OIL DRILLER MURDERED.

Oliver Kelly and Jack Killen Get in a Fight-West Harrington Interferes for Killen and Murders the Former-The Murderer Not Arrested,

The death of Oliver M. Kelly at the West Penn Hospital vesterday morning added another murder to Allegheny county's long list. He was the victim of an oil Kelly worked as a laborer in the Oakdale district. On Friday he was at Willow Grove. There he met Jack Killen. They took several drinks together and finally got into an argument. Words gave way to blows, and Killen was getting the worst of it. At that moment West Harrington came along and interfered in behalf of Killen. The fight lasted for a few minutes after that and then Kelly walked away. He had only gone about 20 paces when Harrington started after him on the run. Kelly turned on his assailant and another scrap started. Harrington came out a victor in this scrimmage. He kicked Kelly severely and then drew a knife and plunged it into the worsted man's left arm and breast. Harrington then fled.

Dr. Culiom, of Oakdale, was at once called and gave the young man medical attention. It was found necessary to remove him to the West Penn Hospital. His arm was amputated shortly after he was taken there. Blood poison followed the amputation and this resulted in death.

Coroner McDowell was at work on the case yesterday, and will hold an inquest in few days. Officers are now out looking for Killen and Harrington, but late last night neither of the men had been caught. Kelly lived at Petersville and was mar ried. His remains were shipped to that town last night.

DEFENDS HIS BIGHTS.

Max Newman Aroused From His Sleep Shoots a Co-Worker,

Thomas Coyne was shot and killed at Homestead on Monday night by Max Newman. He is said to have a number of friends and sequaintances living about Thirty-third street, where he at one time lived. No other friends are known and the Coroner expects to learn something as to his home at the inquest to-day, Coyne and Newman occupied the same position, relatively, in the sleeping apart-ments at Carnegie's mills, but Coyne's cot was two rooms further along the dormitory. It is now thought that Coyne entered the wrong room in mistake, and, finding his supposed bed occupied, raised a disturbance which ended in his death. No blame is attached to Newman, as his story of resenting an attack from supposed strikers is believed. BROWLISKY A MURDERER.

He Is Held by the Coroner's Jury for Killing His Wife.

Joseph Browlisky was sent to jail yester day for the murder of his wife. This was in accordance with the verdict of a Coroner's jury.

Mrs. Browlisky gave birth to a child on Sunday night. Her husband did not get her medical attention, even going to work Monday and leaving her alone. Some neighbors found her several hours after he had left, and she was then in a dying condition. Doctors were sent for, but she could not be saved. The physicians testified that her death was due to neglect. The baby is still living, but if it dies the father will be charged with its murder.

GOURLEY IN A NEW ROLE.

Opens Their Eyes a Little-Says Pittsburg Has 300 Disorderly Houses With 3,000 Inmates.

Mayor Gourley exhorted the exhorters yesterday. During the morning while he was very busy with the bills passed in Councils on Monday he received a call from Reva J. R. J. Milligan and F. Getty, representing the United Presbyterian Ministerial Association. They called as a committee to present a resolution adopted at a meeting of the association on Monday denouncing the attitude of the city authorities with reference to disorderly houses.

The resolution included the Mayor, he being one of the authorities, and he didn't like it. Before the ministers got away they were argued to a standstill and had the question presented to them in a more forcible manner than they had ever thought of expounding it.

"I admit and recognize," said His Honor,
"that this evil is one of the worst with which the authorities have to deal and I believe I am as anxious to see it obliterated as any member of the Christian organization which you represent. I fear you gentlemen only look at the theatrical side of the ques tion. You don't realize its enormity or your responsibility. There are nearly 300 disor-derly houses, with from 2,000 to 3,000 inmates in this city. These women are human. They must live somewhere. But what if we close their houses? What will become of them? Some will leave this for other cities, but the majority will remain and must have homes. Are the Christian ministers who are crying out against them ready to extend them a helping hand, open the doors of hospitality to them, give them homes, endeavor to lead them to a better lite, or help them to earn an honest living? Will you meet them on the street with a smile kind of encouragement to do right, or will you cross over to the other side to avoid them as so many do now? Would you have them driven away from Pittsburg to some other city in order to get rid of them? Do you call that Christianity?

"I don't wish to offend you, gentlemen, but this is a serious matter and must be treated with careful consideration. I have given it much thought. Unless you are prepared to offer a practical plan to dispose of these women, you had better let them alone. If you are prepared to do anything on the line I have indicated, I am ready to assist. I will close every house inside of 24 hours if you will offer to belp these unfortunates, so that they will not be driven to attics and other secluded places where their presence will be ten-fold more dangerous to the youths of our city. I believe it can be accomplished if the effort is made."

