Clung yesterday morning and heard that he was to spend the next eight years and eleven months of his life in the Western Penitentiary. He walked up to the bar and stood alone for several moments, then Thomas Mr. Marshall Jr., joined him. The attorney made an earnest appeal for a light sentence. He spoke along the line of the likelihood of reform if the prisoner were given a lighter sentence.

Young Garvin Bore Up Welt.

Judge McClung said it was not the purpose of the law to reform criminals, but to protect society. The crime, in his mind, was an aggravated one. If the verdict had been first degree he would not have lifted a finger, as he believed the testimony war-ranted such a verdict. The recommenda-tion of the jury and the solicitation of friends, however, compelled him to impose a lighter sentence than he would otherwise

His crime is well known, having so recently been aired in the courts. He shot his wife, formerly Cora Redpath, because she was not true to him. They had been sentences. They were Joe and Angelo Zappa, who murdered Frank Helmstett last Independence Day, and George Strausser, who took the life of Joseph Brandl a month later. The two Italians as soon as taken back to jail tried to bunt their brains out against the cell doors.

The Criminal Court room was crowded yesterday morning to hear the sentences pronounced. It was an unusual sentence day. It is rare that three murderers are sentenced in one day, but besides this Garvin was to learn his future. The friends of each man were there, and many others from curiosity were present. The Zappas were brought in first. Judge Kennedy was on the bench. Attorneys Mo-Garvey and Braddocks at once arose and made a strong appeal in support of tended. Speeches were made by Rev. their motion for arrest of judgment. Judge Kennedy overruled it, and through the interpreter asked Angelo Zappa if he had anything to say. The man showed a scar on his head and the cuts in his hat, but said nothing. When Joe was asked if he had anything to offer, he replied that he was innocent of the murder.

Pronouncing the Sentence of Death. Then Judge Kennedy said: "It is im-

Have you anything further to say?" There was a pause and an awful stillness

Then the Judge continued: "Some time will be afforded you before the sentence of the law is put into execution. The Court can only say that you should use that time in preparation to meet your Almighty When these words had passed Judge Kenpedy's lips he rose and all the people in the court room with him. For a moment there was the stillness of death, then the Court in calm, clear tones pronounced these solemn words: "The sentence of the Court is that you be taken to the Allegheny county jail, from whence you came, and there be kept until a time be fixed by the Governor of this Commonwealth, and then to be taken to the place of execution and there be hanged by the neck until you are dead; and may God in His infinite goodness have mercy on your souls."

As Judge Kennedy ceased speaking wild shrick pierced the stillness of the room. It was Joseph Zappa's wife. The words of Judge Kennedy had struck deep into her heart, and she could no longer keep her composure. Forgetting she was in the halls of justice, she cried like a child, each sob ending in a moan of the deepest distress. The tipstaffs had to remove her, but her weeping had set many others to shedding tears.

Trying to Anticipate Their Fate.

The Italians did not seem to realize their fate until they had crossed the "Bridge of Sighs" and were again in their narrow cells. Both men became as maniaes and tried to bunt their brains out against the iron bars. Guards at once ran to them and neither suc ceeded in their suicidal attempts. Angelo's ceeded in their suicidal attempts. Angelo's cell is on the second tier, and as the range-man opened the door to pacify him, the Italian ran out and jumped over the rail-ing to the stone floor below, trying to kill himself, but failed. A priest was sent for, who succeeded in quieting their delirious minds. Guards are being kept at the cells of both men.

The crime which these men were sentenced to be hanged for was the murder of Frank Helmstett, last 4th of July. Mrs. Helmstett and the Zappa women quarreled, the men took it up and murder was the re-sult. William Reardon and Joseph Mulli-nari are still in jail charged with being accessories. Angelo swore that he had stabbed Helmstett and Joe had nothing to do with it. On the strength of this the attorneys hope to yet free Joe.

Wept on Hearing His Sentence. George Strausser, a nice looking German of about 25, followed the Zappas in receiving a death sentence. His attorneys, Hudand Friedman, asked for a new trial, son and Friedman, asked for a new trial, but Judge Kennedy overruled the motion. Strausser had nothing to say in his own behalf. The Judge, addressing the pris-oner, said: "Prepare to meet your God! You will be given more time for that preparation than you gave your victim." He was then sentenced. Strausser took his fate very sadly and cried the whole way

TALKING ABOUT THE MAYORALTY.

Major E. A. Montooth Hesitates to Come Out as a Candidate.

The mix in city political matters cleared up somewhat yesterday, at least as far as the Republicans are concerned. Controller Morrow declined to talk, but the leaders all expressed the belief that he would be renominated, despite his withdrawal from the race. His popularity was shown in an unusual way vesterday. Two ministerial associations, the Methodist and the United Presbyterian, at their regular Monday meeting, formally discussed and deplored his determination to withdraw from the field.

At the Methodist meeting a resolution was presented urging him to reconsider the matter in the interest of the public welfare and continue at the head of the city's fiscal affairs. It was decided that a political resolution could not be passed by the body, whereupon every minister present signed the resolution and it will be formally presented to the Controller to-day. The United Presbyterian ministers also had a resolution before them, but its political character prevented action upon it, the members all, after a prolonged discussion, agreeing to wait upon the Controller in person and urge him to come out again as a candidate.

Candless declined to say last night whether he would stay in the contest or not. The most persistent questioning would not induce him to indicate his intentions. In view of the positive statements credited to him a few days ago, in which he was said to be in the fight to the last ditch, this change of attitude is con-

I have been importuned to allow the use of my name for some time, but have not permitted it to be done. Even if I were nominated and elected it would be bad business policy for me to accept, as, aside from my political ambition, which does not run toward the Mayoralty, if I have any, there are no financial inducements. The salary attached to the Mayor's office is comparatively small. I have a large professional practice, and I prefer following it to occupying the Mayor's easy chair."

NAPOLEON IVES MARRIED.

He Wedded Miss Helen Sears at Lockport Recently-It Was a Love Match, and They Were Engaged Before His Financial Embarrassm

In connection with the visit of Henry S Ives to Pittsburg yesterday, it was discovered by accident that he had recently been married. When cornered he blushingly admitted it was true, and said the ceremony had been performed in Lockport, N. Y. He furnished the name of his bride, and a short biography of her was obtained late last evening.

The wedding took place on the 21st of the nonth, and was conducted so quietly that hardly a score of people know about the matter at the present time. The bride is Miss Helen Gertrude Sears, of Lockport. Miss Helen Gertrude Sears, of Lockport. She is a very handsome young woman, 24 years of age, and is remarkable for other gitts beside beauty, having a soprano voice of rare quality and ample range and power. As a singer Miss Sears is known to music lovers of New York and Brooklyn, and many highly capable artists have vainly tried to persuade her to become a professional. In 1891 Miss Sears spent a season in Paris, studying under the celebrated Madianne Marchesi. In addition to all this the bride is a most charming person of wide intelligence.

wide intelligence.

The marriage is strictly a love match.
The young couple were engaged before the deep waters of trouble closed over Mr.
Ives' head, and the fact that he was imprisoned pending trial, made no difference to Miss Scars. The wedding was of the simplest character, and only ten persons, including the closest relatives of the bride, were present. Mr. and Mrs. Ives are now living in a house on Madison avenue, New York, recently bought by the young husband. Mrs. Sears has accompanied her daughter.

The young woman's father, when seen at his home in Lockport, N. Y., last night, denied any knowledge of his daughter's marriage. He said that Gertrude had left for New York last Wednesday. He under-stood that Mr. Ives passed through Lock-port en route for Buffalo a week ago Sun-day, but did not stop.
