Halfway up the stairs it stands, And points, and beckons with its hands From its case of massive oak, Like a monk, who under his cloak, Crosses himself, and aighs, alas ! With sorrowful voice to all who pass,-" Forever-never !

Never-forever !"

Never-forever !"

By day its voice is low and light; But in the silent dead of night, Distinct as passing footsteps fall, It echoes along the vacant hall, Along the ceiling, along the floor-And seems to say at each chamber door-" Forever-never ! Never-forever !"

Through days of sorrow and of mirth, Through days of death and days of birth, Through every swift vicissitude Of changeful time, unchanged it has stood, And as if, like God, it all things saw, It calmiy repeats those words of awe,-

"Forever-never! Never-forever !"

In that mansion used to he Free hearted Hospitality; His great fires up the chimney roared; The stranger feasted at his board; But, like the skeleton at the feast, That warning timepiece never ceased-" Forever-never ! Never-forever !"

There groups of merry children played, There youth and maidens dreaming strayed; O precious hours! O golden prime, An affluence of love and time! Even as a miser counts his gold. Those hours the ancient timepiece told-" Forever-never !

Never-forever !" From that chamber, clothed in white, The bride came forth on her wedding night : There in that silent room below. The dead lay in his shroud of snow; And in the hush that followed the prayer Was heard the old clock on the stair,-

" Forever-never! Never-forever ! All are scattered now and fled, Some are married, some are dead ; And when I ask, with throbs of pain, " Ah! when shall they all meet again ?" As in the days long since by, The ancient timepiece makes reply,-

" Forever-never ! Never-forever !" Never here, forever there, When all parting, pain and care, And death-time shall disappear,-Forever there, but never here ! The horologe of Eternity

Sayeth this incessantly,-" Forever-never ! Never-forever !"

Quick Germination.

As a genral rule, it will be found that a seed planted in such a manner to ensure a quick ment afterwards, will give the most vigorous plants, and the most abundant returns to the cultivator. On this fact depends most of the benefits of manuring, and the difference also which results from the application of manuring. germination, and a sufficient supply of nourishwhich results from the application of manures | Bowman A R at different times. No seed requires to be bu- Bishop Eliza Miss 2 ried deeper than is necessary to ensure moisture, and exclusion from light. If buried so deep that the nutritive matter of the seed is exhausted (and that alone forms the first and most Brosmon John important supply of food) before the shoot Cummings Harry reaches the air, or the root the manure intend. ed for its use, life may be continued, but in a Curtis Lawrence state fatal to a good product. The experience of turnip growers, or those who sow small seeds to any extent, will show the correctness of the Carman Charles above rules. If the manure is covered so deep that the roots must have a growth of weeks before they reach a proper supply of nourishment, the plants will be feeble, their growth slow, and a check will be given from which the plant rarely recovers. If on the contrary, Dodge Oliver the seeds are lightly covered, and the manure fine and mixed with the earth in which the Eveland Abro seeds are deposited, the growth will be rapid, and the impulse given at first is rarely lost in Foreman Daniel the growth of the plant. Bone manure has Guyer E long been celebrated for the rapidity with which | Gregg Frances it brought forward crops to which it was ap-plied. The fact that it was drilled in with the seeds, and therefore placed in contact with Hall DR them, or in the position where its influence would be most sensibly felt in giving a rapid Hagar Daniel and vigorous germination, was for a while Hine Henry W overlooked, and virtues were attributed to the substance, that in a great measure belonged to Hathaway I Hollenback Peter the mode of using. The more thoroughly decomposed ordinary manure is, the quicker will its influence be felt on the young plant; and it is found that sown in drills with wheat or turnips, it is not inferior to bone dust in promoting a speedy and vigorous germination.—
The philosophical experiments of Davy showed that the most benefit would be derived from manures if used in a fresh or long state; and the decomposition of vegetable matters, or the preparation of compost was for a while abandoned, and the manure deposited as recommended by the philosopher. Experience soon showed, however, that while the soil was made better by the use of undecomposed materials, there were some crops to which the theory was not analicable; but that where a quick growth mot applicable; but that where a quick growth was indispensable, manure in the state that size immediate nourishment was to be pregives immediate nourishment was to be preferred. Thus, in Great Britain the use of rotted or compost manure for turnips has again become almost universal; unless in those districts where good management has rendered the soil already fertile and rich, that the immediate effect of the mannre used is not required to the perfection of the crop sown. Farmers, therefore, in the preparation and use of their manures should be governed by the nature and condition of the soil to which it is to be applied, and the plant which it is intended to nourish. THERE are 1555 newspapers and periodicals against the Cashier & Co. of the Towands Savings Bank, fer selling goods too cheap, and thereby bringing leanness upon the "Merchant Princes" of the
