

The Shot in the Eye.

[CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

A rifle was discharged. He fell back dead—shot through the eye! The boy said that his master suddenly cut short his outburst, and exclaimed, "There is!"—at that moment the gun fired. He saw a tall man with a beard hanging down on his breast dressed in skins, walking off through the brush with his rifle on his shoulder.

The next man named Garret, about two weeks after this, got up one morning about sun rise, and in his shirt sleeves stepped to his door and threw it open to breathe the fresh air. He was rubbing his eyes, being about half asleep; and when he got them fairly open, there stood the gaunt avenger beside a tree in the yard—the fatal rifle levelled, and waiting till his victim should see him distinctly. He did see him—but it was with his last look! The bullet went crashing through his brain too! Long is said to have told one of his friends that he never in a single instance shot one of these men till he was certain the man saw and recognized him fully.

All were now gone but Hinch and the two youngest men of the party, Williams and Davis. The two latter were permitted to escape. Whether it was from resentment on the part of the dread avenger, or that he had observed some trifling thing in their demeanor on the occasion of the outrage he was thus punishing, now that his resentment had so deeply drank of the bitter delight of atonement, or that in his anxiety to secure Hinch, he confined his efforts and watchfulness to him alone—I do not know. They made a forced and secret sale of their property, and cleared out during the night. But it was for Hinch he had with passionate calculation reserved the most inconceivable torture. He had passed him by all this time, while one after another he struck down the tools and companions of his crimes. He doomed him to see them falling around him with the certain knowledge that the avenging hate which slew them burned with ten-fold intensity for his life—that it must and would have it! But when would the claim be made? Should he be the next one? No! The next one? No! But then each succeeding death, so sure to take one of their number, drove away every sophistry of hope, and realized to him in bare and sterner horror that his own fate was as fixed as theirs. As each one fell away, the circle of doom narrowed—slowly, steadily closing in about him. Soon there would be no one left but him! How could he call an hour his own? When could he feel safe? That relentless subtlety had baffled them all! One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, strong men had all gone down before that fearful rifle—every one of them shot through the eye! God of Heaven!—and the sharp agony would spangle keen points of burning light thro' his brain, as if the ball were already bursting through a socket! "I too must be shot through the eye!" It was worse than ten thousand deaths, and he then in lingering tortures told over day by day.

From the time of Ree's death he looked a changed and stricken man. In a few weeks he had lost a great deal of flesh, and become piteously haggard—his eyes and voice and gait was all humbled. His turbulent and fierce animality faded before the harrowing suspense of this fear. The bully and murderous ruffian trembled at the rustling of a leaf. His own imagination became his hell—and hungry remorse grew stronger and stronger with feasting at his heart! He never left his horse for weeks, until the escape of Williams and Davis inspired him with some hope. He procured a fine horse, and set off one dark night for the Red River! Every body regretted his escape—for men had looked in quiet expectation upon the progress of this affair, and in strong faith that the sense of wild border justice would be gratified in seeing this stern, righteous and unparalleled vengeance consummated by the fall of Hinch—the monster instigator and chief actor in all the grievous outrages which had roused the simple-hearted Long into a demon-executioner of doom.

Hinch reached the banks of Red River—sprang from his foaming and exhausted horse, after looking cautiously around—and threw himself upon the grass to wait for a steambot. In two hours he heard one puffing down the stream, and saw the white wreaths of steam curling up behind the trees. How his heart bounded! Freedom, hope and life!—once more sprang through his shrivelled veins and to his lips. He signalled the vessel; she rounded to and lowered her yawl. His pulse bounded high, and he gazed with absorbing eagerness at the crew as they pulled slowly towards the shore. A click—behind him! He turned with a shudder, and THERE HE WAS! That long rifle was bearing straight upon him—those cold eyes dwelt steadily upon him for a moment—and crash!—all was forever blackness to Hinch the Regulator! The men who witnessed this singular scene landed, and found him shot through the eye! and saw the murderer galloping swiftly away over the plain stretching out from the top of the bank! And so the vengeance was consummated, and the stern hunter had wiped out with much blood the stain of stripes on his free limbs; and could now do, what I was told he had never done since the night of those fatal and fatally expiated stripes—look his wife again in the eyes, and receive her form again to rest upon his breast.

