A SCHEME TO ISOLATE RUSSIA

Pressed On the Pope by Three Powers in the Form of Disarmament.

THE CONSISTORY AGAIN POSTPONED

ICOPYRIGHT, 1802, BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Rome, Nov. 24.-An important letter from the Vatican dealing with American matters has been dispatched to Mgr. Satelli, the Papal Ablegate now in the United States. The consistory has again been delayed, the Pope desiring, before it is held, to conclude the negotiations with France, and perhaps, also, to finish a work on the general situation.

Mgr. Farley, Vicar General of New York, during his recent visit to Rome, saw the Pope and several Cardinals and was told that His Holiness keenly desires that all disputes in the Church in America shall cease, and that Mgr. Satelli's mission to this end may succeed. Mgr. Farley sailed from Liverpool for New York yesterday. The Vatican has been much impressed by the fact that the new Faribault Commission has maintained the contract with Archbishop Ireland.

Kicking Against the Pope's Democracy. The German and Austrian Ambassadors have made strong representations to Car-dinal Rampolla, Papal Secretary of State, on the language of the Vatican journals. When commenting on the Chicago fetes, they dilated on the democratic policy of the Pope. The ambassadors complained that the church papers too strongly favored republican ideas, and that there was danger that their advocacy of these ideas would tend to foster in Europe the democratic propaganda. Despite these representations to the Vatican, these papers have devoted to the election of Cleveland articles highly sympathetic with the United States. Leo XIII. rests immovable in his designs. Further communications have been re-ceived at the Vatican from the German and Astrian Governments, aiming at obtaining the influence of the Holy See in interpos-ing between France and Russia. It is said that England will play an important role as mediator, with a view of bringing about the isolation of

It is certain that Grand Duke Sergius has arrived in Rome to see the Pope to try to induce him to support a combination in the interests of Russia and Pan-Slavism. His Holiness is pleased with the deference and delicacy of sentiment displayed by his noble visitor, and, speaking of him, has said, "What a pity that men like him should be schismatic."

CAPRIVI'S FRIENDS AND CRITICS.

The Latter in a Large Majority Among the Newspapers of Berlin,

BERLIN, Nov. 24 .- The North German Gasette, referring to Chancellor von Caprivi's speech in the Reichstag yesterday introducing the army bill, expresses the hope that the authentic information furnished by the Chancellor in regard to the Ems dispatch, will sitence critics. The Chancellor gave his statement with his sword in its sheath and his hand on its hilt, typifying the attitude imposed upon the nation by the history of the Prussian and German peoples, who stand in armor with self-sacrificing perseverance With the exception of the semi-official press, Berlin newspapers contain chilling criticisms upon the Chancellor's speech. The Radical journals are dead against the Chancellor.

The Tageblatt says no military bill ever excited so much dislike. Chancellor von Caprivi cannot hope to have the House pass his demands as they stand. The bill must be modified or it is doomed. If the measure is rejected and the Reichstag dissolved, the new elections will increase the opposition. Then if the Government still persists in forcing the bill upon the Reichstag, a new period of conflict will open. The Vossische Zeitung points out the contradiction in the Chancellor's present attitude and his position in 1886, when he denounced what he called the "rage of numbers," and refused to support a bill similar to the one pow in-troduced by himself.

Rocsekhi went to his home near by and in the evening invited a lot of his friends in to enjoy a Thanksgiving supper, at which whisky, beer and wine flowed like water. About 9 o'clock Petreski, who had not been invited to the feast, bunted up half a dozen friends and they went to Rocsekhi's to have revenge. While the supper to have revenge. While the supper was in progress they burst open the door and with knives and stones attacked the banqueters. Petreski attacked Rocsekhi and slashed him across the

WOES OF A WIDOW.

Stoned on the Streets the Day After Her Husband's Burial.

While the widow of James McGrath, the railroader killed at Walls station last Monday, was walking along Cherry alley yesterday afternoon she was assailed by a number of boys with snowballs and sticks. She is a little woman, and was terrified at the attack, though not seriously hurt. Going to police headquarters she notified Detective Shore, who went out to arrest the boys, but they had all disappeared.