The Mayor continued in this strain for nearly an hour. The ministers declared they had not thought of it before in that light and promised to report to their asso-

Mr. Willard in John Needham's Double To-night Mr. E. S. Willard will be seen in "John Needham's Double," it being the first and only performance in this city. In this play the actor has the difficult task of impersonating two different characters which externally are alike, but in their mental and moral characteristics as far apart as two individualities possibly can be. The dramatic effect that can be produced through a case of mistaken identity is well-known, and, as Mr. Willard adheres to his rule of not using the usual theatrical makeup, the task the actor has set himself up, he task the actor has set himself can easily be guessed at. We have learned to regard Mr. Willard as a true student and master of the stage, and remembering his work both in "The Middleman" and work both in "The Middleman and "Judah," on so different lines a great performance may be expected.

GARVIN SHED TEARS

As He Deseribed to the Judge and Jury His Last Interview With

HIS PRETTY YOUNG WIFE.

Suspicions Awakened by Her Handsome Jewelry and a Letter.

AN AFFECTING SCENE IN COURT.

The Prisoner Had Purchased the Revolver to Kill Himself.

SETTING UP THE PLEA OF INSANITY

The crowds at the Garvin trial filled the courtroom yesterday. A larger number of women than on Monday were present. A goodly portion of the evidence was unfit for publication. Doubtless the spectators were annoyed that the witnesses all spoke so low that even the Judge and jury did not hear more than two-thirds of what was said. The intention originally was to wind up the case yesterday, but the prolixity of some of the witnesses prevented this being done. The jury will surely take the case

The first witnesses called were chiefly newspaper men who testified to Frank Garvin's good character. These witnesses included Henry J. Ford, Alfred Reed, Prof. Shaney, John F. Edmundson, Thomas Merton, W. B. Moore, F. X. Burns, James Aiken, W. J. Adams, Julius Pichel, Charles Danzuger and others, N. G. Evans, J. Pressing and M. Gost all testified to Garvin's peculiar conduct before the shooting, and the last named witness also said that Garvin had unfolded to him his ambition to be a Napoleon, a scheme he had for a perpetual motion machine, and a mammoth animal on the megatherium order which he proposed to build, bury and dig up again to put on exhibition.

A Pathetic Scene in Court.

Mrs. Garvin, the prisoner's mother, his brother, Cyrus M. Garvin, his sister, Mrs. Dailey, and his brother-in-law, R. W. Dailey, corroborated previous witnesses in regard to the prisoner's dejection, lack of appetite and symptoms of mental derangement before the tragedy. A very painful scene occurred when the prisoner's aged mother went upon the stand. She and Frank both wept bitterly, and there was hardly a dry eye in the room.

The proceedings retained a painful pathos when the prisoner himself was called to the witness box. There he betrayed intense nervousness and an apparent reluctance to say anything in an audible tone. It is doubtful if the jury heard all his testimony. Judge McClung confessed he only heard about half. The defendant's counsel, young Mr. Marshall, explained that he had had great difficulty in persuading his client to testify at all. It is understood that Garvin wished to plead guilty, and did not wish to have any reflections cast upon his dead wife, but of course this cannot be brought out in evidence. Once or twice Garvin broke down completely, and his sobs could be heard across the courtroom.

The Story Told by Garvin. This was the story Garvin told on the stand: "I am in my 24th year. I met Cora posite our house on Sandusky street. We became intimate, indeed, but I loved her devotedly. When she went to Chicago. after spending some time on the road with her little sister. Ollie Redpath, who was in 'The Country Circus" troupe, I sent her money twice to come home. She finally came and twice to come home. She finally came and I was ready to fulfill my promise to marry her. I told her what my wages were, where our home would be and what she might expect there as my wife. She said she was satisfied and that she'd always be true to me. I didn't know of her having any improper relations with other men at the time of our marriage. Before we were married she showed me a new watch she had, in the lid of which was inscribed from "Ed to Cora." She told me it was her brother Ed's pres-When I found the letter from Ed Rahm I asked her if she had a tellow in Chicago, She said no, but admitted she ind known Rahm three or four months in Chicago, whither he often went from Pittsburg. Then, as I was sitting on the bed beside her, I realized for the first time that the watch and the lock and key braceled had come from Rahm. I asked her why she hadn't married Ed Rahm, and she said she only cared for Rahm's money.

How the Tragedy Occurred. "On Friday morning while she was combing her hair preparatory to going to town to meet a man I said to her: 'You are very pretty, Cora,' and she replied, 'No, I'm not, but I do not care so long as I can make a good living. Then she put on her shoes and got out a good dress. I took off her shoes and begged her not to do anything like that. I remember touching the foot of the bed with one hand and taking two steps forward-everything after is a blank to me." Here the witness burst into tears be-fore he continued: "I had bought the revolver somewhere on Ohio street a day or two before to commit suicide. The next thing I remember was my mother waving her hands in front of my face. I don't re-member my arrest or anything else."

