FINE BLACK, ALL-WOOL,

Keep thy house and thy house will keep thee," says an old proverb. Upon this wise saw I would embroider a more modern motive, viz.: Respect thy house and others will respect it. I grant you that a goest must needs find something more than fine clothes in order to feel at home. A satin gown with pompadour figures of itself might turnish forth a very cold welcome, even admitting that it was garnitured with the

A Pretty Houns Dress. warmest smiles. Men love good cheer, and good cheer is never more enjoyable than when presided over by a pretty woman appropriately gowned. There is set before you in the picture an exquisite little house dress, so graceful and becoming that it would almost have the effect of a liberal education on your husband, with particular stress on the word liberal. It may be made up in many ways and with many combinations of tone and texture, but one very pretty way would be to select a chevroued woolen, displaying a harmony of light green, cream and black.

The dress should be cut umbrella style, by which I mean in narrow breadths and very bias at the top, so that the stripes of the material may join more and more at a point. You finish the bottom of the skirt with a black velvet ribbon about an inch and a half wide. The corsage is of the same

Toilettes for Pittsburg Society. With the announcement of the germans and dinner dances to be given at the Pittsburg Club, society is bestirring itself in behalf of its new evening gowns. Little knots of interested purchasers may be seen any day and at any time during the week around the counters in some of Pittsburg's principal drygoods stores. They have no lack of beneatful materials, laces and jeweled trimmings, from which to select this senson. It is safe to predict that if lovely gouns have anything to do with bewitching the heart of man the girls may look forward to a season of conquest.

An expensive novelty in the line of materials for evening gowns is a heavy, rich satin brocade through which runs a stripe representing a fall of Cluny lace. This is $6.50 a yard. Another new material is the gross de tour, in the cameaux and laconne designs. The price of this is $5 a yard, Sky blue is a popular shade this season, and all the time of pink, from shrimp to the faint-est blush, are favored. Pearl gray and the is utest lettuce green are in demand, Scintillente is an exquisite material that is admired very much, the price being $2.50 a yard. A delicately-inted silk ground, which reflects the moonlight, produces a delicious changing effect. The material is not used in combination. An imported Empire gown is otshell-pink scintillente.

The Taste Is the Thing.

It is the appropriateness of a dress that gives it its distinctive charm. The woman who wears to an informal reception such a costume as would be in keeping at the Queen's drawing roon may consider, because o. its length of train, its rich brocade and its elaborate trimmings, that her gown suror evening silk costumes that are present. But she is mistaken; she is entirely too But she is mistaken; she is entirely too much overdressed for such an occasion, and though consticuously attractive owing to her error, it is not admiration that she wins from the many who note her gorgeous

Because you possess a beautiful silk and velve: gown do not be so anxions to show it that you will put it on to wear on a shopping expedition. Though appropriate and ele gant for calling or an atternoon reception it is quite out of place on a business thorough-fare. Fal-lals are not for the street. Conservative dressing for promenades of all sorts is most appropriate. Aim to be the simplest gowned person present at all functions, rather than make the mistake of overdressing, though, of course, there is a happy mean which combined with appropriateness will win for you always the enomiums of those whose criticism is worth having and will never cause you to blush from a sense of your own conspicuously at-

Something About Garters.

Women who possess handsome garter buckles will, of course, wear them, even though they know the shape of the limb is sure to be distorted by the tightening process brought to bear upon it-that is, if they wear them above the knee, and no one but a real old fogy would wear them below it, though the single yellow one might be tolerated just for good luck.

The side straps can be made just as dainty and can utilize six buckles instead of two, which ought to be a certain recommends. tion to the extravagant maiden of the day. Whether made quite plain, with only nickel clasps and slides, or adorned with beleweled cruaments that are useful as well as deco-rative, this style of holding u he stocking the woman who knows that, come what may, she has the assurance that her stockings are not bagging at the knees or in unsightly wrinkles above the shoe tops, a knowledge that, strange as it may sound, is a sort of moral support, for no woman can even feel respectable when her stockings are not as free from wrinkles as a ballet dancer's tights. Comme il Fant.

Fashions for little girls seem to have absorbed all of the good points for which the costumes of their mothers and elder sisters have been noted. Fur velvet and relloon are seen on some of the newest imported garments. The use of these materials on the same dress is per-haps open to criticism, but they are some-times used, nevertheless.

A PRETTY reception dress is of rese-pink bengaline and white lace. The trained skirt has a panel at the side, which is closed at intervals with elaborate jeweled ornaments. Between these ornaments puffs of the lace show through. A soft girdle of silk is fast-ened at one side of the waist with rosettes. The full body and puffed sleeves are of lace.