It was an awful deed. In view of all its circumstances, the provocation, the character of Long, the influence of the outrage upon his brain, though no other indication appeared of impaired sanity—the mind is lost in uncertainty as to the judgment which should be passed upon it. He did not remain in Shelby county; but in what direction he had intended to go after returning to Arkansas for his wife and children, I could never hear. He is probably living now his old quiet and good-natured life in the heart of the green wilderness; and it is as likely as not that one of those two chubby boys who rolled with him about the floor of his log cabin on that memorable night of which I have above simply related the events and the consequences, will some of these days come to Washington from congressional districts beyond the Rocky Mountains.

Robert Emmet and his Love.

"Twas the evening of a lovely day—the last for the noble ill-fated Emmet. A young lady stood at the castle gate and desired admittance into the dungeon. She was closely veiled and the keeper could not imagine who she was, nor why one of such proud bearing should be a suppliant at the prison door! However, he granted the boon—led her to the dungeon, opened the massive door, then closed it again, and the lovers were alone. He leaned against the prison wall, with a downcast head and his arms were folded upon his breast. Gently she raised the veil from her face, and Emmet turned to gaze on all that earth contained for him—the girl whose sunny brow in the days of boyhood had been his polar star—the maiden who had sometimes made him think "the world was all sunshine." The clanking of the heavy chains sounded like a death-knell to her ear, and she wept like a child. Emmet said but little, yet he pressed her warmly to his bosom, and their feelings held a silent meeting—such, perchance, as is held in heaven, only there we part no more. In a low voice he besought her not to forget him when the cold grave received his inanimate body—he spoke of bygone days—the happy hours of childhood when his hopes were bright and glorious, and he concluded by requesting her sometimes to visit the place and scenes that were hallowed to his memory from the days of his infancy; and should the world pronounce his name with scorn and contempt, he prayed she would still cling to him with affection, and remember him when all others should forget. Hark! the church-bell sounded and he remembered the hour of execution. The turnkey entered, and after dashing the tears from his eyes, he separated them from their long embrace, and led the lady from the dungeon. At the entrance she turned, and their eyes met—they could not say farewell—the door swung on its heavy hinges, and they parted forever. No! not forever! Is there no heaven?

At sunrise next morning he suffered gloriously—a martyr to his country and to liberty.

"And one—o'er her the myrtle showers
Its leaves by soft winds fanned;
She faded 'midst Italian flowers—
That last of that fair band."

"Twas in the land of Italy—what a gorgeous time of sunset in Italy—what a magnificent scene! A pale emaciated girl lay upon her bed of death. Oh! it was hard for her to die, far from home in this beautiful land, where flowers bloom perennial, and the balmy air comes freshly to the dying soul. Oh! no—her star has set! the brightness of her dream had faded—her heart was broken. When ties have been formed on earth—close, burning ties, what is more heart-rending and agonizing to the spirit, than to find at last the beloved one is snatched away, and all our love is given to a "passing flower!" Enough; she died the betrothed of Robert Emmet, the lovely Sarah Curran. Italy contains her last remains—its flowers breathe their fragrance over her grave, and the lulling notes of the shepherd's flute sound a requiem to her memory.

Statistics of Muscular Power.

