SHIPMAN VS. H. S. DAVIDSON-The following are the prin-This was at action founded promisory notes, signed by Davidson, payable June 1st, Wm Shipman or bearer. The Pleaded the statute of limitadence of the promise to pay was found in the testimony of Wm. Shipman, who deposed, that on the 6th day of July, 1841, he had a conversation with the defendant in regard to these notes, that the defendant examined the amount, and agreed to pay them as fast as he could, that he would pay part the then next fall, and Mr. Shipman further remarking that the notes were outlawed. D. said it would make no difference, for he would pay as soon as he could. Mr. S. further deposed, that he transferred the notes to O. O. Shipman for a valuable cousideration, about the 13th July, 1841, and that he had no interest in the ment of the present suit. This suit was commenced August 10, 1841. The question which arose for decision of the Court, were whether Wm. Shipman was a competent witness, whether his testimony if admitted, would be sufficient to support the action, and whether it was sustainable in the name of the present plaintiff. The Court on Thursday afternoon delivered a written opinion on the last two points in the following terms:

"In the opinion of the Court, the new promise made to Wm. Shipman is no evidence to sustain the promise impliedly set forth in the declaration, as made to O. O. Shipman, the present plaintiff because there is by such new promise no recognition of any right in O. O. Ship man, from the fact, that the conversation. from which it is inferred, took place before the transfer of the note to him, and this new promise would not be negotiable so as to sustain a suit in the name of the transferee. We think, therefore, that the present suit cannot be sustained in the name of O. O. Shipman.

" The case now before us is stronger too, from the character of the new promise which is conditional to pay when he could, and part in the then next fall, the relic, a beautiful-gold watch, which was suit being brought in August after the formerly worn by Gen. Washington, promise, and no evidence of the ability of the dift., shewn, so that the evidence, neither as to the character of the promise nor as to the parties, sustains the allegations on the part of the plaintiff, and judgement must therefore be entered for the defendant for costs."
