The Mayor Leading in the Race for the Pittsburg Controllership.

MAY RUN ON TWO TICKETS.

Democrats Divided on the Proposition to Indorse His Honor.

Leeking for a Democrat to Kun for Mayor of Allegheny City.

PIGHTING A REAPPORTIONMENT CLAIM.

Who the Controller nominees will be is the question worrying the political leaders of both parties now. The mayoralty seems to be settled, for the present at least, with the understanding that McKenna will be the Democratic nominee and that nothing turther will be done about the Republican candidate until the convention assembles. on January 3.

Many names for Controller have been mentioned by the Republican leaders, but the only thing which seems certain is that they won't nominate Gourley. At the same time the Mayor's stock seems to be going upward. In addition to his almost certain omination by the Citizens' Alliance, it is highly probable he will get the same favor from the Democratic party. Petitions are being circulated in various parts of the city in his favor. It is said some of these petitions are to the Democratic Convention to place the Mayor on the Democratic ticket for Controller. Others are intended to secure him a place on the ballot as the candidate of an independent movement.

Democratic Leaders Divided. The Democratic leaders are divided over the question of giving him the party nomination. Some are opposed to the Mayor, while others declare for him, but at the same time favor imposing such conditions on him as a return for the party nomination as to make it nearly impossible for him to accept. County Chairman Brennen has declared in favor of Gourley, but insists he must agree to support all the Democratic candidates as against those nominated by any other organization. Several other party leaders have taken the same stand, but some of the most influential men in the party want Gourley named the same as Democrats have for 25 years named other Republicans on their ticket, without any conditions or pledges.

John B. Larkin is one of these. Speaking on the question yesterday he said: "I am in favor of nominating and electing Mayor Gourley for next Controller. I assume Mr. Morrow will not be a candidate for that office. I believe the Democratic City Convention should give Mayor Gourley such a nomination as it twice gave Mayor McCarthy for Controller, as it gave Mr. Sorg the nomination for Treasurer, and as it twice innersed Messrs, Morrow and Denniston, nithough they were the nominees of the Republican party and contributed against the election of our candidate for Mayor, They were certainly not under pledges to us. For Gourley Without Any Conditions.

"I am for Mr. Gourley without any conditions, and when I say this I feel certain he will support those associated with him on the ticket, and the more indorsements he or those nominated with him can get the better I will be satisfied. The people of this city want Mayor Gourley for Controller, and they are going to have him, or s to take advantage of the weakness of the other side. We have not had a straight Democratic ticket in city politics for 15 years and I am not in favor of one now."

Those who are crying for a full ticket of Democrats have been suggesting new names for Controller since Stephen McCandless declared himself out of the question. Dr C. C. Wylie was suggested yesterday. He was surprised when he saw it, but would not say he was a candidate when the matter as mentioned yesterday. ## DON'T LIKE PITTSBURG POLITICS.

The Allegheny Democratic Committee Will Name the Mayoralty Candidate.

Little interest was taken in the meeting of the Allegheny Democratic Committee last night, and the attendance was small. George A. Koehler presided. There was a disposition to name Alexander Wilson for Mayor there and then, but a few were opposed to it on the ground that it would be too summary. John Sullivan headed the opposition

He said the Democratic party should not show its hand until after the Republican primaries. He was against a nomination by the City Committee because it looked too much like Pittsburg politics. The powers that be had no right to abuse their power and force the party to support candidates not to their liking.

Tei Dillon provoked a laugh by asking: "Is that a speech for the reformers? We don't want any of that here. I say, d the reformers."

Mr. Ropey wanted to force the nomination of Alex Wilson, but was ruled out of Secretary Lang opposed primaries because they were too expensive. A resolution was finally adopted that the committee will meet again on the 27th inst. and in the meantime any person desiring to accept a nomination for Mayor on the Democratic ticket must make his announcement in writing to Chairman Koehler. When the committee meets it will decide from the list who shall be the party's candi-

The writ, it is stated, commands the reapportionment as to the Twelfth ward based on the ratio of representation as fixed by the returns made last July. This would be illegal, for if the Twelith ward has more taxables than its Assessor returned last July the ratio of representation as fixed by the committee is not correct, and should not be made the basis of representation in the Twelfth ward.

Of a necessity the extent of a new ratio at this time would disturb the apportion-ment of the other wards.

Under the law each ward is entitled to one member for 1,697 resident taxables, the rule being one-fortieth of the resident taxables of the city. Where there is a fraction of three-fifths more than one-fortieth, or 1,697, the ward is entitled to another member. The County Commissioners' books showed the Thirty-second ward to have only 1,797 resident taxables, and consequently entitled to only one member. JONES' FRANK SPEECH The Noted Evangelist Delighted a Good-Sized Audience.

