bride of three days! Frank happened to pick up a box of writing paper belonging to his wife and found a le ter from a man informing her that he came up on the Fort Wayne every day. When Friday came he plead with her not to keep the appointmen with the man in town, even taking off her shoes to keep her at home, but she put on the best dress she had and said she would go. What happened next nobody knows exactly, but the in-furiated husband, in a frenzy of despair, shot the erring woman to death. As to his condition when he fired Mr. Marshall promised the jury an expert would be called to testify in plain terms. Mr. Marshall conwith an appeal for acquittal or a verdict of manslaughter.

A small spat between Mr. Marshall and the District Attorney occurred during the former's address. Mr. Marshall was telling the jury that they might expect to hear his arguments called rubbish by the District Attorney later on, as he had so termed the Hou. Thomas M. Marshall's speech in a preceding murder case, and Mr. Burleigh quietly asked the Court if such remarks were in place in an opening speech.

Judge McClung Interposes. Judge McClung directed Mr. Marshall to stick to his case. "One murder trial at a time is enough," he added. Miss Annie Garvin, called for the defense, related many incidents in her brother's life during the three months before the tragedy, the gist of which went to show that his mind was unhinged. One day he started to go out into the street with his head dripping with vaseline, which he said he had put on to prevent baldness—he has a heavy head of hair. Another time he made his little brother take his photograph in the character of Napoleon, and during August he had no less than four dozen photographs of himself taken. These queer acts, the witness said, followed Cora's departure to Chicago. Frank Garvin ate very little after he was married and seemed greatly worried, especially about a bracelet with a lock and key which some other man had given his

Mrs. Edward Rahm, a modest and pretty woman, stylishly dressed in a dark blue walking dress and a black and blue hat, was called to identify a number of letters from her husband, Edward Rahm, to the deceased, Cora Redpath Garvin. She ognized the handwriting on about a dozen letters, which were at once offered in evidence. They are understood to include the letters referred to by Mr. Marshall in his

On the counsel table a heap of other letters, supposed to be of the same character but from other persons, remained after the Rahm correspondence had been sorted out. To say that the spectators, especially the women, took a deep interest in this part of the proceedings is putting it mildly.

The other witnesses called before the Court rose testified to the defendant's excel lent character in the community. The witnesses were Paul E. Martin, C. A. Balph, John S. Ritenour, Patrick Kearns, J. K. Mackerell, W. G. Ross, R. M. Downing and J. M. Nellis.

Locked-Out Men Relieve Their Feelings With a Democratic Parade.

RIOTERS HELD FOR COURT,

The Strikers Will Not Accept the Terms of the Company.

WOMEN ATTACK NON-UNION MEN.

The Result of the Conference Awaited With Interest.

THE INCIDENTS OF AN EXCITING DAY

Homestead is yet quivering under the intense excitement caused by yesterday's battle. All day there seemed need of a safety valve by which the pent up feeling could escape. It came last night in the shape of a Democratic parade. There was no disorder during the day except in the evening, when the colored men who did the shooting were being taken from the lockup to the train on the Monongahela Division of the Pennsylvania railroad. Then a large crowd assembled and hooted and jeered so that the deputies thought that an attack would be made upon the prisoners, but the latter were permitted to get on the train

In the early morning Mike Sullivan, a striker, was arrested for participation in the fight yesterday. As he was taken down two strikers named Condon and Wall entered the headquarters and began a vigorous protest against the characterization of many strikes as disorderly. They then left and three minutes later a woman ran into the deputies' headquarters and said that two non-unionists were being assaulted on Dickson street.

Didn't Practice What They Preached. The deputies ran down and there found Condon and Wall attacking two millworkers. The former were instantly arrested.

Captain Clark reports that three women tried to quarrel with two colored men on City Farm lane, hurling all manner of insulting epithets at them. The colored men did not reply. The hearing of the eight colored men and four strikers implicated in Sunday's fight came off at 4 o'clock in the lockup. The names of the colored men were William Scott, E. Willis, Wm. Carey, Lewis Thompson, Haines Holmes, Nelson Gaines, H. Wilson and J. E. Williams. The white men and strikers were James Jones, Peter McAllister, Mike Barco and Mike Sullivan. They were all charged with riot. 'Squire Oeffner conducted the hearing and R. R. Petty, Esq., Assistant District Attorney, was present. John F. Cox, Esq., appeared for the strikers. He started to defend the men and offered to introduce witnesses for the defense, when Mr. Petty interposed and instructed 'Squire Oeffner that he had no jurisdiction in such an offense as was charged and could only hear the side of the nmonwealth.

All the Defendants Held for Court, At the conclusion of the hearing all the defendants were held for court in $500 bail each. McAllister and Jones secured bail, but the colored men and Sullivan were taken to Pittsburg and lodged in jail.

During the hearing a large crowd gath ered outside the jail, but conducted themselves in an orderly manner. Mrs. James Jones in her anxiety for her husband interrupted several witnesses and finally the Squire told her she would have to remain

Sheriff McCleary spent the day in Home-stead, and investigated the conduct of his force here. He expressed himself as highly satisfied with them, and said he would not increase the force, as he felt that the depu-ties here are amply able to cope with any disorder which may arise.

There is intense feeling over the conferences between the Advisory Committees from here, Lawrenceville and Beaver Falls in Pittsburg, and it is generally thought that some steps are being taken to bring about a settlement, though nothing authentie is known.

A Conference With the Firm.

