Hauling out Manure.-If you have not done so already, you should without further delay haul your manure out upon your ground intended for com.-Previously to doing so, however, if you command it, mix one bushel of plaster with every 20 doublehorse cart loads of the manure. If not prepared to er read and plough your manue in as you may haul if out, distribute it in such conical piles will give you twenty loads to each acre, so that as little loss as possible may ensue from rains, and from the evo perations of the atmosphere. It would be a good disposition of time to cover your manure piles with the surrounding mould, should it be necessary to let it remain for some days, but it this cannot be done, it will be well to press the piles with the back of your shovels, so as to turn the rain, and as far as may be, arrest fermentation in the heaps.

Outs-This grain, if not already seeded, should be put in with all possible speed as the crop should be set sufficiently early to have time to mature before the intense heats and droughts of late summer, it being a well established that that the early sown oats variably make the most and best grain. But unless there be subsistance in the soil to sustain and nurture the plants, unless the elements of fertility be therein, present to encourage the growth of the plant and claborate the berry no teasonable grower of this grain should expect a good crop.

Manuring .- If the field on which you intend to pitch your outcrop is a poor one, you may insure yourself a fair yield, by either of the following composts. The quantities are intended for an acre. ! Ten loads of marsh mud, 10 bushels of lime and 10 bushels of ashes, to be thoroughly mixed together, spread broulleast and ploughed in. 2. Ten loads of wood mould and leaves, or pine shatters, 10 bushels of lime and 10 bushels of ashes to be treated as above. 3 Ten loads of stable or barn vard manure, to bushels of ashes, and I bushel of plaster. 4. 8 bushels of bone-earth, 10 bushels of ushes, and I bushel of plaster, to be mixed together and suffered to remain in a heap until the mass be comes heated, then to be spread and ploughed in -Either of these diessing would not only insure a fair crop of oats, but enable you to sow clover seed with your oats, with the surety of getting a fair stand of clover; which, if limed next fall, at the rate of 25 bushels to the acre, would be the means of carrying your field forward to a state of desirable fertility. 5. 300 pounds of Guano and I bushel of plaster, will also give you a good cropsof oats, besides enabling you to sow clover with your oats; your clover must be limed next fall, as stated above

Soils -Oats will grow on any good soils, best or grass swards or clover lays. In these latter, however, the worm is frequently destructive to the young out plants; this may be prevented by sowing broadcast 2 bushel of salt per acre.

Preparation of the ground -Plough deep, and thoroughly pulvenze by harrowing and rolling. Quantity of seed per acre - Sow 2 hashels of seed to the acre, and be sure to sow good, heavy, well cleaned oats. If your soil be really fertile, or you should manure it generously. 3 bushels of seed will be better than 2. After sowing your seed and har-

Barley -- If you have a good strong loamy field or lot that would grow a good crop of cers, seed it to barley, being sure to plough and pulverize it sical affections, they are very valuable, and should be in every family. They have an outside conting of well. 2 bushels of seed to the acre is about the pure White Sugar, whereby everything disagreeable to barley, being sure to plough and pulverize it right quantity. It you desire to get it into clover, to the faste or smell as entirely removed, without in the dress it with, say, 10 bushels of ashes and 8 of bone-rowing the ground, then complete your work by

Root Culture .- If there be any of our readers who intend to cultivate roots as winter food for their milch cows and other stock, to such we would take this early opportunity of saying that they should commence at once to prepare the manure, as all roots delight most in such manures as are well brohen down in the fibre by decomposition. Composts formed of marsh mud, road scrapings, earth from headlands, woods mould, and barnyard or stable manure, answer admirably for such culture. The proportion of barnvard or stable manure should form from one-third to one-half of the body of the compost; which, when formed, should be worked over every ten days or two weeks, to let in the air, make the mixture more equable, and excite to more general fermentation and decay of the component ligneous parts. In the selection of kinds of roots for culture, the carrot, parsnip, mangle wurtzcl, sugar beet and reta baga, should all be attended to. The first of these, besides being peculiarly adapted for the food of mileli cows, is most excel lent to be used as an afterative food for horses, ter ding, as it does, to loosen the hide, improve the coat and general appearance of the latter animals. all of the above named roots, if given to milch their long feed, greatly adds to their powers of se-and our present purpose is to inform other thousands, creting milk through the winter, and while it increases the quantity yielded, improves its quality.

The four first named roots should be drilled in during the month of May, or very early, say during the first week in June ; the latter will answer to be seeded any time in the month of June, or during the first week in July: so far as quality of product is concerned, the earlier the Letter, in the designa ted months.

· We have given a formula for a compost above : but will here remark that a good dressing of any well rotted manure will answer, and that is power of prolonged benefit will be greatly increased by mix'ure with plaster, in the proportion of I'bushel to every 20 double horse cart loads of the composi or rotten manure; and we will farther add, that 200 lbe. of guano and 1 bus. of plaster per sere, mixed together, will ensure a remunerating crop of roots -so, also, will 10 bushels of bone earth, an equal quantity of ashes, and one bushel of plaster.

RECLAIMING CLAY LANDS .- An English agricultu rel writer says the present tilling system as practised by scientific men in England, is doubless an immense improvemen on the system in vogue twenty years ago-" but of all the discoveries of stiff stubborn clays into a friable mould, through the means of thorough draining, double trenching, or sub-soiling, is by far the greatest. And if we consider fully the greatest importance of it, the enormous benefit it has conferred on landed proprietors, the great change it has effected on the face of the country, and the complete revolution it has made in the whole farming practice, we cannot be too thankful to Mr. Smith, of Deanston, the author of it."

In Bilous Complaints, these Pills exercise a complete mastery. Hence Fever and Ague is speedily cured by of them. In the Western and Southern States where this disease mostly prevails, these Pills go like an avalanche. While they are cheaper than the fever and agge remedies in general, Wrights Indian Vegeta-ble Pills have been pronounced superior to all of them. Indeed, it would appear that if there is one complaint over which these Pills have more power than another il is Pever and Ague.

For destroying and expelling Worms, no Vermifuge to these Pills. Although we have not taken pains to nake this fact public, the merit of the medicine itself has acquired for it an extensive reputation and sale for the removal of Worms.
