HIS HOLD ON THE STATE POLITICIANS

PROM & STAFF CORRESPONDENT.I NEW YORK, Dec. 24 -- In the orush of land University Hospital. First it was de-cided to perform the operation of tracheo-tomy, which consists of cutting through the wind-pipe and inserting a silver tube to breathe through. Then it was proposed to cat through the abdominal wall and in-sert a tube in the sack of the stomach so that food could be forced into it. An open-ing meads is the theoret jurt below the holiday gitt-buyers on Broadway this afternoon I ran across David B. Hill, his face buried in his overcoat collar and his silk hat pulled down slightly over his forehead, pushing along as if his only thought were to get out of the annoying crowd as quickly ing was made in the throat just below the as possible. Big men with little bundles atricture just large enough to allow a tube to pass in. On this tube a sponge satu-rated with chloroform was held tightly by and little men with big bundles, women weighted down with things of joy for others an assistant, and as the patient breathed through the tube she inhaled the chloro--children, even, eagerly carrying evidences of love to their playmates-all made form into her lungs and in a very short time lost consciousness. Next laparoup a merry throng to stir the blood and time lost consciousness. Next laparo-tomy was performed, which consisted of making a cut through the walls of the abdomen. When this had been done gastrotomy was performed, which consisted ef a careful search of the sack of the stom-ach, of which, when found, one corner was pulled through the cut in the abdominal wall and sewed very carefully. The influ-ence of the chloroform was then dispelled. stimulate the impulse of the whole world; yet Hill pushed his way through oblivious of it all, and with the air of one who regarded the scene as one in which he neither played nor cared to play a part.

Even the biting wind failed to bring the color of vigorous life and blood to his cheeks, though it quickened his step through the crowd. Not many streets further on was the Hoffman, House, where all the Democratic politicians congregate, and into that he dived hurriedly, as if he were glad at last to get into congenial atmosphere and surrounding.

Typical of Hill's Life.

The incident typifies Hill's life. He has no home and no domestic ties whatever. Living means to him a mere existence, and the only thing worth living for is to get ahead of someone else. Hill has many of the attributes as a politician that Jay Gould possensed as a financier. He has all of Gould's sly cunning, the same keen gleam of the eye, the same immobile feat-ures, and the same quiet but indefatigable persistency in pushing his own interests. Had Hill put as much time and industry into money-making as he has into politics he would to-day be a millionaire many times over. It seems to be one of the inex-orable rules of politics that the higher up vou get the poorer you become. Samuel J. Bandall died with scarcely a dollar of his own. So did "Sunset" Cox. Dozens of others whose names and faces are familiar throughout the land, even to this generation, have gone to their graves after enjoy-ing all the inscinations of public life without amassing even a competency for their Love offered to give him $2 for a ticket, and Stanley took the money. Then he went to the Dime Museum and by the penman there he had the following card written: "Good for one to see the mill. December 28." This eard he took to the office, and yesterday alternoon he called to get another piece of money. His methods in the mean-time had been exposed, and Officers Hamil and Nunn placed him under arrest. At Fourth and Plum he broke away from them, but they followed and landed him at families. Hill's failure to create a fortune, unlike the case of Messrs. Randall and Cox, is no injustice to others, for he has no one close enough to him to have "expectations" on his death. Without kith or kin, he is his death. Without kith or kin, he is ignorant of the charm of a woman's sym-pathy or the prattle of youthful voices across the threshold of his door. These do not interest him. For that reason he is free to spend his income as he goes through be extravagant to run through it all. A couple of weeks ago he got his first fee as an attorney since he became a member of the second an attorney since he became a member of geant Primrose. land in 1883. It was a Court of Appeals case. I am told that he is now active in the market for fees, and that he expects to more than double his Senatorial salary by his law practice.

He Has No Holidays.

But I started out to tell of his plans for spending his holiday vacation. I should have said the world's holiday time, not his; for it is when all others are cujoying themselves in pleasurable pursuits that Hill is most industrious. He has no holidays. Every hour and every minute he gives to wind prevailed all day, and this with the politics, and everything is fish that gets into his net. He went to Albany to-night atter seeing all the leaders who train with the "machine" and conspicuously ignoring all the others from Grover Cleveland down The latter's success has deepened Hill's hatred of him. He chaies under the knowl-edge that Cleveland has been made President again despite him, and the highest ambition he has at present is to keep his hold on the State "machine" and dely the new administration to cross-swords in a combat for supremacy. Evidence of this purpose on Hill's part, if further evidence is necessary, is to be tound in his journey to Albany, where he found in his journey to Albany, where he announces his purpose to remain "until the Legislature has assembled and its policy been definitely mapped out." That means until he has bargained for legislation, and practically usurped functions that belong to Governor Flower, if to anyone. Hill has never had any hesitancy about demon-strating his control of Flower, and on more than one occasion he has acquiesced in nom-inations for office with the manner of one who was the real and only power in the State Capitol.

He Is the Man Who Caused the Death of An Operation More Complicated Than Tracheotomy Successfully Performed. SING SING, N. Y., Dec. 25 .- Dr. Henry BALTIMORE, Dec. 25 -- Prof. L. McLane C. McGonegal, the aged physician who was sent to Sing Sing prison a month ago for manslaughter, in causing the death of An-nie Goodwin, a pretty cigarette girl, by a criminal operation, is dying in the prison hospital from pneumonia. Warden Brown said to-night that the old doctor would not more they but the single test. Tiffany, assisted by other professors of the Maryland University of Medicine, recently performed one of the most daring and difficult surgical operations ever attempted. The patient, a lady of about 45 years, had been suffering for a long time with stricture of the throat, which developed to such an alarming extent that her throat closed up more than last the night out. so that it was impossible for her either to

A Role That Is Well Filled.

Undoubtedly the strongest reason for his hold on the machine bosses, like Croker and Murphy, is the fact that they regard and sturpiny, is the fact that they regard him as a more far-seeing manipulator than themselves. They can carry out the de-tails, but they need someone in the back-ground to do their deliberating. Hill is admirably fitted for that role, and he has played it well in State politics. Just what plans Hill has in mind for legislative enactment there are as yet but few inklings. His first step is to get a unani-mous vote for Ed Murphy as Senator Hiscock's successor. While Murphy's election seems certain there is just enough doubt about it to make necessary close watching nhout it to make necessary close watching of the slender Democratic majority on joint ballot. Hill proposes to do that, and therein he again demonstrates his useful-ness to Murphy. For nearly ten years now, Hill has played with the fortunes and am-hitions of almost everyone who has come to the fourt in the Democratic matches. the front in the Democratic rankshere. He, therefore, knows better than anyone else how to handle the legislators, and how to play one of against the other. It will be at this game that Hill will be engaged while others are enjoying the season's holi-days and the New Year will not be many irs old before the results of his present secretive efforts will be public property.
