Labor's Thanksgiving Hymn. BT MISS MARY HOWITT. That I must work, I thank thee, God-! I know that hardship, toil and pain, Like rigorous winter in the sod, Which doth mature the tardy grain, Call forth in man his noblest powers ;-Therefore I hold my head erect, And amid life's severest hours, Stand steadfast in my self-respect. I thank thee, God, that I must toil ! Yon ermined slave of lineage high. The game-law lord who owns the soil, Is not so free a man as I ; He wears the fetters of his clan ; Wealth, birth and rank have hedged him in, I heed but this, that I am wAN. And to the great in mind akin ! Thank God that like the mountain oak, My lot is with the storms of life, Strength grows from out the tempert's shock ; And patience in the daily strife. The horny hand, the furrowed brow, Degrade not, howe'er sloth may seem ; 'T is this degrades,-to eringe and bow, And ape the vice we disesteem. Thank God for toil, for hard-hip, whence Come courage, patience, hardihood, And for that sad experience Which leaves our bosom flesh and blooJ ; Which leaves us tears for other's woe ! Brother in toil, respect thyself ; And let thy steadfast virtue show That man is nobler far than pelf? Thank God for toil; n r fear the face Of wealth nor rank ; fear only sin, That blight which mars all outward grace, Give me thy hand, my brother, give Thy hand and toil strained hand to me : We are not dreamers, we shall live

A Golden Chapter on Farming.

[CONCLUDED.] In making a choice of land for farming, let it be a rule to prefer a gently sloping surface, or level, to hilly and irregular surface is very great, independant of other disadvantages; and if then, it should be at a proportionately low rental. It possible, select land that lies with an easy slope to the South; though if well sheltere J, the inclination in other directions is of little consequence. If the land require drainage, or be exposed to heavy rains, observe if there be sufficient inclination to carry off the water, If there be no lower point to which of stable dung he piled into a heap, and freely exposed to all varieties of wheather, it soon the water may be conveniently drawn ; avoid the risk of taking the land, for this defect in its character will prove a frequent source of trouble and loss.

Land on the banks of a running stream is likely to be more salubrious for crops than that which is near sluggish brooks or dull sedgy lakes. From dull inert waters there arise, in certain conditions of the atmosphere, heavy be in appearance nearly as much substace, but it is comparatively of little value-the real pernicious vapors, which steal along the surface of the adjacent ground, and tend to blight and otherwise injure the crops. These waters, also, are a fertile hot-bed of insects. Runing waters purify the air, and are of great advantage for cattle. See, however, that the land is not or thought of as that which has been now liable to be flooded in winter for a contingency mentioned. We therefore crave the most of that nature should cause a diminution in value. All lands are more lessor infested with weeds the excrementitious matters thrown to the which are of no value either for ornament or dong-hill are treated with perfect indifference use ; on the contrary, they injure the crops by extracting the neurishment from the ground, as to the effects of exposure and drainage away and greatly impede cultivation by spreading in the form of liquids. It cannot be too their entangled roots beneath the surface. The manure deposited on the soil is designed excluively for the support of what is meant to be raised, and every useless plant, therefore which lives upon it, is so far noxious, and ought to be extirnated. Hence the common maxim. " A qualities. farmer should let nothing grow but his crops."

As prevention is always better than, cure the farmer should begin by preventing the growth of weeds. The seeds from which weeds spring are brought in some manner to the land from somewhere. Try to cut off the vicious produce at its source. Let all bawks or natural embank-

The more common of these various weeds are the wild out, the common thistle, dock, coltsfoot, ragweed, dent-deleon, and chorlock or wild mustard, the latter particularly. To these is to be added that most tormenting weed, chugh grass or rack, which spreads its long cord-like roots beneath the surface, weaving the soil into a kind of matting, Annuals and biennials may be partially extirpated by a wellwrought summer fallow, or, if the soil be light, by the culture of potatoes or turnips, for the land in that case is well cleaned and dressed in spring, as well as hoed in summer. Handhoeing for this pupose is sometimes necessary. It, however, no ordinary process of teasing and cleaning the land extirpate the weeds, the more tellious and expensive operations of pulling must resorted to. This will be absolutely necessary for the extirpation of chorlock, that flowering yellow weed which tinges the fields with its brilliant lustre in summer. It is impossible to say what description of character is most to be recommended or approved, because it is often found that men of a particular character will succeed to admiration in a position for which our previous knowledge would have us to consider them as unfit : while others whom we should have deemed the very best adapted to certain situations, are found to be singularly unsuccessful and unfortunate in them. That aptitude which men exhibit for different departments of businese, is what they either possess naturally, or what they have ac quired by a regular course of training. The quired by a regular course of training. The reason why one man succeeds better than an-other in a particular situation, is, no doubt in plain language, that he is better fitted for it; not that he is a better man of business; for, in point of fact, there may be a very great difference in the degree of their business qualifications, and even in the rectitude and integrity of their re-spective characters—but simply because his course.
