

Close of the Year.

This is the last day of the year 1845. We extend to the patrons of the Reporter our heartfelt wishes for their happiness and prosperity during the new year.

An Ocean Bound Republic.

Since the issuing of our last, the arrival of the steamship Acadia, has furnished us with later and important intelligence from England.

Newspaper Arrangements.

ABEL TURNER informs the patrons of the Northern Democrat, that his connection with that paper closes with the present volume, he having disposed of his interest to Mr. O. G. Hempstead.

J. W. GRAYMAN, long the Editor of the "Susquehanna Register" is about to enjoy a cessation of his labors having disposed of the Register to a young man who has been some time employed in the establishment.

J. P. MAGILL, of the "Tioga Eagle," announced that new arrangements were to be made in that office.

MARRIED, in Tioga, Pa., on the 4th inst., by Rev. S. J. McCullough, Col. Jas. P. Magill editor of the "Tioga Eagle," to Miss Sarah Eliza, daughter of James Goodrich, Esq., of Tioga.

Whatever other arrangements it may be necessary to make, we wish you, Colonel, all-manner of felicity and happiness; and congratulate you, at least upon the name you have selected.

Judge of the Supreme Court.

We learn by a letter from Harrisburg, that intelligence had been received there, of the nomination by the President, of the Hon. GEORGE W. WOODWARD, of Luzerne county, in the state, to the office of Associate Judge, on the Bench of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The nomination had been confirmed by the Senate. Of the persons named heretofore, as likely to be considered by the President, we had avowed our preference for JOHN M. KEAN, Esq., of Philadelphia—a lawyer of distinguished ability, and a gentleman without reproach.

Mr. Woodward is a young man, he has distinguished himself as an able jurist; and is known to possess in an eminent degree, all those high moral and intellectual qualities, which are requisite in the elevated post he has been placed in nomination as U. S. Senator for this state.

It is the general sentiment that the Americans wish for war, and with the blessings of God upon a good cause, they shall have enough of it. Never since the United States has become a nation, was there in Europe a desire more reasonable, and at the same time more agreeable, than that of giving the Americans a drubbing.

We agree with the former, and believe if war should ensue between the two countries, it would be a short war and a decisive war; and the London Morning Post has put forth the following paragraph which can be taken as a sample of the tone and candor of the British press.

"It is the general sentiment that the Americans wish for war, and with the blessings of God upon a good cause, they shall have enough of it. Never since the United States has become a nation, was there in Europe a desire more reasonable, and at the same time more agreeable, than that of giving the Americans a drubbing."

And there were those engaged in the Canadian rebellion whose impulses were as holy, and whose conduct as sincere as that of the defenders of our dear-bought freedom. Has the course of England toward that colony been liberal, high-minded, and maternal? Her condition, her perhaps, been ameliorated by the proximity to this country, but the same arrogant, haughty and tyrannical policy has been extended to her, as was meted out to that nation while under the protection of the mother country.

And if Oregon must be defended, American citizens will cheerfully take up their arms, and fight the battles of their country.

"There are a million muskets ready for use in our various arsenals," says a contemporary, and we add, there are a million hearts burning with indignation at the usurpations of Britain, and a million hands to wield the utensils of war.

"This is the arm of which he hath his quarrel just." And if Oregon must be defended, American citizens will cheerfully take up their arms, and fight the battles of their country.

Proceedings of the 29th Congress.

[Correspondence of the Bradford Reporter.] WASHINGTON, Dec. 22, 1845.

There is nothing of interest going on here, nor will there be, till after the holidays. The joint resolution which passed the house some days ago, for the admission of Texas, by a vote 151 to 56, was this day passed by the Senate 31 to 13.

The house to-day elected a Chaplain. The choice fell upon a young man of the Methodist persuasion. He happened to be on a boat in company with many of the West and South Western members, on the way here, and preached to the members on the boat on Sunday, and they urged him to come on to Washington and Webster, before the Session terminates. His friends say that he is looking very well.

