

The Sabbath Bell.

BY JOHN BIRD.

The Sabbath-bell!—how sweetly breathes
O'er hill and dale that hollow sound,
When spring her first bright chaplet weaves
The cotter's humble porch around—
And glimmers round the eaves,
The blossomed bough,—the spiral corn,
Smile o'er the brook that flows between,
As shadowing forth a fairer morn.

The Sabbath-bell!—'tis stillness all,
Save where the lamb's unconscious bleat,
Or the lone wood-dove's plaintive call,
Are mingling with its cadence sweet:
Save where the lark on soaring wing
At heaven's gate pours her matin-song;
Oh! thus shall feathered warbler sing,
Nor man the grateful strain prolong!

The Sabbath-bell!—how soothing flow
Those greetings to the peasant's breast!
Who knows not labor's e'er can know
The blessed calm that sweetens rest!
The day-spring of his pilgrimage,
Who, freed awhile from earthly care,
Turns merrily to a heaven-taught page,
And reads his hope recorded there.

The Sabbath-bell!—yes, not in vain
That bidding on the gale is borne;
Glad respite from the echoing wain,
The sounding axe, the clamorous horn,
Far other thoughts those notes inspire,
Where youth forgets his frolic page,
And maid and matron, son and sire,
Their church-way path together trace.

The Sabbath-bell!—ere yet the peal
In lessening murmurs melt away,
'Tis sweet with reverential step to steal
Where rest around each kindred clay!
Where buried love, and severed friends,
Parent and offspring, prayed the dead,
The tar drop falls—the prayer ascends,
The living muse, and learn to die!

The Sabbath-bell!—'tis silent now
The holy face the throng receives;
The pastor bends his aged brow,
And slowly turns the sacred leaves,
Oh! hest where blending ranks agree
To tread the paths their fathers trod,
To bend alike the willing knee,
One fold before one fostering God!

The Sabbath-bell!—Oh! does not time
In that still voice all-eloquent breath!
How many have listened to that chime,
Who sleep those grassy mounds beneath!
How many of those who listen now
Shall wake its fate-recording knell,
Blessed if none brief hour bestow,
A warning in the Sabbath-bell!

Mrs. Caudle's Curtain Lectures.

Mrs. Caudle "wishes to know if they're going to the Sea-Side, or not, this Summer—that's all."

"Hot! Yes it is hot. I'm sure you might as well be in an oven as in town this weather. You seem to forget it's July, Mr. Caudle. I've been waiting quietly—have never spoken; yet not a word have you said of the sea-side yet. Not that I care for myself—oh no; my health isn't of the slightest consequence. And, indeed, I was going to say—but I won't—that the sooner, perhaps, I'm out of this world, the better. Oh, yes; I dare say you think—of course you do, else you wouldn't lie there saying nothing. You're enough to aggravate a saint, Caudle; but you shan't vex me. No! I've made up my mind; and never intend to let you vex me again. Why should I worry myself?"

"But all I want to ask you is this: do you intend to go to the sea side this summer? Yes, you'll go to Gravesend? Then you'll go to alone, that's all I know. Gravesend? You might as well empty a salt-cellar in the New River, and call that the sea-side. What! It's handy for business? There you are again! I can never speak of taking a little enjoyment, but you fling business into my teeth. I'm sure you never let business in the way of your own pleasure, Mr. Caudle—not you. It would be all the better for your family if you did."

"You know that Matilda wants sea-bathing; you know it, or you ought to know it, by the looks of the child; and yet—I know you Caudle—you'd have let the summer pass over, and never said a word about the matter. What do you say? Margate's so expensive? Not at all! I'm sure it will be cheaper for us in the end; for if we don't go, we shall all be ill—every one of us—the winter. Not that my health is of any consequence; I know that well enough. It never was yet. You eat Margate's the only place that I can eat a breakfast at, and yet you talk of Gravesend! But what's my meaning to you? You wouldn't care if I never eat at all. You never watch my appetite like any other husband, otherwise you'd have seen what it's come to."

"What do you say? How much will it cost? There you are, Mr. Caudle, with your meanness again. When you want to go yourself to Blackwall or to Greenwich, you never ask, how much will it cost? What! You never go to Blackwall? Ha! I don't know that, and if you don't that's nothing at all to do with it. Yes, you can give a guinea a plate for white-bait for yourself. No sir; I'm not a foolish woman; and I know very well what I'm talking about—nobody better. A guinea for white-bait for yourself, when you grudge a pint of shrimps for your poor family. Eh? You don't grudge me anything? Yes, it's very for you to lie there and say so. What will it cost? It's no matter what it will cost, for we won't go at all now. No; we'll stay at home. We shall all be ill in the winter—every one of us; all but you, and nothing ever makes you ill. I've no doubt we shall all be laid up, and there'll be a doctor's bill as long as a railroad; but never mind that. It's better—much better—to pay for nasty physic than for fresh air and wholesome salt water. Don't call me a woman," and ask "what it will cost." I'll tell you, if you were to lay the money down before me on that quilt, I wouldn't go now—certainly not. It's better we should all be sick; yes, then you'll be pleased."

