

THE TRAGEDY ON BOARD THE SUIP... Thomas Forbes, one of the crew of the ship Farwell of Boston, on his last voyage from Philadelphia, is now on trial in the United States District Court, before his Honor Judge Randall, for the crime of revolt. The prisoner, who is almost a youth, is a native of Scotland, and appears to be about friends in this country. He was, however, ably defended by William Smith, Esq., assisted by a young member of the bar, Mr. Carozza. The brief history of the case is as follows: The Farwell, bound to Boston, left this on the morning of the 25th of December, last, in company with the pack-ship Monongahela, for Liverpool, in tow of the City Ice Boat. The crew on coming aboard were nearly all in liquor, but went to duty, and three or four hours everything proceeded pretty quietly. They then became more intoxicated, and began to behave in a noisy, disorderly and turbulent manner. It was evident they were in liquor in their chests, but Captain Farwell wishing to have as little trouble as possible, on consulting with his officers, determined to wait until 2 o'clock in the afternoon in the hope that the liquor would be improved. About 1 o'clock, one of the crew was excited by rum to craziness, jumped into the river, and was drawn in by the taffrail. At this moment the officers were boisterous and uproarious to a high degree. Capt. Farwell now found it absolutely necessary to deprive them of the liquor, and ordered them to unlock their chests and give it up. Some of them obeyed, but others refused; when the order was ordered to break open the chests of those who disobeyed, and the liquor was passed out of the forecastle taken aft into the cabin. The sailors disputed the right of the officers to take the liquor from them, and were greatly incensed at having their chests opened. They declared that the articles of their shipment were broken, and that they would not go on the voyage. They were told that the liquor would be thrown overboard, as was usual, and would be kept in the cabin, and they went out to them on the passage. This had no effect in allaying the excitement, and Captain Farwell desiring to check the insubordination peaceably, came forward and reasoned with them, telling them that he wished a quiet ship, yet at the same time resolutely informed them that if they were for fight he was prepared for them. Pacific measures failed, and the Captain saw the necessity of asserting his authority to restore discipline. The crew were at once ordered to "turn to." The order was obeyed by the mate, and a few only disobeyed. The disobedients were immediately ordered aft with the view of ascertaining who the offenders were of taking their names, in order to try them. Some ten or twelve marched forward, when Captain Farwell again appealed to them, and threatened them of the consequences of their disobedience. The mutineers refused at him, and with bad language and much bravado, set the authority of the captain and officers at defiance. The discipline of the vessel being gone, and the mutineers being in a fair way of seizing the command, the Captain ordered the ringleader, a man named Sampson, to be put in irons, and ordered him to the captain for that purpose, when the first officer, Mr. Engles, was in the midst of the mutineers attempting to make prisoners of some of the rest, was stabbed to the heart by one of them, of which wound he died in four hours after. Capt. Farwell discovering that his first officer had been killed, asked who the murderer was and demanded his name. The man who did it—that he had killed the mate. The captain was armed with a Colt's revolver, and his first officer was to shoot the murderer, and levelled the weapon at him. He fired at that moment, and turning the other way, he perceived Forbes attempting to pull his knife out of his belt. Next instant, seeing the murderer draw the instrument in his hand and approaching him in a threatening attitude, he drew his pistol and shot him. The man fell, he threw his knife at the side, producing only a flesh wound. The captain put him in irons while he lay upon the deck, and asking him if he had murdered an innocent man, and why he had done it, he answered boastfully that he was not the first one he had served so. After the tragical affray the crew returned to duty, and discipline was perfectly restored. On the arrival of the Farwell at Boston, six of them—all that the captain could identify—were arrested, and are in prison there awaiting their trial for mutiny. The murder of the mate took place on the Delaware river, one mile below Cliester, and Forbes will be tried for the homicide at the Oyer and Terminer of Delaware county.

The Vice President's Address to the Senate.
SENATORS.—In directing the Vice President to preside at the deliberations of this body, the constitution of our country assigns to him a sphere and a duty alike eminent and grateful. Without any of the cares of real power, with none of the responsibilities of legislation, except in rare conjunctures, he is associated with the dignified delegates of republican sovereignties: he is posted by the entire American people in your confederated council, partly, it would seem, as an organ of Freedom's fundamental principles of Order, and partly, perhaps, as a mere symbol of that more popular and "more perfect union" in which depend the blessings of our Peace, Independence and Liberty. His mission, tranquil and unimposing, is yet noble in its origin and objects, and happy, as well as proud, in its relations to you.