HE TALKS ON THE BATTLE OF LIFE and Tells His Hearers Just Few He Would Win the Etruggle.

WIT AND SARCASM IN THE LECTURE

Rev. Sam Jones, the noted evangelist and lecturer, spent an hour and a half at Carnegie Hall, Allegheny, last night in telling 600 people in his own unique and cheerful way about the "Battle of Life and How to Win It." Rev. Jones is a pleasant talker. He entertained everybody who heard him last night, and during the evening he drifted from the sublime to the ridiculous with the grace of an intellectual athlete. He is at case with his audience, and brilliant ideas sparkle through his lecture like perfume from a rose.

Mr. Jones has the appearance of a thrifty business man. His face is thin and earnest. His hair, black as a raven's wing, is worn cropped and smoothly brushed. His mustache, black as his hair, curls back from positive lips. He dresses well. His clothes have a business cut, and withal, he appears just as he talks, and he talks with his hands in his pockets like one thoroughly content with his opinions and beliefs. His audience last night was a good one, and he knew it. With a shaft of wit feathered by humor he fairly convulsed them, and in the next sentence, filled with pathos and sentiment, he threw over them a thoughtful air that had he allowed it to continue long enough would have been oppressive. But the finshes of sunshine and shadow followed each other so rapidly that the merriment was practically unbroken. How Sam Jones Would Fight. He would fight and win the battle of life in the home standing on the hearthstone with the father, mother and children about him. He slashed insincerity, hypocrisy and selfishness in every direction, and in his assaults he was more pointed than polite. He illustrated every point with a timely story, and if he is not an eloquent speaker he is beyond question a good story teller.

At the opening Mr. Jones said God had made but one man and one woman. The rest he said have simply grown, and he said he was convinced that men and women are nearly as scarce now as when God com-pleted the original job. He condemned society in a general way, and said that those who win the battle in the social world, and succeed in getting into New York's 400, don't get very far at that. He considered that society is responsible for the dude and the dudine. He described the dude as a pimple on society, and the dudine as the pimple after it has been squeezed.

"The disposition of society is to put gold above God and chattels above character," the reverend gentleman said. "I would," he went on, "rather be a royal, regal, great man than be all the angels in heaven. I thank God for womanhood — lovely woman his a programment out through the world like a peer failing star. world like a never failing star.

Doesn't Believe in Evolution. "I don't believe in the theory of evolution. I do not believe the tadpole story. I do not believe that we came from monkeys but I frequently see many people who are rapidly heading in that direction. I am a firm believer in blood. I think blood is thicker than water and I hold Nancy Hanks much higher in my estimation than John L. Sullivan or gentleman Jim Corbett. Nancy Hanks is a daisy. I like anything that has the power to go ahead and do something." good is to be found in the middle laver. He thinks there is salt enough in the dle laver to save the earth. He had been in society from the White House to the lowliest cabin, and he had found the finest type of social life in the quiet home where the honest father and the pious mother joined with God to do good. "It is from the middle classes that men and women come who make the history of our world worth writing," the speaker went on. "God has done much for a man where He has given him a wife and ten children, but He has done mighty little for the fellow who He has given a mean little sickly wife and a canary bird. The Value of Home Influence

"The home influence is the influence that "The nome influence is the influence that controls the world. Anarchists are not born. They are warped into discontent and dissatisfaction by home influences before they are 16 years old. We have steel rail trusts, sugar trusts and whisky trusts, but we should have a trust for raising our children which should be made up of every father and mother in the land."

The speaker then told of the general desire for heavenly recognition. He consider the control of the steel o sire for heavenly recognition. He con-tended that what he most wanted was earthly recognition. He wanted to be recognized as an honest, good, sensible man, "And," he went on, "if I get recogni-tion here when I get to heaven, with my harp on an easy chair under the tree of life, I care little whether or not I am recognized there." The speaker then discussed the church people and said that if all those who belong to churches get to heaven the angels will have to sleep with their clothes under their heads to keep from getting robbed. "There are some of the best and some of the meanest people on earth in the churches." He said society is burning the hearts out of the women just as whisky is ourning the stomachs out of men.

"You don't run society here much," the speaker said. "You have a cheap edition of the evil, but many people are doing the best they can in imitation of society. A Pessimistic View of Wealth.

