BERIOUS BLOOD POISON CASES.

One Man Dies From Cutting His Corns, Another Bitten by a Rat.

John Bower, a well-known Braddock township farmer died on Sunday from blood poisoning, produced by cutting into a corn on his foot a few days prewiously. He had lived on the same farm for 62 years and was one of the oldest residents of the county.

George Williams, a driver for the Pearl Laundry Company, two weeks ago caught a rat in his hands and was bitten on the wrist. On Saturday blood poison devel-oped. The wrist swelled up and became so painful he was sent to the Homeopathic Hospital. It is now feared amputation of the arm will be necessary.