"That's right, Mr. Caudle; go to sleep. It's like your unfeeling self! I'm talking of our all being laid up; and you like any stone, turn round and begin to sleep. Well, I think that's a pretty insult! How can you sleep with such a splinter in you? I suppose you mean to call me the splinter—and after the wife I've been to you! But no, Mr. Caudle, you may call me what you please, oou'll not make me cry now. No, no; I don't throw away my tears upon any such person now. What! Don't? Ha! that's your ingratitude! But none of you men deserve that any woman should love you. My poor heart!

"Everybody else can go to town except us. Ha! if I'd only married Simmons—what! Why didn't I? Yes, that's all the thanks I get. Who's Simmons? Oh, you know very well who Simmons is. He'd have treated me a little better, I think. He was a gentleman. You can't tell? May be not; but I can.—With such weather as this, to stay melting in London! and when the painters are coming in! But you must; and if they once come in, I'm determined that none of us shall stir then.—Painting in July, with a family in the house! We shall all be poisoned, of course; but what do you care for that!"

"Why can't I tell you what it will cost?—How can I or any other woman tell exactly what it will cost! Of course lodgings—and at Margate, too—are a little dearer than living in your own house. Pooh! you know that! Well, if you did, Mr. Caudle, I suppose there's no reason in naming it. Still, if you take 'em for two months, they're cheaper than one. No, Mr. Caudle, I shall not be quite tired of it in one month. No; and it isn't true that I'm sooner get out than I want to get home again. To be sure, I was tired of Margate three years ago, when you used to leave me to walk about the beach by myself, to be stared at by all sorts of telescopes. But you don't do that again, Mr. Caudle. I can tell you."
"What will I do at Margate? Why isn't there bathing, and picking up shells; and aren't there the packets, with the donkeys; and the last new novel—whatever it is, to read—for the only place where I really enjoy a book is at the sea-side. No, it isn't that I like salt in my reading, Mr. Caudle! I suppose you call that a joke? You might keep your jokes for the day time, I think. But as I was saying—only you always interrupt me—the ocean always seems to me to open the mind. I see nothing to laugh at; but you always laugh when I say anything. Sometimes at the sea-side—especially when the tide's down—I feel so happy; quite as if I could cry."
"When shall I get the things ready? For next Sunday? What will it cost? Oh, there—don't talk of it. No; we won't go, I shall send for the painters, to-morrow. What! I can go and take the children, and you'll stay? No, sir; you go with me, or I don't stir. I'm not going to be turned loose like a hen with her chickens, and nobody to protect me. So we'll go on Monday? Eh?"

"Anything for a chance of peace," writes Caudle. "I consented to the trip, for I tho't I might sleep better in a change of bed."
Dr. Fuller's Councils.

Be not too free and open in conversation, however pleasant thou mayest seem to company; perhaps they may condemn thee, and mischief thee too afterwards.
Look not before thee, behind thee, and on every side, when thou speakest; nor be in so great fear to be taken in thy words, that thou darrest not tell what o'clock 'tis, if one ask thee.
Beware of being too much obliged by great men. They will be apt to impose hardships upon thee. It may prove such a slavery as thou canst not easily get out of.
If thou carelessly or willfully disappoint another, thou must do him damage. But at the same time thou hurtest thyself more; for thou sellest thy credit to redeem thy uneasiness.
Keep thy distance to superiors, in such a manner as to be rather beloved than slighted, and seem to walk rather humbly than sneakingly with them.
Endeavor not to make mighty appearances, and seem better, greater and wiser than thou really art; lest thou be examined, and stripped, and rendered less than thou shouldst be.
Know the secrets of thy estate; how much thou art able, and how much thou oughtest to spend. But live not at the utmost; save something to pay for misfortunes.
Provide against the beginnings of evils; for those disorders which at first are but little gather something in tract of time, and grow unmanageable.
Speak not ill of any; if thou doest it in his absence, it's the property of a base coward to stab a man behind his back; if to his face, 'tis adding affront to scandal.
It's more prudent to pass by trivial offences, than to quarrel for them. By the last perhaps thou wilt not be even with thy adversary; but by the first thou art above him.
Exercise thyself in the expectation of evils; so while the mind pleases itself in thinking I am not thus yet, it prepareth itself against it may be so.
Be well advised who thou enterest in friendship with. Cowardice will betray it, covetousness will starve it, folly will lose it, passion is apt to ruffle, and pride will abuse and neglect it.
Establish not thy discourse by authority, huffing, or laying of wagers. No man loves to be topped upon, but will judge thy passion is high, because thy reason is low.
Be not inconsiderately eager of getting thyself out of a scrape, cost what it will; this may easily hamper thee worse. The fish, by struggling in the net, entangles itself more.
Life is short; but comfort thou thyself with this, the fewer thy days are in number, the fewer shall be thy troubles, and the sooner shalt thou arrive at happiness.
In the committing of evil, fear not man so much as thy own self. Another is but one witness against thee; thou art a thousand.—Another thou mayest avoid, but thyself thou canst not.
If thou intendest to deny a request, take time to do it in; for commonly, when the first heat of desire is over, the rigor of a denial is taken with indifference.
WOMAN.—Woman is sheltered by fond arms and loved counsel; old age is protected by its experience, and manhood by its strength; but the young man stands amid the temptations of the world like a self-balanced power—and happy he who seeks and gains the hope of immortality.
FORGETTING HER.—"John, I fear you are forgetting me," said a bright-eyed girl to her sweetheart, the other day.
"Yes, Sues, I have been for getting you these two years!"
