

I saw a lovely evening costume in damask, a straw-colored ground with old rose and blue flowers, richly garnished with lace and ribbons. It will be surmised from the engraving that the low bodice was very rich, and it will be seen that it has high epaulettes of lace and bows. There is also a lace front over a colored transparency, caught up with bows, while below straight ribbons continue to the edge of this lace front. In some of these elegant evening costumes the deep lace bertha ends each side of the Watteau pleat and cascades beneath it to a point below the waist.

A Dress of Damask.
Figures are much worn, and they fit almost any dress, but it is quite essential that they should be richly embroidered. You may choose either a velvet, an old brocade, or old Venetian ruyure. The long R. also blouse is also much in vogue. With

If you must wear a Byzantine girl's, passing it under the Watteau fold, then there is still left for your choice the Pompadour drapery or the embroidered Russian skirt.
Japanese effects are much used for waist gowns and interior dresses. Still another charming effect may be attained by the use of the satin bow, with ends reaching almost to your feet, the bow being artistically set upon the left shoulder exactly in the spot where your left wing will spring forth when your sweetness and goodness become sufficiently developed to transform you into an angel.
FLORENCE.

Young Girls and Jewelry.
It is in America alone that the matter of jewelry would be likely to come up for consideration in a young girl's toilet. Escaping a string of small pearls, or some dainty brooch miniature affixed to a band of velvet around the throat, ornament of the kind is almost unseen in full dress among the really well-bred people heretofore alluded to.

Indeed, it has been recently a fashion amonging to a sad number of girls fortunate in round, white, well-covered necks and throats, to omit every vestige of jewelry on the person (and to have no ornament in the hair, if a tiny band or bow of ribbon be not suffered to nestle in those silken tresses). Cheap jewelry, masquerading in the guise of real; the thousand and one low-knots and rhinestone pins, and false enamel trinkets that now glitter in the shop windows—and their adoption among maid-servants and shop girls—are no doubt responsible for the forsaking of much that is fascinating and appropriate for wear in the goldsmith's art.

French Knacks of Dress.
The French woman excels all other women in her attention to the details of dress. She will live on one meal a day, if necessary, to save the money to always have neat shoes and gloves. Her dress may be of cheap material, but no dirt spots are allowed to stay on it, no buttons are left to danger for want of a timely thread, and she never wears shabby shoes or gloves.

A New Yorker, just home from abroad, attended a tea-given in a Parisian gown, and she destroyed the whole effect of her costume by wearing a pair of shoes that looked as weatherworn as a cobbler's sign. She was not brilliant enough to detract attention from her clothes. Any woman can ill afford to wear shabby shoes and gloves. Even the interesting woman with thoughts more attractive than dress will not be less charming if perfectly booted and gloved.

Fair Fads of Fashion.
SLIPPERS laced with ribbon to imitate a sensual effect are worn with Empire gowns. While rough surfaced cloth is in high favor, very handsome costumes are being made of fine glossy cloth in light and medium shades, combined with contrasting velvet or silk or wool.
The various browns in corduroy cloth are liked for medium length winter coats; they are usually trimmed with brown fur, and if the design permits it, rosettes or ribbon ends, not too long, of brown velvet ribbon, are arranged upon them.

Across the handsome evening wraps are ermine capes in the flowing military shapes with a high turned over collar and tinted with mauve and pink more. In some models the ermine is gathered full about the shoulders to a yoke and in others a waistcoat front is added.

Colored velvet or satin sleeves with sash to match are very pretty with white blouses, dresses, and are very useful in freshening up last season's toilets. A band of fur at the bottom of a white silk or satin also covers the marks of wear on the edges of the skirt.

The coiffure is arranged either half-high or at the center of the head, as deemed most becoming. The hair at the sides is crimped in large, natural-looking waves, and drawn back loosely, unless the face is very full, in which case these locks should be tightly drawn back to produce a narrow effect. The bangs according to the latest fancy, is only allowed to fall on the forehead at the center, the sides being very short and curled loosely over or twisted bands may be arranged at the back.

MUST USE SMOKE CONSUMERS.

A Compulsory Order Issued by Cleveland City Officials.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 22.—[Special.]—The Cleveland city officials began a war to-day against smoky chimneys that have been such a nuisance. All the big manufacturing and mercantile establishments, as well as the hotels, were notified by the Director of the Police to put in smoke consumers within 15 days.
The business men are indignant at the shortness of the time allowed and many announce that they will stand arrest rather than accede to the city's demands. The circular of the Director of the Police leaves it to be inferred that only two kinds of consumers will be satisfactory.