No one, gentlemen, can appreciate more highly or recognize more deferentially, than does the incumbent of this chair, the powers, privileges and rules or forms of the Senate of the United States. To maintain these unimpaired and unrelaxed, he feels to be an official duty, second in impressive obligations only to his Constitutional allegiance. To their exercise the Republic owes incalculable good; and through them has been gradually achieved a wide spread fame for wisdom, justice, moderation and efficiency, unsurpassed by any assembly of statesmen in former or present times.

A calm and well adjusted system of action in this chamber, carefully devised and steadily pursued by those who have preceded us in it, has indeed largely contributed to the undoubted success of our great political experiment. Instability, haste, procrastination, discourtesy, and indecision, habitually discontinued and banished, leave, in undisturbed supremacy here, the powers of enlightened reason, and the vigor of practical patriotism. Our country reaps thence solid and substantial advantages in her policy, institutions, prospects, and renown.

The citizen whom it has pleased a people to elevate by their suffrages, from the pursuit of private and domestic life, may best evince his grateful sense of the honor thus conferred, by devoting his faculties, moral and intellectual, resolutely to their service.— This I shall do; yet with a diffidence unavoidable to one conscious that almost every step in his appointed path is to him new and untried, and sensible how dangerous a contrast must occur in the transfer of powers from practiced to unpracticed hands.

In observing, however, upon this floor, a number of those experienced and skillful statesmen on whom the nation justly looks with pride and reliance, I am assured that there can be but little danger of public disadvantage from inadvertencies or mistakes, which their counsel may readily avert or rectify. And thus, gentlemen, while aiming frankly and impartially to exercise the functions of an unaccustomed station in the spirit of the constitution, for the enlarged and lasting purposes of a revered country, and with sincere good will towards all, I may cherish the encouraging hope of being able, with the assent of an indulgent Providence, at once to perform my duty, and to attract your confidence.

APPOXY.—This dreadful complaint is generally preceded by pain in the head, giddiness, (especially in turning suddenly around,) dimness of sight, stupor, loss of memory, and other unpleasant symptoms, which indicate a loaded and corrupt state of the blood. Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills are a direct purifier of the blood, and are, therefore, a certain preventative of Apoplexy, because they expel from the body those stagnant and corrupt humors which are the cause of every malady incident to man. Said Pills also aid and improve digestion, as well as purify the blood, and therefore not only drive disease of every name from the body, but are one of the best, if not the very best, medicines in the world, for the cure of colic, dysentery, cholera morbus, and other diseases of the intestines.

For sale at the store of J. D. & E. D. Montanye, in Towanda, and by agents published in another column of this paper.
Caution.—As counterfeiters are abroad, avoid all stores of doubtful character, and be particular in all cases, to ask for Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills.

Died.
In Athens on the evening of the 5th instant, CLARRISSA H., wife of Nathaniel Flower, in the 51st year of her age.
By this dispensation of Providence a husband has been bereft of a devoted companion, a large circle of friends, of an affectionate relative, and society, of a worthy and valued member. And by few will her departure be deplored more than by the poor, for charity, the crowning excellence of the Christian's life, she shone out beautifully in the way which she pursued. Modest and unassuming, her pretensions were but few, yet the beholder could not but observe that the spirit of the Savior imbued her heart—marked the thoughts of mind, and directed the deeds of her hands; so that by her whole conduct, from the hour of youth to that in which she was called from earth, she exhibited the great truth that "pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father, is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions," and to keep the heart unspotted by the vices of the world. But she is gone—the dust to the earth as it was, the spirit to him who gave it, to be clothed upon with immortality and bloom in the loveliness of imperishable youth, while eternity itself, shall endure. She died as she had lived, in the firm and unwavering faith of a world's salvation—the final redemption of the whole human family from sin, and death, and the grave, and her memory will long be cherished by those who were aware of her moral worth.
