the people now wants only the direct sanction of the popular vote. This will be given in a few months, for the people, who have always elected Governors, are now determined to see whether their judgment as to judicial fitness is not sounder than that of one of their public servants. This ex-feriment should have a fair trial, even from its op ponents, and both parties should present for the vaponents, and come parties attend present to the various judicial stations, men of approved honesty of file, of ripe legal knowledge, of excellent sense, and firmness of purpose. If public opinion is consulted, there can be no difficulty on that point; but, mill creek, thence easterly by land of Horace Spalds. mere partizan qualifications are looked to, their the party that nominates such men, must and will fail, for the people will not knowingly vote for a Judge, whose character and talents they cannot respect. No man can be elected a Judge, whose pinions upon great constitutional questions are not believed by the people to be sound. This is an axiom, which it will be well for all aspirants, and paricularly for such of our present judges, as desire an election, to fix it in their minds!

We will not specify more than one of these great questions, upon which the people must and will be satisfied before they can the judicial ermine upon any man's shoulders: We refer to the plain and simple question of the power of Congress over the territo ries of the United States, and their right to prohibit the curse of slavery from being extended to them Upon this point, Pennsylvania, conforming to the opinions and acts of all branches of the general government, has always entertained but one sentinent and but one opinion, and the answer to the question will, therefore, be a perfectly easy one -No qualified evasion will do; there must be a prompt and decided reply, in a manty and frank manner. We would say, therefore, to all the present Judges, and to a't those who hope to be Judges to be ready with your answer; for we are firmly convinced that the people of Pennsylvania will never I laced in Judicial stations men, who are not openly and sternly opposed to the extension of slavery devond its present limits.
