of both cities were present. The officers of all the patriotic orders and many labor unions in the county aided the movement with their voices and showed that they were in full accord with the questions. Chairman O. P. Cochran called the meet-who welcomed the representatives of the various orders and urged united action in restricting immigration. Rev. W. E. Donaldson followed with a speech on

OVERTURES TO OUIT,

Attorney Argo Says He Understands the Other Side Is Willing to Drop

THE HOMESTEAD CASES.

Bail Will Be Asked for Critchlow and the Other Prisoners.

ALL INVOLVED HAVE HAD ENOUGH

The Jury Held the Men Were Justified in Resisting the Pinks.

EVIDENCE AND THE CHARGE IGNORED

Since the acquittal of Critchlow, or rather, after Mr. Erwin made his great speech, the Western lawyer and his colleague, Edwin Argo, have been the recipients of a good deal of attention. Their callers at the Monongahela House have been numerous, and letters and telegrams of congratulation have poured in on them from all parts of the country. A few are from friends, but the bulk of them came from strangers. Business men and some capitalists join with the army of workmen and the labor organizations in expressing their satisfaction over the result. At times the rooms of the Western cyclones were jammed with people who called to shake hands and congratulate both for their fine work in the case.

While the lawyers were receiving their share of the thanks the officials of the Amalgamated Association have been overwhelmed with congratulatory telegrams Many of them were sent by people who are unknown to the organization, but they tell the same story. All consider the acquittal as a telling victory for organized labor and they are overjoyed with the outcome. The officials of the association are greatly pleased and surprised at the lively interest taken by the people of the country in the trial. The nation was silent while the case was in court and patiently waited for the verdict.

How Amalgamated Officials Reason. The Amalgamated officials reason from the numerous telegrams received that the masses are satisfied. This view is also accepted by the lawyers for the defense.

Last night Attorney Argo returned to Sioux City. He doesn't expect to come back. He said during the afternoon at the Monongahela House that he was given to understand that all the Homestead cases on the calendar would be dropped and both sides would cry. "Hold, enough." He was not positive that this would be done, but his colleague, Mr. Erwin, will start for home this morning, and he will know for a certainty what conclusion is reached. Mr. Argo was called West by urgent business that had been neglected, but he felt confident that he would not come back to assist in the trial of any more Homesteaders.

"If the cases should come up," he continued, "Mr. Erwin and myself will be here to lend our aid. And I want to say that the indictments against people on the other side will be pushed with vigor. I think we would give Mr. Frick the worst wrestling match he ever had. We are not receiving a cent of pay. We did not come here for glory or money, but becase we felt it was our duty. We are willing to stay six months if it is necessary. Only our expenses are paid by the labor organizations of the Northwest, B quest that we came."

"But can indictments for murder be dropped without trial?" was asked.

Rests With the District Attorney "Yes. It rests entirely with the District Attorney. If he is satisfied that convictions are impossible it would be a waste of time. The District Attorney is the judge before the trial. Mr. Burleigh hasn't said a word on the subject. He hasn't even hinted at it, but several people have been to see us with certain propositions looking to this end, and we have every reason to be-lieve that they represent the other side. I think the welfare of this community demands that all prosecutions growing out of the unfortunate affair at Homestead should cease. I feel sure, also, that every Homesteader now in the county jail charged with murder would be acquitted, but I am not so sure about people on the other side. It wouldn't surprise me if a jury should hold them guilty for some crime, to say the least. "I never doubted for one minute tha Critchlow would not be acquitted. You have no idea the feeling that existed in favor of these men. Good substantial business people, strangers to us, often stopped us on the streets and said: 'We don't care to express our opinion publicly, but we hope to God you will win. When I saw how many of the best people felt about the case, I was not afraid of the average jury, for I keew that the common people held the

"Will Critchlow be released on bail?"
"I think so. Mr. Brennen, the chief counsel, is out of town and we didn't like to do anything without consulting him. He will go into court this morning and ask for his release on bail. My opinion is that all the Homesteaders will be admitted to bail in a short time.