After the noon recess District Attorney Burleigh cross-examined Garvin. Some of the important facts elicited were that Garvin had betrayed Cora Redpath within four or five days of their first meeting, when she was but 16 or 17 years old; that a close in-timacy had existed between them from that time till last September. He had also sup-plied her with money off and on and lived with her at a house on Townsend street for a month last spring.

Pinning Him to Facts. Mr. Burleigh took the witness over the whole ground again, but apparently did not succeed in doing more than getting the above damaging admissions out of him and pinning him down to some degree to the exact time of the various events, conversations and movements in the three days be fore Cora met her death. The witness responded somewhat to the tonic of hostile examination, and his answers to Mr. Burleigh were delivered in a fairly audible

Charles Orton, the Double X cough drop celebrity, was the next witness. He testi-fied to seeing Cora Redpath call for Garvin at his office 20 or 30 times. Garvin would ask the witness if he had seen her every time he passed, and told witness to trust her for candy, etc., and he would settle for it.

T. Merton, of the Commercial Gazette, recalled, said that when he saw Garvin in his choosing, he was cell, two hours after the shooting, he was terribly excited, incoherent in speech, and did not know the witness, an intimate ac-quaintance, or several other friends who were there. Mr. Burleigh asked Mr. Merton what there was extraordinary in Garvin's manner, and the witness answered positively that he considered him insane. The answer was objected to, but the description of proximately melancholia, a form of insan-ity. He could not answer definitely a gigan-tic hypothetical question put to him. It covered all the facts in the case tending to show the prisoner to have been insane at the show the prisoner to have been insane at the time of the shooting. A part of the question reflected upon the character of the dead woman, and was among the things objected to in the hypothetical case by the prosecution. To establish this claim of the defense Mr. Orton was recalled.

"What was Cora Redpath's reputation?"

asked Mr. Marshall.

"Very bad!" replied Mr. Orton before the Court could stop him. The answer was stricken out, but after some argument he was allowed to testify that her reputation generally, as he heard it spoken of, was bad. Thought Garvin Was Insane,

Dr. Diller, an insanity expert, was called next. The trend of his testimony was to the effect that Garvin was insane at the time he shot his wife.

The letters found in Mrs. Garvin's trunk from Ed J. Rahm and others were offered in evidence as showing the character of the girl and corroborating the testimony of the defendant. This was objected to by the District Attorney and the objection was sustained by the Court.

Robert Simpson, managing editor of the Commercial Gazette, was the last witness for the defense. He testified that the defendant had the very best of a reputation. He saw Garvin on the night before the shooting and he was very constrained and nergest the shootyous; also on the afternoon after the shooting, when he was greatly excited and talked in a rambling manner.

This concluded the testimony and court adjourned until this morning.

KILLED HIS MOTHER.

A Young Man Who Committed Matricide While Temporarily Insane.

During the Garvin murder trial vester day Dr. Diller, an expert witness for the defense, made a statement that caused some excitement. He said that a young man living in the East End had killed his mother while temporarily insane, and had not been prosecuted. He told District Attorney Burleigh that his authority for the statement was Dr. Goulding and Dr. Ward. Dr. Ward was seen last night. He said a case something of the kind had happened a case something of the kind had happened in March, 1891. A young man, whose name he could not give, living on Rowan avenue was suffering from the grip. He went to see Dr. J. S. Walters, and on his way took a drink of whisky. After seeing the Doctor the young man arturned to his home. His mother offered returned to his home. His mother offered him some beer. He appeared to be surly, and refused it. Suddenly he attacked her. Her screams and the son's shouts alarmed the neighbors, who ran to the house and separated them. Drs. Goulding and Ward were sent for, and quieted the son with injections of morphine. Six men were required to hold him. He thought they meant to murder him, and when the syringe was put into his flesh cried out that it was all over

The young man recovered and Drs. Goulding and Ward had no more to do with the case. Dr. Walters was the family physician, but, as he was ill, Dr. Huff was called in to attend the mother. Dr. Ward's recollection was that she died within 24 She was a sufferer from heart trouble and asthma, and he could not say whether she died from one of these diseases or from injuries that might have been in-flicted by her son. He did not know who signed the death certificate or the cause assigned for death. Dr. Walters refused to talk about the case and Dr. Huff was absent from the city last night. Dr. Ward said it was a case of temporary insanity and that the young man had no recellection of what transpired during the attack.

DAMAGING EVIDENCE SECURED.

