crossing the Hackensack bridge, near Neurit k, in the railroad car, in company with Governor D. of New lersey, that gentleman observed that he had with nessed a remarkable incident on that spot. He was in a stage-cosch with some eight or nine passens as tage-cosch with some eight or nine passens of the bridge at this point, one of the former remarkable that one evening thirty years before, he had been crossing the river at the very spot, in a stage-been crossing the river at the very spot at the very in a stage-coach with some eight or nine passengers, male and female, and as they were crossing the bridge at this point, one of the former remarks. been crossing the river at the very spot, in a stagecoach filled with passengers as now; that the bridge as it then existed was, a miserable rickety old structure, ready to fall on the least provocation: that the waters of the river were at that time very much swollen in consequence of a sudden freshet: and that when the coach got about midway on the bridge, one of the supporters gave way, precipita, ting all hands in to the dark and rapid waters. Af or great ado, however, the passengers all reached the shore, with the exception of a little infant, which had been swept from its mother's arms in the strugrle, and which now seemed irrecoverably gone.-The hearts of the passengers, however, were too deeply touched by gratitude for their own escape, and sympathy for the bereaved mother, to allow of their remaining inactive; and those of them accordingly who could swim, plunged again into the flood to make a thorough search for at least the lifeless body of their little companion.

The parrator himself was so fortunate as to grasp it by the clothes, at some distance from the place of the accident, and on taking it into the house and instituting active measures for its recovery, it soon gladdened all hearts by opening its eyes and recognizing the face of the now overjoyed mother. The gentleman narrated the little history with a smile of righteous satisfaction at the part he had played in it: but he had scarcely concluded, said Governor D, before one of the ladies of our company begged him to excuse the liberty she was about to take. in asking him if his name was not Mr. So and So ? "It is," replied the other. "Then rejoined the lady "I was the Infant whom you rescued My mother always remembered the name of the deliverer of her child, and taught the child always to remember it. But it is only now after an interal of thirty years from the time of the event. and here on the very spot where it occurred, that the child finds an opportunity of telling her deliverer how faithfully that name has been cherished." So unexpected a denoument as this, said Gov. D. filled us all with the liveliest and most joyful surprise and I am sure that every one in the coach at the time will remember that journey as the most agreeable he ever n ade.—The Harbinger. 1

This place is full; there are more strangers now a this borough than have been here at any one ame since the recharter of the United States Bank The Democratic Convention to be held to-morrow will have a very full attendence. I have never seen more canvassing and caucusing than have been going on for some days past. A majority of he members are uninstructed. but those instructed with a portion of the uninstructed, for Mr. Buchanan. fill make a decided majority, and the convention will instruct in his favor. The contest will be about delegates. The Buchanan men claim to elect them y a general ticket, and that the majority of the convention shall prescribe them all. This will be resisted as being contrary to the established usage of this and other States and it will be claimed that they shall be elected by districts and un ess this is done the convention ma end in a grand row. It is reported here that Mr. Dallas has declined, but this is wholly incorrect. It is probable that he has written to some friend, recommending concession, unon and harmony-at least I judge such to be its lenor; but beyond this there is no truth in the report. Mr Buchanan's friends do not expect his mination by the National Convention, but they em to be anxious that he should have some say nd influence as to who shall be the candidate, and on to Mr. Buchanan is very decided and deter-

Died,

In this boro' on Tuesday morning the 29th ult. of pulmonary consumption, Mr. HIRAM MERCUR, aged twenty six years.

The death of Mr. M. has saddened many a heart in this community. He had been reared in our midst; and by the many endearing qualities of his heart and mind, had unconsciously won the respect, and esteem of all who knew him-the aged-the middle aged and the youth. He was, indeed, adorned with all the virtues, which secure warm friend ship and high social influence. To a character of spotless integrity, a cultivated intellect, and refined taste, he added the agreeable qualities of a gentle temper, warm affections, and a cheerful flow of spirits that won and captivated, and brightened the circle which fondly gathered around him.

The prospects for life were bright before him ! Hope bid high for the future! But the brightest morning is often soonest overcast! Too close and constant application to business gradually undermined his health and constitution; and ere he was aware of the approaching danger, the anxiety of his friends was awakened and in the autumn of 1846 he was advised by his physician to travel to the south in the hope that a more genial climate would renovate and re-establish his health. Accordingly he spent the last winter at the Island of St. Croix, and Carraccas, S. A. He returned to his native, place, at the opening of the last summer without having experienced any benefit to his health. The insidious enemy had too firmly fastened his grasp, and neither medical skill nor the endearing attention of relatives and friends could relieve the sufferer from the certainty of impending fate.-Through the slow progress of a gradual disease he humbly bowed to the mandate of his Creator, and, nined, though not united in favor of any one. If without complaining, awaited in placil resignation here is dissension the pieces will not be united for the summons of his Divine Father, whose lessons he had sought to follow, and upon whose mercy and the new styles dress goods all st No. 2, Brick Row.