[Correspondence of the Pennsylvania.] WASHINGTON, Dec. 20, 1845.

GENTLEMEN—I am well pleased, on looking over the Pennsylvania of this morning, to find that you have not given credence to the idle rumors of the day in relation to the Oregon question. There is not one word of truth in the report which is spreading far and wide that negotiations are renewed.

Mr. Douglas, from the Committee on Territories, reported a bill to protect the rights of American citizens in Oregon, until the termination of the joint occupation of the same. It was read twice, referred to the Committee of the Whole, and the order of the day for the second Tuesday in January, and every day thereafter, until finally disposed of.

Arrival of the Steam Ship Acadia.

The steamship Acadia arrived at Boston on Friday last, bringing fifteen days later news from Europe.

The advices from Liverpool are to the 4th, London to the 3d, and Paris to the 1st inst, inclusive.

The intelligence, in every point of view, is important.

The temporary war panic in England, on the Oregon question—the effect it produced in France—the opinion of the press relative to a war—the scarcity of food in Great Britain—the commercial crisis—the railway panic—the frequent cabinet councils—and, finally, the peaceful aspect which the opinion in England assumed, on the early part of this month—are all important.

There had been a considerable comparative decline in Cotton—a fall in flour—and a depression in the money market.

The iron market was still active and buoyant though prices had somewhat receded.

The American provision market partakes, to some extent, of the reaction which has been recently witnessed.

The general state of trade in Manchester was much depressed.

The railway panic has not subsided. On the contrary, it was in full force.

The extent of the potato crop has sustained, forms, as usual, an unfailing subject of inquiry and anxiety. The accounts are, upon the whole, of a sad and melancholy character.

There was not much news stirring in Germany; the religious excitement continues, and in Switzerland, there will again be fighting this winter. Food was scarce and high, and all this leads to make the people emigrate to the United States, where they are permitted to choose their own road to Heaven, and have plenty to eat.

Accounts have been received from New Zealand of another defeat of the British by the natives.

The new religion of Rongue continues to make progress in all directions. The church of Rome, now thoroughly frightened, is taking measures to oppose it.

The New York Herald, of Saturday, says:—The news by the steamer Acadia, is highly important, both in a political and in a commercial view.

The news is favorable to peace and the settlement of the Oregon question, but bad and gloomy on the state of the market and money affairs.

The intelligence received in England, relative to the discussions in this country of the Oregon question, and the statement put forth by the Washington Union, had created quite a war panic there for a week. It had subsided at the last accounts—and there was a general expression in the press, that if Mr. Polk had offered the forty-ninth parallel, it ought to have been accepted. It is also said that the refusal of such an offer must have been caused by the influence of the Hudson Bay Company, at the expense of the other and greater commercial interests of England with the United States.

The English press is far more moderate on the question than was expected, and the French press still more so—yet there is still a talk and show in England of army and naval preparations. We have reason to believe, however, that when the President's late message, and the correspondence of Messrs. Buchanan and Pakenham, shall have been well perused in England the press generally will be astonished at the folly of Mr. Pakenham, in refusing the offer of the 49th parallel—and will attribute such refusal to the selfishness of the Hudson's Bay Company, who would sacrifice a whole people to their own little interests. This feeling will be increased by the liberal views of Mr. Polk on the tariff, which is caught at eagerly in England.

On the whole, the news is highly favorable for the continuance of peace, and the peaceful settlement of the Oregon difficulty, unless the views of our government on California may create a jealousy in the British government.

In commercial affairs, matters are gloomy enough, and bad enough. There is now no doubt of a general scarcity in England and Ireland—and of a speedy change in the corn laws. The League is making tremendous efforts—Lord John Russell and Lord Morpeth are both out against the monopoly.—The Parliament will probably meet in January, when a terrible fight will take place on the subject.