Why the Jury Acquitted.

But the great surprise of the case was the ground on which the jury acquitted the prisoner. This should have been published several days ago, but the 12 men live in the country, and they were so anxious to get home that a cyclone could not have stopp them. As soon as they were discharged they made a break for liberty and steered straight for those who are nearest and dearest to them. Four of the jurors wandered into the Monongahela House yesterday afternoon and called on the Western lawyers. The first question Mr. Erwin asked "How did you come to acquit Critch-What followed is detailed by Mr.

Argo, who repeats the conversations.

He said: "It took the jury about half an hour to come to a verdict. When the 12 men went out they took a secret ballot first. It stood 8 for acquittal, 1 for murder in the first degree, 1 for murder in the second degree and 2 for manslaughter. Then a formal ballot was taken and it showed 9 for acquittal, 1 for murder in the first degree and 2 for manslaughter. A third ballot followed, when the 12 agreed on acquital. Up to this time no opinion had been expressed by any-body, and then the foreman asked for a dis-cussion of the verdict and why each had voted not guilty. They all agreed in dis-regarding the evidence on both sides. The only witness they believed was Mrs. Coyle, the Irish woman, but her testimony alone did prove an alibi. The jurymen frankly told us that they thought our alibi was without foundation, and they were con-vinced that Stewart and Reese for the other side were mistaken.

Wouldn't Believe the Pinkertons.

"As for the Pinkertons, their testimony had no weight with them from first to last. The jury took the position that the pres-Homestead was unprovoked and an un-authorized invasion, and that the people were justified in their resistance. That part of Judge Kennedy's charge where he said that any man with a gun who was on the ground at the time of the riot is guilty, was ignored altogether. The jury did not feel that this interpretation of the law would stand, and certainly it would not if the in-vasion was unauthorized. In short, the jury accepted the argument made by Mr. Erwin, and I think they were right in do-ing so. It was on this ground that they acquitted Critchlow."

Mr. Erwin regards the outcome of the case with extreme satisfaction. In dis-cussing it yesterday he said: "My mother often told me when I was a boy of the conscience of the Pennsylvania people. I never saw it and did not realize it so much as when I came here last summer. This State was founded by the Quakers, and they have instilled into their descendants a strong sense of right and wrong. It was strong sense of right and wrong. It was the most striking peculiarity of the people that I first noticed, and I lelt then that Critchlow would not be convicted. The Pennsylvanians are also very inde-pendent and they will resent oppression. "It was your people who checked Lee's army at Gettysburg and saved the Union. It was the same spirit that actuated the men at Homestead. I am not afraid of mob law in this State. Your citizens are too well grounded, but I would advise everybody, and Pinkertons in particular, not to tramp on them unless they want to be hurt. Pennsylvania is a great State, and its people are respected all over the land as extremely just and law abiding."

Miners Refuse to Accept the Reduction and

Are Determined in Their Demands. The Globe mines, in the fourth pool, have been purchased by Jones & Laughlins. Both railroad and river coal is run at this place. Since the miners' strike was declared last September little work has been done. As soon as the mines had changed ands a meeting of the striking miners was called by Superintendent Druin, who informed the men that the company intended to start the mines at the 214 cent rate, or on the 3 cent basis.

A conference of miners was held and the proposition of the company considered. Only six out of 130 voted to return at the reduced rate. These miners will hold another meeting to-day, when the matter will be further considered. It is thought there will be trouble should the company try to start the mines without the consent of the miners, as the men are very determined.

POLITICAL DINNER.

Washington County Democrats Drop Into Pittsburg to Eat.

THEY TALK ABOUT THE OFFICES.

Senator Dunlap's Programme in the Legislative Pession.

AFTER THE UNIONTOWN POSTOFFICE

A rather distinguished coterie of Democratic politicians from the country met in Pittsburg yesterday, by accident, so they said. The same fate led them to take dinner together at the Monongahela House. It is not known whether each man paid his bill, or whether there was a host for the party. But that is a small matter. Washington county was well represented. The crowd was headed by John C. Bane, the county chairman. The others at the table were Senator Dunlap, of Bridgewater; D. F. Patterson, the criminal lawyer and a close friend of Congressman Sipe; L. Mc-Carrell and R. L. McCarrell and R. W. Irwin, of Washington.