Mrs. McGrath thinks her enemies caused hove to assault her. When her h was killed she was working for a family in the outskirts of Allegheny, and heard nothing about it until after he was buried. She came to the city on Wednesday after-noon, and met several of her friends, who noon, and met several of her friends, who remarked to her that she was bearing up well under her troubles, but she save she did not comprehend what they meant until 5 o'clock in the evening, when she heard of his death. She hurried to the morgue at once, and there was amazed to learn that he

The mother of the dead man flatly denies the widow's story, saying she was notified promptly, and was known to talk of her husband's death before he was buried. The widow charges that her husband's people are trying to get $7,000 life insurance on her husband's life, which they also deny.

Mrs. McGrath is a stepdaughter of Constable Sheerin, of the Southside. She has one daughter, and for two months past has lived with her mether having head a discovered to the state of the sta lived with her mother, having had a disagreement with her husband. She says they had become reconciled, and were pre-paring to go to housekeeping when his death occurred.

THEY MISSED IT.

The Wise Men of Observatory Hill Slui ber During the Meteoric Shower

The wise men on Observatory Hill, Allegheny, were sad yesterday. While the heavens were lit up with a meteoric shower they slumbered, missing a sight dear to the astronomer. Last night they kept scanning the heavens, hoping there would be another rain of stars, but hardly thinking it likely. Up until midnight their vigil had not been rewarded.

As to the shower of yesterday morning they are puzzled. It came when least expected Biela's comet was due on the 27th of this month, and it may have been that it arrived ahead of time. This to the Observatory men is a possibility, but they do not say it was the case. If such a change has been made in the comet's course it is a remark-able occurrence, and it is doubtful if it has ever been precedented in scientific history. The heavy November showers which fall The heavy November showers which fall every third of a century have not varied in their visit a day in 100 years. So to the minds of scientists it seems improbable that Biela's comet could go so far astray. The shower of the 27th is still looked for, and if it fails there may still be another meteoric display. Occasionally these showers go in companion pieces, and the twin brother to yesterday's rain may come to-day.

Archbishop Ireland's Plan of Placing Catholic Children

IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS, IN REAL PRACTICE

PETECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATOR. SAVANNAH, GA., Nov. 24.-There is considerable opposition in Cathalic circles ere to the persistent claims made that Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, is the father of the idea to influence the Catholic Church in favor of public schools. It is held that there was one at the recent meeting of archbishops in New York whose claim of leading the Church toward the modern idea is superior to that of Archbishop Ireland, whose influence in favor of providing religious instruction for Catholic children attending public schools was more potent than that of the St. Paul prelate.

In other words, they claim that the long internal fight in favor of liberalism was waged by Archbishop Gross, of Oregon; that is is true that when the time came for breaking the news to the outside world, and making the matter public generally, the initiative was taken by Archbishop Gross, who, before his translation to the See of Oregon, in 1885, had been for 12 years bishop of the See of Savanah and left behind him in the See of Savannah, and left behind him in Georgia the proof of his sagacity in the matter of public schools.

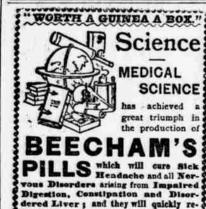

Savannah in the Forefront, The first move was made in this city, whereby an arrangement was made for the incorporation of all Catholic schools into the public school system. The basis was the adoption of the schools as they existed, teachers as well as pupils. At first these teachers were all members of the Order of Sisters of Mercy, but now they are all laywomen. Religion was excluded during school hours, but by an agreement the pupils and teachers were permitted to remain a half hour for religious exercises. A strong fight was made upon this arrangement, but by avoiding newspaper controversy and a spirit of conciliation it was accepted, passed into the regular order of things and is now in full force. The first move was made in this city, things and is now in full force.
Three of the public schools of Savannah are now filled with Catholic children. The plan thus successfully established in Savannah was next taken up in Macon, where it has been maintained for years.

Other Cities to Fall in Line. Augusta was the next city to be brought over to the new order of things, which has proved so successful as to be warmly com-mended by Superintendent Evans, who is high in his praise of the particular schools under this rule. Columbus also accepted the system which had proved so harmonious elsewhere. Atlanta alone of all the larger cities of Georgia maintains the warlike at-titude, and that is because of the strong Know Nothing influence which exists there.

All this was made perfect during the administration of Bishop Gross, who was transferred in the midst of his work to the rank of archbishop. His work was always carried on diplomatically, without the agitation of newspaper controversy. His was the first and standards wat as the first diocres in the first, and stands yet as the first diocese in which almost the whole territory is covered by such amicable arrangement as places the Catholic children under control of the pubic school authorities.