The speaker then told of his hatred for a mean man. "Hell or no bell," he said, "a man can't afford to be a mean old sinner. The fellow who rises above the mighty dollar and dares to be a man is the real hero. The devil will get 999 out of every 1,000 people who die worth more than $50,000. This pointed remark was received with rosponted remark was received with profound silence. "I knew that would create a sensation," he said. "Those of you who have that amount realize that what I say is trpe. The rest of you are mad because you don't have that much money." The speaker then devoted his attention to selfishness. He said selfishness was the meanest thing in the world.
"Hell," he said, "is selfishness on fire, and it is a great wonder that some of our selfish people don't get on fire from combustion and go rushing into hell a sheet of flame," The speaker said the hero is the man who makes money his servant instead of being the servant of his money. In discussing politics he said he hated politicians. He couldn't pray as high as he could spit for a politician. He said he had been raised a Democrat and had remained in that party just as long as a gentleman could. He said he was now a Prohibitionist. There are but two planks in his platform. He favored everyplants in his platform. He lavored everything that is opposed to whisky and he opposed everything that favored whisky. He said the idea of a Methodist preacher having to go linked arms with Bob Ingersoll to the polls was ridiculous and he believed that when Tammany Hall went to the gates that when Jammany Hall went to the gates. of hell the devil would not admit them as a body for fear they would shove him into the fire and get possession of his office.

A Suggestion to Ministers. In conclusion, Rev. Mr. Jones condemned ignorance, and in a most emphatic way de-nounced the dudes and cheap literature. Yellow-backed novels, he said, are respon-sible for most of the grass widows that are now at large. He said the preachers should attack cheap literature as they attack the devil. Many preachers complained that their work was too slow; that they were unable to excite interest in their ser-mons. "I have a remedy," he said, "I would advise such ministers to

"I would advise such ministers to go to their churches next Sunday and after reading a chapter from the Bible go down to the first pew where that old deacon has for ten years sat doing nothing. Take him by the neck and throw him through the window, and dismiss the congregation. It will cost $10 to repair the window, but it will attract thousands of people to see the person who. For once at people to see the parson who, for once at least, got a move on.

"The preachers of Pittsburg and Allegheny fight the devil in a peculiar way. They propose to drive him out of town, and in doing so they remind me of a dog chasing a hog out of a corn field. The dog is always in front." He insisted that ministers should use the truth as physicians use mustard. Apply it instead of reading about it. "I would just as soon have a prescher draw a revolver on me as a written sermon.

A GOOD MEMORY.

President J. D. Moffat, D. D., of Washington-Jefferson College, Discusses the Power to Remember-A Talent That May Be Improved by Careful Training. President J. D. Moffat, D. D., of Washington-Jefferson College, delivered the last lecture of the year in the course at the Western University yesterday afternoon. The next lecture will be delivered on January 6, 1893, by the Rev. A. P. Hopper, D. D., on the "Chinese System of Examinations."

Dr. Moffat took for his subject "Memory." He emphasized the great dependence that must be placed on the power of memory in the whole process of education. "In the very beginning," he said, "in the learning of the alphabet it must be employed in four different forms. The child must remember the forms, the sounds, the muscu-lar actions of the hand in writing or printing, and the muscular actions of the vocal organs in pronouncing."

Dr. Moffat held that the two things nee essary for a good memory are depth of im-pression, which depends either on repetiion of the original act or the amount of feeling accompanying it; and associating impressions, making an effort to connect into a system the items of knowledge that may be acquired. Dr. Moffat spoke of regulated and unregulated memory, flescribing one as holding the mind to the original cannel and the other as allowing more liberty to switch off into charnels opening up into the original. Some brains were as if made of jelly; others as if made of wax. The former quivered but took no impression, the latter took and retained the impression

Dr. Moffat dwelt upon improving the power of memory by exercise. He said that power was the result of exercise and increases as exercised. There was no way of developing the power of memory with-out developing a particular memory. Dr. Moffat thought the practice of trying to teach memory to people was absurd and uscless, as there was no good to be gotten out of the results. He gave the advice to acquire knowledge in the right way and memory would take care of itself.

THE SCHEME ABANDONED.

Wholesale Liquor Dealers Will Not Build a New Distillery.

A number of local wholesale liquor dealers met yesterday and discussed the proposition to build a distillery and operate it in opposition to the distilleries of the Whisky Trust. It is alleged the Whisky Trust is embarrassing the wholesalers. For two weeks there has been considerable talk of combining and building a distillery, but at yesterday's meeting it was decided to abandon the scheme. The Brooks law prohibits wholesalers and retailers from manu facturing liquors, and to satisfy that law the scheme was abandoned.