The conversation drifted into social channels and then out into the broad field of politics. When asked what was done they all protested that politics was not discussed. It was not even a dinner party, but the gentlemen finding themselves in the hotel concluded to dine together, and they invited D. F. Patterson, who used to be a Washington county man. It was suspected that they met to fix up a patronage slate, for Washington to be presented to Congressman Sipe, but this was stoutly denied also.

Defending the River Banks. Senator Dunlap said there was nothing new in politics, so far as he new. He is getting ready to defend the river banks again this winter against men like Senator Flinn and others, who would like to estab-lish a huckster market on the Allegheny

Mr. Irwin said: "The fact that we dined Mr. Irwin said: "The fact that we dined together does not mean anything. It was a social party. We are not after the patronage of Washington county. I am not posted on the other counties in the Congressional district, but I know several candidates for the postoffice in Washington. They are J. V. Boyd, J. Edgar Brady and J. Carter Judson. The office is a good one, and the candidates are all first-class Demorats. Any of them would make an excelcrats. Any of them would make an excel-lent postmaster. Each has his friends and circulating a petition. It is hard to say which one will be successful."

Chairman John C. Bane has been mentioned in connection with the United Statas Marshalship. He denies that he is after anything. Mr. Bane is a stanch anti-Harrity man and is devoted to the Guffey faction. If the National Chairman has any influence with the administration, he is ex-pected to wield it against Mr. Bane. The atter, no doubt, knows it.

Talking About Federal Patronage. Mr. Irwin added that the Washington county Democrats had had several talks with Mr. Sipe about patronage since the election, but nothing was done. S. L. Mestrezat, a prominent Democrat from Uniontown, was at the Seventh Avenue Hotel, but he evidently did not know of the party at the Monongahela House. Mr. Mestrezat was here on private business.

P. S. Newmeyer, S. M. Graham and Charles M. Fee, three veteran Republican politicians from Connellsville, were noticed also in the lobby of the Monongahela House. Mr. Newmeyer was acquainted with the Democrats and shook hands with them, but they didn't divulge anything to him. Mr. Newmeyer said there was a great scramble for the postoffice in Uniontown. The candidates number a dozen or more, Among them is the irrepressible ex-Senator T. B. Schnatterly, who is backed by Scaright. Mr. Newmeyer thinks Scaright is the man who has the ear of Congressman Sipe. In Connellsville the foremost candidate for the postoffice is P. J. William Beach died yesterday at the City farm of erysipelas. His death brings to light a sad story and a noble wife's devo-

Beach was employed on the new Carnegie block, Fifth avenue and Cherry alley. On November 15 he was badly injured and taken to his boarding house on Lacock street, Allegbeny. He laid there for several days, receiving treatment from an Allegheny physician. For some reason he and his pretty wife were separated. Beach had not been all that he should have been, and his wife left him. She lived in shabby quarters away out Second avenue, and was eking out an existence as a clerk at a small salary. As soon as she heard of her husband's illness she flew to his bedside. In her desire to make him comfortable, she had him removed to her own rooms. Nursed Him With Wifely Devotion.

Yesterday morning she received the official notification of Beach's death. It was a hard blow to her—she had hoped that he was going to recover. Erysipelas had set in and death was inevitable. When Cor-oner McDowell arrived at his office yesterday afternoon, he found a pretty little black-robed figure sitting in his private office. It was Katie Beach. Her pale cheeks were stained with tears, and a great sob choked her voice as she accosted the Coro-ner. She wanted Mr. McDowell to get her husband's body. Mrs. Beach was very much afraid that the remains would be turned over to the Anatomical Society. Amid tears she told him her sorrowful story, and, although nearly penniless, she wanted to give him a decent burial. Coroner Mc-Dowell immediately sent for the body, and the little woman departed with at least one load lifted from her burdened heart.
