The debut of the Baroness Bianco was not much of a sensation after all. The public would have been pleased, extremely well-dressed woman who had, for a beginner, unusual repose and grace in stage business.

Henry E. Dixey will be seen this week at the Duquesne in a revival of the famous Gilbert and Sullivan opera "Patience." It will be remembered that Mr. Dixey was the original Duke when the opera was first produced in America.

Dr. Bill at the Grand. The Grand Opera House announces for Monday night the success of comedy, "Dr. Bill," from the theatre of the Duquesne. This merry comedy was seen here last season and the success it met with is well remembered.

The Fall of Atlanta at the Alvin. Next Monday evening at the Alvin Theater, for the benefit of the Abe Patterson Post No. 88, will be presented the historic war spectacle, "The Fall of Atlanta." The play has been presented here with great success.

World's Museum Theatre. A sensational melodrama, "Roland Romando," by J. D. Hinton, will be produced this week in the museum theatre. The story is set in the days of the American Civil War.

Mr. Keoch, one of Baroness Bianco's managers, has had useful experience with Lily Langtry and he will have a chance to exploit his new star in New York for the next week before she opens there.

The new dancer is a very good exponent of the school, the decadent school, of ballet dancing. Her dancing is in love with a star. This was too much for his already weakened mind and soon afterwards it became necessary to send him to a lunatic asylum.

The foreign sensation for this season promises to be the Italian opera "Patience." Under the management of Harry Williams' Academy, the production is being given at the Duquesne Theatre.

Dr. Brown's "The Merry Comedy" will be presented at the Duquesne Theatre. The play is a comedy of the "Dixey" school, with a dash of the "Patience" school.
