Keep your Loaf under your own Arm.
The following is copied from a New York paper, printed in the year 1776, and is related as a fact. Similar cases often occur in these days, that a parent, having given his all into the hands of his children, is obliged to spend the remainder of his days in poverty and want.—Youth's Companion.

At this time there is living at Harlem, an old man who relates the following remarkable story of himself. He was possessed of a pretty good farm, with slaves and everything necessary for a farmer at Harlem, and had but one child, a son, who marrying, it was agreed that the young couple should live in the house with him, as he was a widower. Things went exceedingly well for some time, when his son proposed to him that he should make over to him his estate, proposing to build a new house; and otherwise improve the farm. The father, through persuasion gave him a deed or gift of it, and everything belonging thereto.

After a few years, as the father grew old, he grew a little fretful and dissatisfied, while the son, thinking he had nothing more to expect from him, forgot his filial duty and used him as bad as one of his servants. The old man was no longer allowed to eat his meals at the same table with him and his wife, but obliged to eat them in the chimney corner, and continually otherwise ill used by him. The old man ate his victuals daily from a wooden-bowl his son had made for him. His grandson saw his father make his bowl, and sat about making just such another: on being asked by his father what he made it for, he answered, "For you to eat in when you grow as old as grandfather." Although this ought to have turned his heart, and made him reflect, that as he dealt by his father, he might expect to be dealt with by his children when he grew old, it had no effect upon him; and the ill usage to the old man was carried to such a height that he could no longer bear it, but left the house and went to a relation and neighbor of his, declaring that if his friend could not help him get his farm back again, he should be obliged to come and live with him.

His friend answered that he might come and live with him; and if he would follow his directions, he would help him to his estate again. "Go," said he, "take this bag of dollars, carry it in our room at your son's, shut it up well in your chest, and about the time you expect they will call you down to dinner, shut your door, and have all your dollars spread on a table in the middle of the room. When they call you, make a noise with them by brushing them from the table into the bag again."

The old man did as he was desired; his daughter-in-law came up to call him to dinner, and finding the door shut, she had the curiosity to peep through the key-hole saw the bag of dollars and the old man sweeping them off the table. Surprised at it, she called her husband, but he would not believe it. The next day the old man again counted his dollars, and packed up something in paper money. His son went up to call him down, and was surprised at what his wife had told him. They took notice of it to the old man, but when he came down, insisted on his sitting at the table with them, and behaved uncommonly civil towards him.

The old man related to his friend what he had done, who gave him directions what to do if his son asked him for the money. After a few days, the old man having been very busy in counting out his money again, his son asked him what money that was he had been counting. "Only some money I had received for the discharge of one of the bonds I had standing out. I expect more in a few days and I shall be obliged to take Mr. N's farm, upon which I have a mortgage, as he is not able to raise the money, and if the farm is sold, it will not fetch as much as will discharge the mortgage."

After a few days, the son told the father that he intended to build a house on the farm, and would be glad if his father would let him have that money. "Yes, child, all that I have is coming to you. I intend giving you the bonds and mortgage I have; but when I think it will be best to have it all put together in a deed of gift, I will get neighbor T. to call here and draw a new one."

Accordingly his friend and cousin, who had devised the measure, came to the house, and the son gave the father the deed, that another might be drawn of it. When the old man got the instrument into his hand in the presence of his friend, he broke off the seal; and committed the writing to the fire saying—

"Burn! cursed instrument of my folly and misery! and you children, as this estate is all my own again, you must remove immediately, unless you will be content to be my tenants. I have now learned that it is best for a parent to hold the loaf under his own arm—and that one father can better maintain ten children, than ten children can a father."

Buttered on both Sides.

In New York a year two since, a country cousin applied to a friend in power for assistance to a berth in the corporation's gift. He was accordingly set at work at a dollar and a quarter per day; and in a few months called again upon a friend to inform him that he was going out to Harlem to make the first payment on a house he had purchased. "How!" said the other,—"how is this? did you not tell me you were poor?" "Yes,"—and yet you have saved money enough to buy a house, on a dollar and a quarter a day? The other laughed, and after some hesitation answered:—"I'll tell you, sir, what it is, that was a charming good berth you gave me; I got a dollar and a quarter from the city—then the contractors gave me two dollars a day to watch the subcontractors; and they gave me two dollars more not to watch them."

ANECDOTE OF A NUT.—In Mr. Waterton's Essays there is a remarkable statement of a nut deposited for winter by some nut-eating animal under an old millstone which lay in the field, springing up through the central aperture, and Mr. Waterton goes on to say—"In order, however, that the plant might have a fair chance of success, I directed that it should be defended from accident and harm by means of a wooden paling. Year after year it increased in size and beauty; and when its expansion had entirely filled the hole in the centre of the millstone, it gradually began to raise up the millstone itself from the seat of its long repose. This huge mass of stone is now eight inches above the ground, and is entirely supported by the stem of the nut tree, which has risen to the height of twenty-five feet, and bears excellent fruit.

THE LORD'S PRAYER.—The following passage, by Monigomery, is beautiful:
"How many millions and millions of times has that Prayer been offered by Christians of all denominations? So wide, indeed, is the sound thereof gone forth, that daily, and almost without intermission, from the ends of the earth, and afar upon the sea, it is ascending to Heaven like incense, and a pure offering. Nor needs it the gift of prophecy to foretell, that "though Heaven and earth shall pass away," these words of our blessed Lord "shall not pass away," till every petition has been answered—till the kingdom of God shall come, and his will be done on earth as it is in Heaven."

GOOD JOKE.—A rather green sort of a "well dressed" individual walked into the Broadway House the other morning, and stretching, himself up to his full height, exclaimed in a loud voice, "Where are all the whigs?" "Show me a whig, gentlemen," said he, "and I will show you a thief!" A large company of quiet gentlemen was present, and in an instant one of them stood before the noisy inquirer in a warlike attitude, and said—"I am a whig, sir!"
"Are you, indeed?"
"Yes, sir, I am!"
"Well just step down to the Tomb with me, and I will show you a thief!"
—N. Y. Mirror.

RATHER GOOD.—The following is one of the Spirit of the Times' gems:—
"Some wags engaged in playing upon words one singularly dull worked out the following:
"Why is a runaway negro, making his way to Ohio, like Shakespeare's southern breezes?"
After considerable many reasons which were not to the purpose, the following was given:
"Because they go 'stealing from the South, giving out odor.'"

A GOOD EXCUSE.—"John"—said a Pedagogue the other day—"what's detained you, how come you so late to school?"
"Well Sir, I had hot soup for dinner, and had to wait for it to cool."
"Take your seat, your excuse is sufficient!"

A child was left upon a gentleman's door step in Rochester, N. Y., some days since, nicely packed in a basket, and with it a note containing $10 and these words: "more will be sent when this is exhausted." The gentleman asks which, more money or babies?

PETRIED BODIES.—Some parts of the soil of Iowa are remarkable for petrifying all kinds of substances. Recently, in removing some bodies from a graveyard, it was found that some which had been buried five years were in a state of petrification.

DARING.—"Oh my dear, how come you so wet," inquired an affectionate mother of her son. "Why, ma, one of the boys said I daren't jump into the creek, and by gosh, I tell you I ain't a boy to be dared."

A'bum lass in Michigan has bet herself that Lewis Cass will be the next President. The editor of the "Cincinnati Enquirer" says he would like to hold the stakes!

A POSER.—The Providence Gazette asks—"If a man get too lazy to draw his last breath can he die?"