Man has the power of imitating every motion but that of flight. To effect these, he has, in maturity and health, sixty bones in his thighs and legs, sixty-two in his arms and hands, sixty-seven in his trunk. He has also 434 muscles. His heart makes sixty-four pulsations in a minute; and therefore 3840 in an hour, and 29,160 in a day. There are also three complete circulations of his blood in the short space of an hour. In respect to the comparative speed of animated beings and of impelled bodies, it may be remarked, that size and construction seem to have little influence; nor has comparative strength, altho' one body giving any quantity of motion to another is said to lose so much of its own. The sloth is by no means a small animal, and yet it can travel only 50 paces in a day; a worm crawls only 5 inches in fifty seconds; but a lady-bird can fly twenty million times its own length in an hour. An elk can run a mile and a half in seven minutes, an antelope can run a mile in a minute; the wild mule of Tartary has a speed even greater than that; and an eagle can fly eighteen leagues in an hour; and a canary falcon can reach 250 leagues in the short space of sixteen hours.

Wright's Vegetable Indian Pills.

During the continuance of Storms and Floods, the channels of our obstructed RIVERS become so narrowed as to afford an insufficient outlet for the superabundant waters, we can get nothing less than that the surrounding country will be OVERWHELMED WITH THE FLOOD. In a like manner with the human body—Skin, Kidneys, and Bowels, (the natural outlets for the superabundant humors) become so obstructed as to fail in affording full discharge of those impurities which are the cause of sickness. We surely can expect no other results than that the whole frame will sooner or later be OVERWHELMED WITH DISTRESS. As in the first place, if we would prevent inundation we must remove all obstructions, the free discharge of the superabundant waters. So, in the second place, if we would prevent and cure disease, we must open and keep open all the Natural Drains of the body. WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS. Of the North American College of Health will be found one of the best if not the very best MEDICINE in the world for carrying out this beautiful and simple theory, because they completely cleanse the Stomach and Bowels from all Bilious Humors and other impurities, and at the same time promote healthy discharge from the Lungs, Skin, Kidneys; consequently, as all the Natural Drains are opened, Disease of every name is literally driven from the Body. Caution—As the great popularity consequent great demand for Wright's Vegetable Pills has raised up a host of imitators, country agents and storekeepers will on their guard against the many impostors who are travelling about the country selling of unsuspecting a spurious article for the genuine. It should be remembered that all authentic agents are provided a Certificate of Agency signed by WILLIAM WRIGHT, Vice President of the N. A. College of Health. Consequently, those who offer Indian Vegetable Pills cannot show a Certificate, as above described, will be known as impostors. The following highly respectable Storekeepers have been appointed Agents for the sale of WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, and of whom it is confidently believed that genuine medicine can with certainty be obtained. BRADFORD COUNTY, PA. J. D. & E. D. Montanye, Towanda. D. Brink, P.M., Hornbrook. S. W. & D. F. Pomeroy, Troy. Lyman Durfey, Smithfield. J. J. & C. Warford, Menroeton. Wm. Gibson, Ulster. Ulysses Moody, Asylum. John Horton Jr., Terrytown. Coryell & Gee, Burlington corners. Benjamin Coolbaugh, Canton. L. S. Ellsworth & Co., Athens. Allen & Storrs, Sheshequin. Guy Tracy, Milan. A. J. Soper, Columbia Platts. Offices devoted exclusively to the sale of medicine wholesale and retail, 228 Green street, New York, No. 198 Tremont street, Boston, and 169 Race street, Philadelphia. BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—The public are respectfully informed that medicine purporting to be Indian Pills, made by one T. Falck, are not the genuine Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills. The only security against imposition is the purchase from the regular advertised agents and in all cases be particular to ask for Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills. JERE CULL

SADDLE, HARNESS & TRUNK MANUFACTORY.

HE SUBSCRIBER respectfully informs his old friends and the public generally that he is now carrying on the above business in all its various branches, in the new building occupied by B. Thomas, east of shop, on Main street, nearly opposite S. H. Stephens' shop, where he will be happy to accommodate old and new customers. SADDLES, BRIDLES, MARTINGALS, HARNESS, WHIPS & C. C. of the latest fashion and best materials made to order on moderate terms for ready sale. Most kinds of country produce will be in exchange for work. JERE CULL. April 17, 1844.