It is reported, however, on apparently reliable authority, that the Advisory Committee appointed a sub-committee to call upon the Carnegie Steel Company, Limited, and from this arose a rumor that the fight had been called off. This called for paractic desurgation of the committee of the called for the cal energetic denunciation on part of many of the locked-out men who declared that they would not consent to accept the terms of the company. The above report excited non-union men also, who called upon their foremen. They were assured that they would not be discharged.

The Democratic jubilation to-night was headed by the Jacksonian Club, and while there was no regular parade over 1,000 persons marched through the principal streets, while red fire was burned at the Democratic headquarters. Several houses were decorated with bunting and illuminated.

Colored Homesteaders Have Trouble. Last night several colored non-union men went to the A. M. E. Church ou Tenth avenue and started a fight, during which about 50 shots were exchanged but no one hurt. Several white men interfered. As a result two of the colored non-unionists and two white men were arrested. The trouble started two weeks ago, when the church gave an oyster supper. Two colored non-unionists attended, and in a row that ensued were badly worsted. Last night, with several comrades, they went to the church to obtain revenge. The noise of the shooting caused great excitement in Homestead for a time, and caused many

THE LEADERS CONFER.

The Advisory Committees of the Strikers Meet the National Officers of the Amalgamated Association in a Long Confer ence-The Result Is Yet in Doubt.

A most significant conference was held yesterday at the Amalgamated Association's headquarters on Smithfield street. Not since the Homestead strike was declared last June has there been so much apparent uneasiness and evident lack of confidence on the part of the leaders as is now evidenced. In the face of the greatest difficulties and when the Carnegie Steel Company was apparently running its mills satisfactorily with non-union men, the strikers have maintained a bold front, but the time has now come, when, unless all indications fail, the strike is approaching a conclusion.

Early yesterday morning, the Advisory Boards of the mills at Homestead, Law-renceville and Beaver Falls met in consultation with the national officers and remained closely closeted with them until 10 o'clock last night. All the leaders interested in the struggle were present and the situation was thoroughly discussed. The long continued strike at the various plants of the Carnegie firm has thrown so many men upon the support of the order that it is thought to be absolutely necessary that some definite and final action be taken. The starting of the Beaver Falls mills is exercising its influence. All these causes combined are hav-ing an effect that is telling heavily on the After the conference the officers were

"Well, what was considered?" "Nothing to be given out at present," he eplied, and the interview closed. Chairman Crawford of the Homestead Advisory Committee was seen as he was about to take the train for Homestead. He was apparently much worried, and received the reporter with the remark: "What we did to-day I intend to keep to myself. You could talk to me for a month and I would tell you nothing," and wheeling around he

The first of the hearings before Commissioner Beal in the triennial assessment cases was held in the City Hall reception room yesterday. An effort was made to show that the board had been assisted in its work by outsiders. Chief Assessor Case said while on the stand that well-informed persons gave the board information, but no particular assessments were made upon such informa-tion. CAMPBELL & DICK. BIGELOW'S LION FREE.

Breaks the Bars of His Den and Gets Out Before Discovered.

MAKES A DESPERATE BATTLE.

The Trainer Finally Drives Him Cack With a Red Hot Iron.

ONE MAN BADLY HURT BY THE BRUTE

One of the big lions which Chief Bigelow has been endeavoring to purchase for the Schenley Park zoological collection escaped from its cage at New Castle yesterday and caused a sensation. There are a pair of the lions. The largest of the two broke the bars of his prison before the keeper, Mark Monroe, who sleeps in the animal quarters, was awake. A terrific roar in the enclosure caused Monroe to jump from his bed. When he opened the door he was horrified to see the big fellow standing in the center of the room, glaring around him and lashing himself with his tail. The other animals were huddled together in one corner of the space trembling and uttering piteous cries of fear.

It was Mouroe's first impulse to enter with his sharp pointed pike and attempt to drive the "king of the forest" back into his den. But he changed his mind. When he made a step forward the lion made two, and was crouching for a mighty spring when the trainer realized the danger. He jumped back then and closed the door.

A huge iron poker lying on the floor presented an idea. Seizing it the trainer thrust it into the furnace. In two or three minutes the poker was red hot. Then the trainer ran quickly to the inclosure and opened the door. The great beast rose as if surprised at the boldness of the attack. Before he had recovered Monroe ran up and struck him with the hot iron.

The lion made a spring for his trainer who parried him off with the hissing iron and caused him to roar with rage. The other animals also joined in the acclaim making a frightful noise and drawing a frightened crowd around the building. Monroe forced the fighting. For some time the big fellow fought back, but finally after he had been terribly scorched with the red-hot bar he began to retreat to his

Once inside Monroe banged the blind door shut and the danger was over. During the morning new bars were inserted where the lion had broken the old ones, and then the blind door was removed. The lion cronched in the corner of his cage growling and licking his wounds. George Bishop went in and stopped to look at the wounded animal. Before he realized his danger the lion sprang against the bars with all his force, reaching one of his mighty paws through the bars to the shoulder and catching Bishop by the thigh. The lion's clawssank into the flesh, lascerating it fearfully and causing Bishop to scream with pain. As-sistance came quickly and he was rescued in the nick of time. Then the blind door was replaced and will be kept there until the danger of another attack is over. As a result of the escape the lion is badly disfigured. He was one of the finest specimens in the country and Chief Bigelow was anxious to secure him on that account.

Said to Be Helping the Homesteaders. Detective John Bruce, of Chicago, is said to be gathering evidence to be used in the defense of the Homestead strikers, The attorneys for the defense claim to know nothing of Bruce's work.