BUSY GLASSBLOWERS

Unusual Flood of Orders for Glass to Be Used in Buildings.

SHORT HOLIDAY SHUTDOWN.

Low Prices for Pittsburg Coal in the Southern Markets.

LUMBER COMING DOWN THE ALLEGHENY The glass houses in the Pittsburg district are enjoying an unprecedented season of rosperity. This is usually the dull season the glass trade. December and January are the months during which this is most noticeable, but in many respects this year is an exception. All the glass houses are running full, and in some branches of the trade the houses are crowded with orders. The window glass firms are the busiest. There are about 600 glassworkers in this branch of the trade, and there is a position or every one of them. The heavy demand caused by the prosperous season among the building trades and the open winter, which allows the work to go on almost un-orders as fast as they come in. Will Cut the Vacation Short. A short vacation is usually taken during the holiday season, but it will be made as brief as possible this year if the trade keeps up as it has in the past few months. Some of the firms are insisting that no stop be made at all, but as the scale provides that no work shall be done on Christmas and New Year's, these days will be observed as interruptedly. The complaint among these firms just now is their inability to fill the

The flints are not so busy as the window men, but there is no complaint for lack o orders. The furnaces are all running full now, but there will likely be a shutdown of two weeks about the first of the year. This decision was reached at the meeting of the Western Association of Flint Glass Manufacturers the first part of this week at Chicago, at which representatives from Indi-aoa, Illinois, West Virginia and Pennsylvania were present. Only the houses making prescription bottles and druggists' specialties will be affected, as this association does not include all the flints in its membership. The trade in bottles has been very good for the past few months, and for this time in the year is considered unusual. Some of the firms report slack orders, how-ever, but consider the outlook very good.

Talk About Advancing Prices. Only a short time ago prices were advanced in this class of goods, and at the meeting in Chicago these were fully maintained. It was the intention to advance them some, but by closing the plants for a short time during the dullest season and thus not allowing stock to advance it was thought the chances for advancing the prices at the next meeting would be improved. Many of the houses in Pittsburg will be affected by this order. The shut-dewn will begin December 24 and continue till January 9. The manufacturers of chimneys and table ware report good trade, though the lat-ter are not rushed for orders. This branch of the flints will not likely close its furnaces longer than the usual time allowed for the holidays. All are now busy and running their factories to their full capaci-ties. The consensus of opinion among the glass men seems to be that for this season of the year the trade is unusually good, and have plenty of orders to keep them running full for some time.

TO REVIVE INTEREST.

The Painters Discuss Questions That Are

Exciting Attention. The members of the Brotherhood of Painters of the two cities held an open meeting last evening at 102 Fourth avenue. There was a good turnout as an earnest request had been sent out to all the members to be present. The work of the painters has practically closed and a consequent lack of interest has been manifested by the members for the Union. The leaders are making stresuous efforts to revive the old time interest. A bold front can thus be presented with the opening of the next season so that they will be able to demand concessions from their employers. The eight hour law will be systematically agi-tated after the first of the year, as it is the intention to make a determined contest on this question.

UNIQUE WAY OF SETTLING TROUBLE

The Charleroi Land Company, an organization that is responsible for the glass town at war with itself, and to-day it will be dissolved in strict accordance with the rules and practices of the Louisiana Lottery

The land company is made up of Colonel W. H. Moore, McBride Sloan, M. J. Alex-under and James K. Clarke, of Greensburg,

Postmaster McKean and two others of this city. The land company was also largely interested in the glass works at Charleroi.

They also built a magnificent new hotel and

About a month ago a speek of trouble appeared on the surface of the organization and six members of the company combined and purchased the interests of Colonel

Moore in the glass works and the hotel property for $800,000. An effort was made to buy Mr. Moore's interest in the land company, but a satisfactory price could not be arranged. Several plans for settling the trouble were suggested but all to no purpose.

Finally Colonel Moore suggested that they cast lots for the possessions of the organization, and now all have agreed to his prop-fairly well off financially, and the drawing to-day will be only a test of the luck of each of them.

Alex. Weimer, who will represent

Colonel Moore at the drawing to-day, was in Pittsburg last night on his way to Charleroi. Mr. Weimer said the proposition to resort to the lottery scheme was forced upon the land company by Golonel Moore, as he is willing to pit his luck against the luck of any number of men provided all are compelled to stand on the same footing on the go in. Mr. Weimer said the drawing will take place at noon, and with the exception of Colonel Moore, all the members of the company will attend