The furniture and other property belonging to the late Gamble Weir, which was found in the house of Mrs. Marsh and her friend, McIntosh, and which they are accused of stealing, was brought from Staple-S. Among the articles brought back are a chinchilla overcost, leather covered couch, some jewelry, a plush headrest, and some collars and cuffs on which the name of the dead man has been blotted out with indelible ink and McIntosh's name substituted. The headrest was a Christmas present from Gamble Weir's sweetheart a few weeks before his

The Straight-Out Republicans Will Reorganize To-Morrow

for Postmaster. CHAIRMAN BRENNEN ON THE SUBJECT

Bitter Feeling Cropping Out Over the Fight

The straightout Republicans who confused the regular party leaders in the non-partisan judicial contest in Allegheny county of a year ago, and who were supposed to have expired immediately after that battle, yesterday issued a call for a meeting to be held in the Twenty-seventh ward schoolhouse on Monastery avenue, Southside, to-

The call is signed by L K. Porter, George Fritz, F. C. Beinhauer, the Citizens' candidate for Mayor, and others. The object of the meeting it is stated, is to reduce taxes, rent and the cost of living. Speeches are promised from several of the straight-out workers.

Congressman-elect Sipe, ex-Judge Fetterman and those who organized the straightout movement in both parties have been especially invited to attend and the efforts of those responsible for the meeting will be to renew their organization and make it effective in the approaching campaign for

The fight for the federal places in Pittsburg is still attracting the attention of the Democratic leaders. The fight for the postoffice, however, is demanding the closest watching and is already developing bitter feeling. County Chairman Brennen has declared himself emphatically against ex-Postmaster Larkin for the place. Mr. Brennen intimates that his fight against the ex-Postmaster has not yet been rightly started and that some surprising letters written by Mr. Larkin will soon be given to the Jury Commissioner Mullen is also outspoken in his opposition to Mr. Larkin, He is just as bitterly opposed to P. Foley, who has applied for the place. Mr. Mullen contends that Postmaster McKean has made a satisfactory official, and he thinks that no change in the place should be made until Mr. McKean's term expires.

Only United in Their Opposition. Alderman McKenna, it is claimed by his Democratic friends, has been badly treated by the anti-Guffey people of Western Pennsylvania, and he has announced himself as opposed to either Larkin or Foley. Coroner McDowell Will Ask the Legislatur to Make an Appropriation.

A bill will be presented in the next Legislature asking for an appropriation for a public morgue in Allegheny county. This appropriation has been asked for several times, but this year there are strong hopes of getting it.

There has been some talk of building a city morgue. Coroner McDowell discourages this from a taxpayers' standpoint. He said yesterday: "It would be foolish for Pittsburg to erect a morgue. It would have to then pay for the care of its own cases and those of the rest of the county. This would not be fair to the city's tax-This would not be fair to the city's taxpayers. A morgue should be a county institution. If properly managed, it would pay for itself. The county is certainly in need of a morgue, and it could be secured chesply. The old Criminal Court building could be altered at a cost of probably $2,000, and it would answer the purpose admirably. I feel sure that the institution

eputy Sheriff Wahl Fires on an Escaping Prisoner-A Non-Union Man Also Tries His Hand at Shooting_Finances Will Be Discussed To-day-Homestead's New Burgess.

There were only five shots discharged in Homestead yesterday, a decrease over the day before. The revolver practice was caused first by the attempt of a prisoner to escape and secondly by a drunken nonunionist who was amusing himself trying to shoot out the stars. Detective George Wahl was given a warrant at noon to serve on William Rotroff, who is charged with aggravated assault and battery by Frederick Witmer, a former striker. t who is now working the mill. The detective found but Rotroff on Seventh avenue surrounded by a erowd of his friends. Rotroff started on a run. Wahl broke through the line and pursued his man, calling on him to stop or be would shoot him. Rotroff kept on, desper-ately trying to reach cover. Wahl then fired in the air. Rotroff reached a fence, and as he did so Wahl fired at his heels, he vaulted the barrier and then fell flat on the other side. Wahl scaled the fence and ar-rested him without further difficulty. Rotroff was subsequently released on bail.

About 7 o'clock in the evening Gharles

Biglin, who works in the mill, filled up on whisky and sauntered down City Farm lane to the Pemicky tracks. There he emitted a couple of warwhoops to attract attention, and when he had succeeded in drawing a crowd, drew his revolver and began to shoot. There was a wild scattering, and the neighborhood was greatly alarmed. Deputy Sheriff William Atkinson came running to the spot and immediately arrested Biglin. The latter claimed he was only trying to shoot the stars.

Harrison Critchlow, a cousin of Sylvester
Critchlow who is charged with murder, met with an accident in the converting mill. A mold fell on his left leg, crushing it so badly that amputation was necessary.

Judge Kennedy vesterday appointed J S. Hollingshead Burgess of the borough of Homestead, vice John McLuckie, resigned. Mr. Hollingshead was supported by the Borough Council and a large number of

A mass meeting of all the locked-out men and strikers has been called for this after-noon by the Advisory Committee. The obect, it is understood, is to discuss finances and strike benefits.
